House Group To Act on Bill Barring OGR Center Funds

Lanham Discloses Plan; Measure Bans Use of U. S. Buildings Money for New Unit

The House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee soon will begin hearings on a Congressional joint resolution, introduced yesterday, designed to withhold funds from the Office of Government Reports for its information center, rapidly being built on Pennsylvania Avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets Northwest.

Chairman Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, announced last night the committee will take up the resolution in the near future, although he declined to specify the time or the scope of its considerations.

Meanwhile, with criticism of the project growing in both Houses of Congress, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, announced that Lowell Mellett, OGR director, has been requested to appear Friday before the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures, to "explain" the reason for construction of the $500,000 structure.

Senator Byrd, the committee chairman, emphasized that Mellett has been summoned at the behest of several committee members besides himself.

Introduced by Satterfield

The Congressional joint resolution was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Satterfield (Democrat), of Virginia.

It specifies that "no money heretofore appropriated by the Congress shall be used for the acquisition, construction and equipment of any building for the Office of Government Reports unless the Congress specifically authorizes the use of such money for such purposes."

In effect, it would freeze the OGR's freedom of action in borrowing money from lump-sum funds at the disposal of the Public Buildings Administration without the express permission of Congress.

Representative Satterfield declared as he introduced the resolution yesterday that the new information center "is in my judgment in no way related to the war effort."

"We are stewards of the taxpayers' money," he told the House. "We administer a sacred trust for the armed forces of the country."

Byrd in Accord

"I do not believe that such a bureau will make any contribution to the useful dissemination of information, and besides there is a definite choice here as between information for visitors who come to Washington and the procurement of instruments of war. I choose tanks, planes and ships—not information."

Senator Byrd declared he was "thoroughly in accord" with the Satterfield resolution.

In a floor speech late yesterday Representative Dirksen (Republi-

Ickes' Gasoline Rationing Plan Expected Today

Plans to ration gasoline in the East may be announced today by Petroleum Coordinator Ickes.

Necessity for taking immediate action to curtail gasoline sales in the 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia because of the critical supply situation is stressed in a report to Ickes submitted Monday by a special industry committee.

Pending operation of the rationing plan, the report is understood to recommend stop-gap steps should be taken to reduce gasoline and light fuel oil consumption.

Reports indicated Ickes and Deputy Coordinator Ralph K. Davies would ask for a 25 per cent reduction immediately in deliveries of gasoline.

Eden Discloses Jap Barbarities

London, March 10 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that the Japanese army committed wholesale atrocities in Hongkong, among them the bayoneting to death of 50 shackled British soldiers and the rape and murder of women, both European and Asiatic.

Manufacturer Unit Asks Tax 'To the Limit'

By the Associated Press

New York, March 10.—The National Association of Manufacturers today proposed taxation "to the limit—leaving only enough for survival" and will offer its detailed plan to Congress tomorrow.

The N. A. M. made the announcement after a joint meeting of its executive and finance committee.

The chairman of the latter group, J. Cheever Cowdin, who is also chairman of the board of Universal Pictures Corporation, issued this statement:

"It is the sense of this committee representing 80 per cent of the Nation's war production manufacturers that all corporations and individuals with income should be taxed to the maximum of their ability to pay for the terrific burden of this war.

"All income over and above that needed to keep our business structure alive and intact should be taxed to the limit—leaving only enough for survival—in order to guarantee the victorious prosecution of the war, to eliminate profiteers and to insure the future solvency of our Government."

More Conversion Of Government Also Demanded By County Chiefs

Men from the Grass Roots, representing 400 typical American counties have been in Washington for two days. They represent Mr. Average American. They are a breath of fresh air in a turgid atmosphere. Read how they stand on our prosecution of war.

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Four hundred county officials—men and women from the "grass roots of government" in 30 States—roared unanimous approval yesterday of proposals for wartime operation of the American commonwealth.

Vice President Wallace asked the group to make suggestions and constructive criticism of governmental processes. They obliged with these resolutions:

1. That a fair and equitable ceiling be immediately placed on wages, profits, rents, farm prices and commodity prices so that ruinous inflation be avoided.

2. That immediate action be taken to prohibit and prevent strikes and selfish profiteering or any other action of employer or employe to interfere with war production.

3. That immediate action be taken to suspend the 40-hour week to whatever extent necessary to win the war.

4. That governmental peacetime functions, national, State and local, should be curtailed and converted where possible to war purposes and that under no circumstances is there an excuse for the continuation or extension of such functions under the guise of war needs.

5. That discriminatory action against or in favor of any group is condemned, specifically such measures as the proposed bill H. R. 6750 designed to relieve defense contractors and those who deal with them, from taxes on personal property, gross income, sales and other levies.

6. That the Federal Government exercise more courage, diligence, and promptness in dealing with subversive activities not only among enemy aliens and their offspring, but among those who have been naturalized or who have hidden behind legal technicalities.

7. That allocation of OCD materials and equipment be made to counties as well as to larger cities for distribution to the smaller incorporated and unincorporated areas in the counties, with allocation to be made by military authorities.

8. That there be a single coordinating agency designated from those Federal agencies already existing through which all local governmental priorities may be handled.

9. That, as representatives of the local level of government throughout the Nation, they pledge their unqualified support and cooperation to the Nation in their personal and official capacities.

"Who do we represent?" repeated the presiding officer, Harold E. Wallace, Salt Lake County, Utah, when asked.

"Well, you might say we represent all the people in the United

Gallup Poll

Majority Favors Total Mobilization

This is the final article in a series of eight showing national reaction to the idea of total mobilization for war.

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 10.—By a decisive majority of nearly two to one the American people vote for total mobilization in the final complete returns of a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Total mobilization is favored in every geographical section, in all income groups, in cities, towns and on farms. The rank and file of both the Democratic Party and the Republican Party favor it. It wins majority support in every age group of the adult voting population. Everywhere, indeed, majority sentiment favors an all-out draft of the Nation's men and women for war work—a program which would give the Government power to conscript any citizen for any job that will help win

Women Must Take Millions Of War Jobs

Home-to-Plant Shift Needed for Maximum Output, Survey Shows

By the Associated Press

An official war inventory of the Nation's human resources showed yesterday that millions of women would have to be shifted from housework to munitions factories in the expansion of war industries.

The survey was made by the Bureau of Census. It contained no specific mention of proposals that American women be drafted into factories as women are in England, but asserted:

"The maximum movement into the male labor force can hardly exceed two million men. A larger expansion of the total labor supply evidently can be achieved only by drawing millions of women into the labor force."

The report said that 15 million housewives between 18 and 44 years old represented the principal reserve from which additional war labor might be drawn.

"An enormous amount of man power will be needed for replacing workers withdrawn into the armed forces and for expanding the output of war materials," it stated.

Some of these needs can be met by utilizing the workers who are still unemployed, by lengthening working hours and by transferring workers from nonessential civilian industries.

"In the future, however, such measures will not be sufficient. As in World War I, millions of people who are not ordinarily workers must be drawn into the labor force."

The report acknowledged that many women were prevented from

Price Ceilings Set for Pork And Used Tires

Warning Is Issued To Retailers Against Increase on Meats

Price Controller Leon Henderson yesterday moved to the regulation of two major consumer items, setting ceiling levels for almost all pork products and for used tires and tubes.

The order affecting the pork products, including ham and bacon, established an emergency 60-day price maximum at wholesale levels of more than one-half of the Nation's meat supply. Although prices which retailers may charge for the items were not regulated, Henderson warned if retail margins rose beyond "a slight increase" to take care of replacement costs, his Office of Price Administration would step into the retail picture immediately.

The regulation, effective on March 23, and covering all pork products except sausages, canned meat and manufactured meat, applies to all packers and their branch houses, brokers, wholesalers, processors and slaughterers. The maximum ceilings permitted are the highest price levels prevailing during the five-day period of March 3 to 7. Since these

Produce Now Or Be Slaves, Nelson Says

Blunt Notice Served On Management and Labor by WPB Chief; Fears Public Wrath

Last Chance

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Production Director Donald M. Nelson last night delivered labor and management a blunt warning that they had "a last chance" to cooperate in an intensified drive for munitions manufacture, and that if they failed the "flames of public wrath" would consume the standards of American freedom and force production by totalitarian methods.

Speaking in the second of his series of radio broadcasts to the Nation, Nelson said the way he proposed to increase production was for the Government to set the schedules, supply the materials and make the facilities available, leaving labor and management to "bend every conceivable effort" from that point on.

But if this method fails, he said, in the face of an enemy who uses the "way of bondage, of force," the necessity of having weapons so "transcends all other matters in the public mind, either political or economic," that neither free labor nor the principles of free enterprise by management could survive the resulting public wrath.

Dramatically Simple

In one of the most dramatic appeals for labor-management cooperation in recent months, Nelson painted a simple picture of "tackling this thing in the traditional American way—getting together, cooperatively, to fight the thing through to a finish."

"I want to say to labor and management," Nelson declared, "We, and you, are on trial today before the American public. This is our last chance to show that a free economy can survive and be strong. If free men in America can't use the strength which freedom gives to turn in a far better job than the slaves of our enemies, then freedom dies and that, I may add, includes the freedom of enterprise to which we are looking to deliver these goods."

Blasts Part-time Use

The public, Nelson said is far from complacent and wants production with such "intensity of feeling" that it will make sure it gets it "one way or another."

Indicating the possibilities of the drive he announced last week to raise existing production rates by 25 per cent, Nelson said that if all

Navy Aviators Tell of Eating Shark Killed With Penknife

By the Associated Press

Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, March 10. A gripping story of beating off sharks with bare fists and of battling hunger and thirst while starknaked and half-crazed came today from three Navy fliers who survived 34 days in stormy South Seas on a raft smaller than an ordinary bed.

From the time their land plane was forced down on the Pacific until Gene Aldrich, 24-year-old radioman of Sikeston, Mo., mouthed through parched lips the startling words, "Chief, I see a field of corn," the three lived a story that would tax the imagination of a fiction writer.

The corn field Aldrich thought he saw was a coconut grove.

"Chief" is Harold Dixon, 42, of La Mesa, Calif., aviation chief machinists mate and pilot of the lost plane.

The third of the fliers is Anthony J. Pastula, 24, of Youngstown, Ohio, aviation ordnanceman.

They traveled at least 1000 miles on a rubber life raft to a tiny South Sea isle and later were picked up by Navy craft. They now are at Pearl Harbor and virtually recovered.

The Navy announced their rescue last month.

Their story is one of quick thinking, resourcefulness and raw courage.

Dixon now is partially deaf. When an albatross alighted unexpectedly on the raft, Aldrich fired a pistol too near Dixon's ear. Dixon jumped into the sea to retrieve the bird and its flesh helped keep the men alive.

It was on the night of January 16 that Dixon decided he had better set his plane down on the sea while enough gas remained to keep the plane under control.

The plane sank quicker than expected and the men were unable to save the rations, water or instruments. While floundering in the water, they managed to inflate the

Flying Fortresses Believed Used in Several Onslaughts Against Airdromes

Bulletin

Canberra, Australia, (Wednesday) March 11 (AP).—Australian fliers in one of their heaviest attacks of the war on Japanese shipping off the invaded New Guinea port of Salamaua scored direct hits on a warship and left four others in flames, the Air Ministry said today. Two of the ships were observed to be in a sinking condition, and a third was beached, the communique said. The warship which was hit was believed to be either a cruiser or a large destroyer.

By the United Press

Melbourne (Wednesday), March 11.—United Nations pilots have carried out a series of successful attacks upon Japanese-held air bases and enemy transports in the New Guinea-New Britain area and "aerial activity is continuing," said a dispatch from Port Moresby today.

The dispatch hinted, but did not say, that American flying fortresses flown here from Java, participated in the attacks.

"Allied pilots newly arrived from a western front and flying large American-made planes were engaged in the operations," the dispatch said.

Big bombing planes carried out daring, low-level attacks on Japanese transports in Handisch Harbor, on the east coast of New Guinea, "scoring direct hits," the dispatch said.

Two Airdromes Attacked

Other bombers heavily attacked the Japanese-held airdromes at Lae and Salamaua while still another formation attacked the large Japanese air base at Gasmata, on the south coast of New Britain.

The Gasmata air field was machine-gunned and some fires were observed.

An enemy flying boat "probably was destroyed."

(A. C. B. S. correspondent broadcasting from Sydney said morning newspapers were giving great prominence to American reports that United States shock troops, dive bombers, and attack aircraft soon would arrive in the southwest Pacific area. The broad hint was that these forces soon would attack and place the Japanese on the defensive, he said.)

Torpedo Hits Gulftrade After Captain Orders Running Lights Put On

Atlantic shipping losses by Axis undersea marauders rose higher yesterday with the announcement that the American tanker Gulftrade and the Brazilian cargo-passenger vessel Cayru had been sent to the bottom close to the approaches of New York harbor.

The 6766-ton tanker was torpedoed at 12:40 a. m. (E. S. T.) yesterday only a few miles off Barnegat, N. J., and 16 of the ship's 35-man crew were landed at Tompkinsville, Staten Island.

The 5152-ton Cayru went down between 7 and 7:30 p. m. Sunday night about 130 miles off Ambrose Light. The survivors included 22 seamen and four passengers, but six passengers and 53 crew members are missing.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the Cayru's loss, it was learned in Rio de Janeiro that another Brazilian ship, the 3557-ton Cabedelo was six days overdue in New York on a run from Rio.

The two torpedoings brought to 32 the number of vessels officially announced as attacked off the United States coast and to 48 the craft sunk or damaged off the United States and Canadian coasts since the present U-boat drive began on January 12.

Only three of these vessels, the U. S. tankers E. H. Blum, Malay and R. P. Resor, were announced as damaged. The others apparently were lost.

The torpedoing of the Cayru boosted Brazil's losses to four ships for a total of 22,231 tons. Her ship-

Spring Warfever

By the Associated Press

London, March 10.—Haunted by the muddy specter of spring thaws and fearful that a Soviet push from Leningrad might penetrate German soil, Hitler was reported today to be calling up his ultimate reserves for an all-or-nothing offensive in Russia as soon as possible.

Reliable sources described as "almost certainly accurate" confidential advices that the Nazi fuehrer had abandoned earlier plans for a defensive campaign in the north while concentrating on a big drive in the south.

Instead, they said, he evidently had determined on attacking all along the line.

This was said to be due to his fear that defeat of a defensive force on the Leningrad front would let the Red army into the Baltic States, behind the German army and with a clear path to invade Germany itself.

Red army successes around Staraya Russa and a weakening of the Finnish forces were said to have raised this fear.

A dispatch from a Swedish correspondent in Berlin said early thaws in the south already had bogged down the fighting on the Kerch Peninsula and in the Donets

Jap Cruiser Again Shells City of Cebu In Philippines

A Japanese light cruiser has shelled the important Philippine city of Cebu again, the War Department reported yesterday, while the lull in fighting on Bataan Peninsula continued through another day.

Japanese forces under their new commander, Gen. Yamashita, conqueror of Malay and Singapore, were believed to be consolidating their forces for a new offensive, but meanwhile there was no ground or air fighting reported in Luzon.

Only slight damage was done by the "several" shells fired on the port of Cebu on the Philippine Island of the same name, the War Department said. It was the second time the city has been attacked within a week.

Passenger Train Wrecked Here By Plowing Into Freight Cars

Two trainmen narrowly escaped death late yesterday when a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train plowed into a 14-car freight train parked on the main right of way near the Franklin Street Northeast overpass.

The impact derailed the locomotive and its tender and set fire to the caboose of the freight train.

J. M. Powers, engineer, and W. A. Summers, fireman, both of Martinsburg, W. Va., were forced to extricate themselves from the locomotive cab by crawling through a window. They were unhurt.

According to police, the accident occurred when the passenger train, which had no passengers, bound from Cumberland, Md., crashed into the freight train which was parked on the tracks.

The locomotive struck the freight train with such force that the engine's nose plowed its way virtually through the caboose. The engine then rolled on its side and the caboose became a mass of flames.

Police reserves from Twelfth and Thirteenth precincts were summoned together with about 20 auxiliary policemen. The blaze was extinguished by firemen. More than 400 persons were attracted to the scene.

The crash occurred at 5:40 p. m. and traffic was delayed for several hours until the right of way was cleared.

It is believed that the freight train was being made up as police could locate no members of its crew. It was not immediately determined what caused the accident.

There were two other crew members on the passenger train—W. J. O'Malley, conductor, of Baltimore, Md., and an unidentified flagman. They, too, escaped injury.

Just Say Turn Out the Light

Landis' Polysyllabic Diction Is Too 'Obscure' for Roosevelt

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt swapped ghost writers in the middle of a letter yesterday.

The shakeup on the diction front came when James M. Landis, high-domed dean of the Harvard Law School and director of the OCD, prepared a letter for the Chief Executive's signature on blacking out Federal buildings.

In the letter, Dean Landis used such polysyllabic jawbreakers as "obscuration" and "termination of illumination."

These were too much for Mr. Roosevelt. He turned to White House Secretary Stephen Early and asked him to do a re-write job on the ponderous Harvard scholar, substituting for "terminating the illumination" the simpler phrase turning out the lights.

"Steve" used to work for the Associated Press, which knocked many syllables out of him before he became a star reporter.

Apparently President Roosevelt had signed the letter before he changed ghosts. He was reading it to newspapermen at his regular Tuesday press conference when he stumbled over "obscuration." He had explained previously what the letter was—a directive for Federal agencies here on blackout nights in Washington.

The President, reading from the letter prepared by Landis, repeated the words:

"Such preparations shall be made as will completely obscure all Federal buildings and non-Federal buildings, occupied by the Federal Government, during an air raid for any period of time from visibility by reason of internal or external illumination.

(The President had begun to breathe hard already.)

"Such obscuration," he continued, grinning broadly, "may be obtained by blackout construction or by terminating the illumination.

(Here the President, in response to a question, said the dean of the Harvard Law School had written the words to which the reporters were listening.)

"This will, of course, require that in building areas in which production must continue during a blackout, construction must be provided that internal illumination may be continued.

(Looking at the reporters in front of him, the President observed with a chuckle that he knew a lot of people who had "internal illumination.")

"Other areas, whether or not occupied by personnel, may be obscured by terminating the illumina-

President Cool to Proposals For Unifying All Armed Forces

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Proposals for the unification of the sea, land and air forces under one department were rejected, in effect, by President Roosevelt yesterday, with an observation that the services are now working well together.

The President at the same time brushed aside questions regarding Congressional reports that the Administration is considering the establishment of a supreme high command to direct the entire war effort.

He was asked at his press conference about a statement by Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, that creation of a "supreme command" was under serious consideration.

Just what does that term mean? the President parried. The reporter said he did not know what was meant. Neither does anyone else, Mr. Roosevelt replied.

The President then was asked about a bill introduced during the day by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to create a single department of national defense.

He replied that he hadn't heard of that one, but that there have been various proposals to set up one, two, three of four defense departments.

Then he added that he thought the Army and Navy were working together pretty well now.

The Clark bill, which was prepared by Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, retired, long a critic of the Nation's defense organization, would create a secretary of national defense in charge of all armed forces under

Japs Bayonet 50 Bound British Soldiers in Rape of Hongkong, Eden Reports

Barbarities Equal Sack Of Nanking

By the Associated Press

London, March 10.—The British government indicted Japan today for barbarities at Hongkong paralleling those which shocked the world during the 1937 sack of Nanking, and accused the occupying forces of such outrages as the bayonetting of 50 helplessly bound officers and soldiers and the indiscriminate rape and murder of Asiatic and European women.

Anthony Eden, the foreign secretary, told the House of Commons:

"Out of regard for the feelings of the thousands of relations of the victim, his majesty's government have been unwilling to publish any account of Japanese atrocities at Hongkong until these had been confirmed beyond any possibility of doubt.

"His majesty's government now are in possession of statements by reliable eyewitnesses who succeeded in escaping from Hongkong toward the end of January or early in February.

"Their testimony established the fact that the Japanese army at Hongkong perpetrated against their helpless military-prisoners and civil population without distinction of race or color the same kind of barbarities which aroused the horror of the civilized world at the time of the Nanking massacre of 1937.

Entire District Declared Brothel

"It is known that 50 officers and men of the British were bound hand and foot and then bayonetted to death.

"It is known that ten days after the capitulation, wounded were still being collected from the hills and the Japanese were refusing permission to bury the dead.

"It is known that women, both Asiatic and European, were raped and murdered and that one entire Chinese district was declared a brothel regardless of status of inhabitants."

(The same thing happened at Nanking, where thousands of women were outraged and killed and other thousands of the inhabitants slain during the burning and pillage of the Chinese city.)

"All the survivors of the garrison, including Indian, Chinese and Portuguese have been herded into a camp consisting of wrecked huts without doors, windows, light or sanitation. By the end of January 150 cases of dysentery had occurred, but no drugs or medical facilities were supplied.

"The dead had to be buried in a corner of the camp.

"The Japanese guards are utterly callous and the repeated requests of Gen. Maltby, the general officer commanding, for an interview with the Japanese commander have been curtly refused.

"This presumably means that the Japanese high command have connived at the conduct of their forces.

10,947 Prisoners

"The Japanese government stated at the end of February that numbers of prisoners in Hongkong were British 5072, Candian 1689, Indian 3829, others 357, total 10,947.

"Most of the European residents, including some who are seriously ill, have been interned, and like the military prisoners are being given only a little rice and water and occasionally scraps of other food.

"There is some reason to believe that conditions have been slightly improved since the date on which the eyewitnesses whom I have quoted escaped, but the Japanese government has refused their consent to a visit to Hongkong of a representative of the protecting power and no permission has yet been granted for such a visit by a representative of the International Red Cross committee. They have in fact announced that they require all foreign consuls to withdraw from all territories they have invaded since the outbreak of the war. It is clear that their treatment of prisoners and civilians will not bear independent investigation.

"I have no information as to condition of our prisoners of war and civilians in Malaya. The only report available is a statement by Japanese official news agency of March 3 stating that 77,699 Chinese have been arrested and subjected to what is described as "a severe examination." It is not difficult to imagine what that entails.

"Enemy Must Be Defeated"

"I am sorry that I have had to make such a statement to the House. Two things will be clear from it, to the House, to the country and to the world. The Japanese claim that their forces are animated by a lofty code of chivalry, 'bushido,' is a nauseating hypocrisy, that is the first.

"The second is that the enemy must be defeated. The House will agree with me that we can best express our sympathy with the victims of these appalling outrages by redoubling our efforts to ensure his utter and overwhelming defeat."

In the House of Lords the colonial secretary, Lord Cranborne, agreed to look into a suggestion that Russia be asked to exert its good offices at Tokyo for the relief of Hongkong's helpless people. Russia and Japan still are at peace.

Nazis Seize Reds For Forced Labor

Germany also is pouring youthful "farmers, officers and colonizers" into the Ukraine, the story in the official government newspaper continued.

Guinea only 45 minutes by fast plane from the Australian mainland.

The most recent invasion was at Finschhafen, which has a small airport and a harbor suitable for ships of moderate draft. The size of the Japanese force was not disclosed. Other landings have been made at Salamaua and Lae in the same area.

These inroads and a tenth air raid on Port Moresby, principal city of New Guinea, erased any lingering official doubts of an invasion attempt against this commonwealth.

While heads of the Australian fighting forces discussed with cabinet members in detail the most likely points of invasion and methods to meet the threat, Lieut. Gen. Sir Iven Mackay, commander of the home forces, warned the public not to sit back and wait for others to defend this country.

A large-scale invasion by the Japanese "would be difficult but not beyond their capacity," he said at Adelaide.

Prime Minister John Curtin, commenting on the arrival in this country of officials from the Dutch East Indies, described Australia not only as a base from which to attack the enemy but "a sanctuary for all our Allies."

Curtin suggested that next Sunday be set aside as a day of national prayer, noting that it was the anniversary of the German invasion of Czecho-Slovakia.

Basin.

A Russian dispatch from the Donets Basin said:

"Spring is expressed not only by warm sunny days but by artillery music, the noise the Red army is making as it advances."

The Swedish reporter said the thaws and resultant mud were giving the Germans "a foretaste of what it will be like when all the great snows which have massed during the severest winter in nearly 100 years begin to melt."

He predicted that "the German spring offensive will not be able to be launched before the end of April or May."

This did not fully square with the view here of Hitler's speedy preparations, but the vagueness of the offensive time was noted, along with the possibility that the Nazis might seek, for reasons of their own, to overemphasize the imminence of the mud season.

Sources in London said that their information indicated Hitler was even stripping his factories of boys and old men to back up a spearhead of veterans in reconstructed elite divisions.

Heedless of the possible consequences, they said he was aiming at the capture of Leningrad, Moscow and Rostov and was hopeful that the drive in the last area might even win down to the Caucasus oil fields through Iran and to the Suez Canal.

In the Staraya Russa area, substantial Russian reinforcements were reported moving into that sector southwest of Lake Ilmen.

Other new forces were massed behind the Kholm marshes, while Leningrad's troops hammered away at German fortifications between Volkhov and Lake Ladoga.

Moscow reports told of heavy machine-gunning which "paralyzed the movement of Germans on a highway" in the Smolensk zone, capture of a number of villages and slaughter of 2000 Germans in two days on the central front, and heavy blows at German fortifications east and south of Leningrad.

Another obstacle in the German offensive plan was the report that a Finnish peace party had grown so large that the Nazis were discounting Finland as an ally.

British Cut Through Trap

Burma Troops Joining Chinese For Supreme Defense of India

By the Associated Press

London, March 10.—The British imperial forces, abandoning the southern tip of Burma, have slashed through a Japanese trap and were driving tonight into central Burma toward their first mass rendezvous with their Chinese allies in the Shan states for the supreme defense of India.

These maneuvers were announced almost simultaneously with an official disclosure that Prime Minister Churchill would make a statement at the next session of Commons, probably on Wednesday, of the government's intentions toward India's demand for concessions toward independence as the price for her all-out cooperation in the war.

Construction of this policy was complicated by a threat made by Mohammed Ali Jinnah that the Moslem minority of India would revolt if the plan were opposed to its interests, particularly if it denied Moslem autonomy.

Operations on the Burma front indicated meantime that Britain was staking everything on the belief the battered army of Burma could, with Chinese aid, make a prolonged resistance.

A communique from New Delhi announced that the R. A. F., despite the British retreat and readustment to new bases, had struck a heavy blow at a Japanese airdrome at Moulmein, dropping sticks of bombs among 14 scattered planes and setting two fires. Fighting planes, too, lifted a shield over the retreating troops. A Japanese air raid upon Tharrawaddy was admitted to have killed some Burmese civilians.

Afield, Lieut.-Gen. Harold R. L. G. Alexander's forces were declared officially to have made a successful withdrawal northward toward Central Burma, thus extricating themselves from what had been a most grave position.

This was made possible in heavy separate actions, a subsidiary British force previously isolated around Pegu, 40 miles north of Rangoon, smashing its way through the Japanese toward a junction with the main British bodies, which in turn broke through the Japanese astride the Rangoon-Prome road in two violent and bloody tank and infantry assaults.

Rangoon had been made untenable not only by the temporary isolation of the Pegu force, but by enemy landings on the north shore of the Bakir River and on the west bank of the Rangoon River—landings opposed by a British sloop which incidentally captured one enemy craft to find that it contained a single Japanese officer and 53 traitorous Burmese.

Rangoon, according to delayed advices, was left a spectacular area of waste by the British scorched earth policy. The great Syriam oil refineries 20 miles down-river were smashed and the pipepine 300 miles northward was cut, these dispatches stated.

"Great warehouses, docks, quays, jetties—everything of any possible value to the Japanese—were ruthlessly blown up or set on fire," it was added.

President Cool to Military Unity Plans

the President. The measure differs from prior bills in that it does not call for a separate air force.

Proposals for consolidation of the War and Navy Departments, or the creation of a unified general staff or other war directing agency have been frequent since America entered the war. They stem, in part, from the finding in the report of the Roberts investigating committee that there was a lack of coordination in defense arrangements between the Army and Navy at Pearl Harbor, prior to the December 7 attack.

Services Reorganized

Both services have been reorganized in the past week. The War Department was sweepingly revamped to set up three main divisions in charge of ground, air and supply forces and to confine the General Staff to planning strategy.

Late Monday a shake-up in the Navy was announced under which Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, took over the functions of Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of Naval Operations. Stark was transferred to London and assumes the title of "commander United States Naval Forces operating in European waters."

The President explained the move as a simplification and centralization of authority somewhat akin to the streamlining of the War Department.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the office of Chief of Naval Operations had been established in 1916 and had worked all right in World War I, when the situation was simpler.

Material Problem Grows

In recent years, however, especially the last two, he stated, the problem of obtaining materials for the Navy has become more difficult. Under the past setup, the President stated, the movements and operations of ships have been under one head (King) and the responsibility for getting them ready to operate and of providing them with the materials necessary for them to carry out these operations rested with another (Stark).

It seemed better, he added, to merge these functions and make them the responsibility of one person.

Mr. Roosevelt conferred during the day with Admiral King and also Admiral Thomas C. Hart, who recently returned from the southwestern Pacific, where he formerly was in charge of all naval operations.

The President said that they had had a very satisfactory talk with Hart and that he had learned a great deal. The question of a new asignment for Hart was not discussed, he said.

3 Fliers Battle Sharks With Fists

rubber life raft, its inside dimensions only 28 inches by 80 inches. Into this precarious haven the three crowded for the perilous days ahead.

"We were not concerned much the first night," Dixon said. "We knew searchers would be out and sure enough we saw a plane in the morning. But it did not see us and that was the last we saw of possible help."

The raft was not equipped with oars and for some time the trio just drifted. Later Dixon's shoes were rigged so that they could be used as hand-oars.

"Don't say we drifted to the island—we worked," Dixon said.

He told of shooting a big leopard shark which came so close he merely held the pistol against the shark's head. He related that still later he struck another shark with his bare fists.

The men lost from 20 to 50 pounds each in the long ordeal.

They rigged a sea anchor from a life jacket, using it whenever winds were adverse. They used their own underclothing as sponges when it rained. After the cloth was saturated, they wrung it out to fill a small container with the precious water.

At all times they knew where they wanted to go—toward islands to the south.

Badly Sunburned

The sea was smooth during the first part of the trip. Later, when they finally sighted land, they were in the middle of one of the worst hurricanes in South Sea history. Time and again they were tossed into the ocean, only to climb back. The last few days they did not have a stitch of clothing and were sunburned so badly it took weeks to heal.

Their total food hardly would make more than one good meal, but Dixon insisted coffee and cigarettes were missed more than the food.

Aldrich proved the best fisherman, but once his hand was bitten by a shark.

They had practically no water the first four days, until they figured out the idea of using their underclothing as a sponge. Neither did they have food.

Then Aldrich stabbed a fish with his pocketknife and they chewed the raw flesh. They said it was like chewing rubber.

The albatross was next on the menu. After part had been eaten Dixon noted at night that the bird seemed to emit light. He feared it had become poisonous from feeding in phosphorescent waters and heaved the remainder of the carcass overboard.

On the seventh day Aldrich stabbed a 4-foot shark.

"We ripped the shark open with pliers," Dixon said. "We had read about vitamins in sharks' livers so ate that first. It was very good. We also ate two sardines found in the shark's stomach with a great deal of relish. And the next day we polished off the shark itself.

"On the fourteenth day Aldrich caught another fish and I caught a bird by reaching up for it when it landed on the raft. It was some sort of tern, but to us tasted like fried chicken. We devoured it on the spot.

"On the twenty-first day we picked up a coconut.

"On the twenty-eighth day we had bad luck. I dived for an albatross that came close to the raft but took a belly-buster and missed.

"Things looked pretty bad the thirty-third day. We had lost our clothes, all but one shoe, and the pistol long since had corroded into uselessness. We found ourselves periodically in a daze.

"I was lying down as best we could the morning of the thirty-fourth day when Henry (Aldrich's nickname) said he saw corn. I didn't pay any attention. I just thought he was gone. Then he said it again, so I stood up and it didn't take long to decide it was an island.

"We tried to paddle all day and finally staggered ashore at dusk to an unoccupied shack with the hurricane just getting to top force.

"We decided when we came ashore we would try to march and, if the island was Japanese, they would not find us crawling up to them. But we could not straighten up.

"The next morning, island natives on beach patrol saw us, gave us kernals of coconuts and sent for help. They carried us to the governor's house."

Dixon finished his recital with the words:

"These boys showed plenty of stuff all the way through."

Asked how he liked food in Honolulu, Dixon replied:

"Regularly."

All U. S. Forces Totaling 600 Air Corps Men Saved From Java, Proving Lie to Jap Claims

By Ralph B. Jordan
International News Service Staff Writer

With United Nations Forces in the Southwest Pacific, March 10.—All American forces in Java, numbering no more than 600 men of the Air Corps personnel, got out of that island safely before it was overwhelmed by the Japanese, it can be disclosed today.

This demonstrates the exaggeration of the Japanese claim that 5000 American, British and Australian troops, along with 93,000 of the Dutch Indies army, "surrendered."

Apart from the escape of the little American force, this correspondent has learned from unquestionable sources that the Dutch never had more than three or four divisions, of 12,000 troops each, on Java and 75 per cent of these were native soldiers. The Dutch air force on Java consisted only of 60 or 70 fighters and 30 or 40 bombers.

Many of the Hollanders who have poured into Australia from Java, meanwhile revealed they had left wives and children behind and did not know when they would ever see them again, but said they did so in order that they might be free to carry on the fight against the enemy.

Among these stout-hearted men were 15 Dutch East Indies government officials including the lieutenant-governor, Hubertus Van Mook who, referring to Australia, said that "this is the place where the tide will turn and we want to be in on it."

(A Melbourne dispatch by Aneta, Netherlands Indies news agency, said Van Mook and the other government officials had flown from Bandoeng to Australia only after Gov.-Gen. Tarda Van Starkenborgh Stachouwer had ordered them to do so. The dispatch said Van Mook will confer with Australian Premier John Curtin Thursday.)

Two Dutch officers who left Java for Australia late Saturday night in a Netherlands bomber said the armistice sought by the Dutch authorities applied only to the Bandoeng area and that fighting was continuing elsewhere in Central and East Java.

(A Domei dispatch broadcast from Tokyo claimed that the Netherlands Indies authorities, "after holding out for the surrender only of Bandoeng, accepted the Japanese demand for complete and unconditional surrender." Tokyo claimed further that Dutch resistance in eastern and southn Java "gradually ceased" Tuesday morning and that "large groups" of Dutch troops "surrendered in accordance with Stachower's order for capitulation.")

Bandoeng, the two officers said, had been heavily bombed and the armistice was asked to avoid further slaughter of civilians, especially European and American women and children, practically all of whom were said to be still there.

The Dutch and other United Nations air forces, according to these officers, were virtually "obliterated" in the first few days of the invasion of Java and ground battalions "broke under the strain on account of the shock and demoralization caused by bombings and the despair of never seeing a friendly plane in the skies."

The officers reiterated what I have heard from other Hollanders who were in the Java battle, namely, that 1000 fighters and 500 bombers would have saved the Netherlands East Indies from conquest.

They recounted further that the Japanese are "showing hatred" for Europeans and Americans by "roughing up and humiliating them," while treating natives relatively well.

Attack on Alaska Or Canal Possible, Canadian Warns

A Japanese attack on the Panama Canal or on Alaska would not be in the least surprising, Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian corps in England, who has been in Washington for several days to confer with President Roosevelt and American and British defense chiefs, told a press conference yesterday.

Gen. McNaughton warned in this respect that "we should make a tremendous mistake if we underestimate the strategic insight of our enemies," and pointed out that such attacks as well as raids on the Pacific Coast would be a great temptation to spread troops too thin, to "whitewash forces acrpss all fronts."

"We in Canada believe in an offensive against Europe," he said. "We have been building up our forces in Britain and it must be obvious even to the enemy that we have not been doing that just for the sake of moving them across the ocean. One of these days when the time is ripe we shall put something sharp in the belly of the Hun."

R. A. F. Again Pounding German Industry in Third Night of Bombing

Many Fires Set at Great Krupp Works

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), March 11. Heavy explosions echoing across the English Channel last night told that the R. A. F. still was battering German objectives for the third straight night after two powerful blows at the giant Krupp munition works at Essen.

[British planes again have raided St. Nazaire, where several residential buildings were destroyed and at least six persons killed and others wounded, the Vichy radio said tonight, according to the United Press.]

German long-range guns firing from the Cap Griz Nez area on the French side shook the Kent coast, and these shots were followed by the heavier blasts which indicated the R. A. F. was striking back with bombs.

The air ministry said the second raid on the Krupp works in Germany proper Monday night wrought such havoc that production there would be slowed for some time.

Fires visible for 100 miles spread rapidly, returning pilots related, and even before the attack reached its climax the target was a beckoning beacon to succeeding waves of bombers.

Today's German high command communique from Berlin acknowledged the attacks on western Germany and said there were civilian casualties, but omitted the usual claim that no military damage was done.

The main British raid last night on Essen was coupled with a subsidiary attack on the French Channel coast. Three British bombers were lost in all the operations.

In their own nonstop aerial offensive against the British Mediterranean island of Malta, Axis raiders lost three bombers and two fighters shot down, and nine more damaged in the last 24 hours, the British announced.

Viereck Fails To Press for New Trial

George Sylvester Viereck, the German agent convicted of violating the Foreign Agents Act in the District Court last week, will accept his sentence without making a fight for a new trial. But he may appeal.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts will set the day for the sentence this morning. It probably will be day after tomorrow. Justice Letts has power to sentence the German agent to two to six years in prison, a fine of $3000, or both.

The time limit for filing a motion for a new trial expired at 4 p. m. yesterday without a move from Viereck's counsel. The failure to make the application does not prevent Viereck seeking a review of his conviction by the United States Court of Appeals here.

Justice Letts ordered the German agent locked up as soon as the jury found him guilty of failing to report the detailed operations of the Nazi propaganda machine, when he filed his registration with the State Department as a foreign agent.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., in a 12-day trial had showed that Viereck issued a stream of anti-British books through a publishing house he controlled, that he collaborated with the late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, on speeches which were delivered in the Senate, and that he got in the Record and financed the mailing under Congressional frank of tons of isolationist propaganda which he had prepared.

As soon as Viereck's appeal is filed—if there is one—the United States Court of Appeals here will have jurisdiction of the case and he will be able to ask the appellate justices to hear a motion for his freedom on bond, pending their decision of the appeal.

Autos as Important As Guns, Patman Says

Calling for immediate steps to assure provision for "as many necessary rides as possible by private automobiles," Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday declared that the war can be lost through failure to provide the Nation with adequate local transportation.

At the same time he introduced two bills to provide Government help to dealers in articles rationed by the United States.

"Adequate local transportation is just as important as guns," Patman said. "Apparently this is not realized by Government officials responsible for keeping transportation units moving. It is high time intelligent consideration was given this problem."

Popular Front Balked Revolt, Blum Asserts

By the Associated Press

Riom, Unoccupied France, March 10.—The advent of the Popular Front government of 1936 in France saved the country from civil war, former Premier Leon Blum testified today at the "war guilt" trial.

Socialist Blum, in answer to prosecution charges that his administration slowed down France's war preparations, said his government had come into office in a situation which was "not prerevolutionary but practically revolutionary."

He emphasized that the great sit-down strike movement had reached its peak in the months before he took office. One of his solutions for strikes, he said, was the 40-hour week which his government adopted as a means of halting the refusals to work and evacuating occupied factories.

In fact, Blum said, the big employers' associations asked him to speed up its inauguration so the factories could get back to work.

"At the time, certain elements among the employers regarded me as their savior," he said.

Blum, responding to Presiding Judge Pierre Caous, repeated his contention that the trial is "political" and charged that it is "directed deliberately against certain men considered as representing certain political attitudes."

He cited that he had been accused of being responsible for the wave of sit-down strikes, while actually they happened during the government before his, when he was only vice premier under Premier Camille Chautemps.

Blum is the prisoner now, he said, while Chautemps is on an information mission from the French government to try to explain French politics in South America.

"I am not a politician," he said, "I am a Socialist," adding that he still thought the 40-hour week was all right and that he believed that large-scale production depended "not on how much you exhaust your men but on how much you work your machines."

Texas Tolerance

Abilene, Tex., March 10 (AP).—Came Pearl Harbor, and pretty Naomi Fugita quit school to work in a 5-and-10. Someone had to augment the dwindling income of her Japanese father.

Naomi, dark-eyed and 18, sold novelties and played phonograph records about slapping the Japs.

But some of the customers complained to the manager.

They didn't know that two of Naomi's brothers are in Uncle Sam's Army, nor that her father has credentials attesting to his loyalty and permitting him to go about his business as a salesman.

Naomi's Occidental mother only recently had received a telephone call from Sergt. Frank Fugita from Java. The other son, Corpl. Hubert Lee Fugita, is training at Sheppard Field's Air Corps ground school.

Regretfully the manager decided Naomi would have to work in the stock room.

"That would be hiding," she said and went home.

Then a newspaper reporter heard about Naomi's case.

His story made Naomi a lot of new friends. Everyone was so kind Naomi decided she'd go to work in the stockroom after all.

But the manager wouldn't hear of it.

Rocks Tossed By Monkeys Kill Coolies

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 10.—In addition to the Germans and the Italians, the Japanese have enlisted monkeys as their allies, and many Chinese workers on the new Sikang-Assam Highway, under construction to replace the Burma Road, have been killed by stones thrown by swarms of monkeys, according to information received today by United China relief office. The species of monkey was not identified by T. Y. Lo, an official of the China Motion Picture Corporation, who sent word of the simian attacks. However, their derivation is Aryan.

According to Lo, who has been making motion pictures of the construction work, the monkeys at first chattered with interest as the Chinese began cutting a trail through the jungle. After several days, however, they began to attack from treetops, throwing stones with dangerous accuracy and killing some workers. Rifle fire failed to disperse them, and they were dislodged only by dynamiting the trees from which they launched their attack.

No Kelly Mementos

Hollywood, March 10 (AP).—Even his widow has no mementos of Capt. Colin P. Kelly, the Nation's first air hero of this war.

"All of our things were left in Honolulu," she said today. "I'm hoping that some of them will be saved."

She has had requests from all parts of the country, Mrs. Kelly disclosed, for keepsakes—neckties, hats, handkerchiefs, anything—belonging to the pilot who sank a Jap battleship off the Philippines but paid for it with his life.

Mrs. Kelly, here with her son, Colin, jr., says she plans to make Hollywood a permanent home and seek employment. She added her presence has no connection with the movies.

Adm. Waesche, Griffin Named For Promotion

A Maryland boy who later became commandant of the United States Coast Guard, and a Washingtonian who reached the rank of captain in the United States Navy, were nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt for promotion.

Rear Admiral Russell R. Waesche, of 7005 Rolling Road, Chevy Chase, Md., was nominated to be a vice admiral, and Capt. Robert M. Griffin, of 1515 Thirtieth Street Northwest, to be a rear admiral.

Rear Admiral Waesche, a native of Thurmont, Md., entered the Coast Guard from Purdue University and during the last few years originated the Coast Guard Institute and correspondence school for enlisted men and warrant officers. He also reorganized the field forces and devised a selection plan for commissioned officers, and supervised consolidation of the Lighthouse Service with the Coast Guard.

Capt. Griffin, a native of Washington, attended Western High School and Swaveley Preparatory School here. He was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1907 from Virginia. During the World War he was awarded the Navy Cross for service aboard the destroyer Cushing.

Capt. Griffin took command of the U. S. S. New York in 1938, when he was on duty in the Office of Naval Operations. He later became attached to the staff of the commander in chief of the United States fleet.

The President also nominated three other officers for promotion. They are Capts. Stanley V. Parker, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Esward D. Jones, Williamsburg, Va., both of the Coast Guard, to be rear admirals, and Capt. Freeland A. Daubin, Norfolk, Va., of the Navy, to the rank of rear admiral.

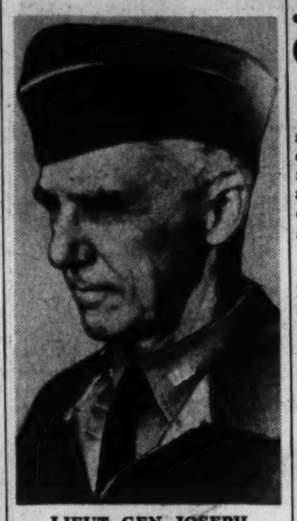
Chief of Staff On China Front



LIEUT. GEN. JOSEPH W. STILWELL

Stilwell Named Chief of Staff Under Chiang

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, March 10.—A Chinese government spokesman announced today the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, former United States military attache at Peiping, as chief of staff in the China theater under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

He said China was sending a military mission to Washington and also announced that China and India would exchange diplomatic representatives. They will be commissioners with ministerial rank.

Gen. Stilwell arrived in Chungking March 4 on what was announced as a specail mission for President Roosevelt.

Air Offensive Forecast

Informants at that time expressed the belief that he and Generalissimo Chiang perhaps would map an offensive in which United States planes would go into action from Chinese bases within striking range of Japan.

Gen. Hsiung Shih-hui, member of the National Military Council and until recently Governor of Kiangsi Province, will head the Chinese mission to Washington. He received his military education in Japan and is regarded as an expert on Japanese affairs.

A Chinese Army spokesman said the next phase of the Pacific battle would be to "build up an offensive first in Australia and then in Northern Burma, Eastern India and Southwest China.

Bases for Attacks

"These areas should be held not merely for defensive action but for developing powerful attacks upon enemy territory so as to render Japan's position untenable," he added.

Ben. Hsiung, 50, also will be the Chinese representative in the war conferences of the United Nations in Washington.

Convoy Reaches Britain

London, March 10 (AP).—A convoy carrying United States technicians for the bases in North Ireland, reinforcements for the Canadian army in Britain and Canadian-trained troops of Norwegian, Belgian and Polish armed forces has arrived at a British port.

Incidents to enliven the crossing were a brush with U-boats and an emergency operation for appendicitis. Depth charges dropped from escorting destroyers apparently disposed of the submarines, since there were no further alarms. A Canadian airman was the victim of an appendicitis attack and the operation was performed by a Toronto surgeon.

Hearings Set On Bill Banning Labor Rackets

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, last night said that the Senate Judiciary Committee of which he is chairman will consider Monday legislation intended to remove the Supreme Court's objection to use of the Federal Anti-Racketeering Act in prosecution of labor unions for attacks on interstate truck shipments.

A bill having this purpose was referred to the committee following its introduction Monday by Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, who declared that the decision placed Congress in the position of "condoning" violent enforcement of demands "so long as it is practiced by members of labor organizations."

"If newspaper accounts of the decisions are accurate," Van Nuys declared, "it looks to me as if we need some kind of remedial legislation."

Thieves Steal Boiler Sections Weighing Ton

Police yesterday were looking for a thief with a strong back and a truck.

The General Wrecking Co., Brentwood Road and W Street Northwest, reported that someone had carted away from its premises all but one-half section of a seven-section cast iron boiler weighing more than 2000 pounds.

London Fears Japanese Grab Of Madagascar

By the Associated Press

London, March 10.—A quiet, strategic race was reported to be either underway or imminent tonight between the Axis powers and the United Nations for control of the big French island of Madagascar off the African east coast.

In the hands of the Japanese, who are reported to have had a pressure mission there for the last six weeks, the island would give the Axis a vital naval base on the western end of the Indian Ocean littoral and multiply the complications of getting Allied armies and materiel to both the Middle East and the Orient.

Adding to a growing list of reported maneuvers aimed at the island, the Turkish radio said today that six light naval units of the Vichy French fleet had been dispatched from Dakar to Madagascar.

This reported Vichy gesture came in the midst of discussion in unofficial London quarters on the possibility that Allied troops might soon move on Madagascar with the intent of beating the Axis to the jump in order to hold the western Indian Ocean from the enemy which has sealed its eastern end with the conquest of Malaya and the Indies.

The presence of a Japanese mission on the island—the world's fourth largest—was considered particularly significant in view of Vichy's yielding attitude regarding French Indo-China which set the springboard for the whole Pacific holocaust.

On this same line of reasoning, it was recalled that Vichy's Dakar in French West Africa was at least under suspicion of being an Axis submarine base, that supplies have been reported moved through French Tunisia to Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in Libya and that only yesterday the Soviet news agency Tass charged in a dispatch from its Cairo correspondent that Vichy had handed over to the Germans 40 warships still building at the time of the June, 1940, armistice. The Tass charge was denied in Vichy today.

Axis possession of Madagascar would menace all shipping to allied forces which plies the long and now fairly open route via Capetown to the Middle East, India, Burma and Australia and New Zealand. This route became essential after the closing of the Mediterranean to through convoys.

One evidence of stirrings in the eastern Indian Ocean was seen in the new dispatch of troops from Portugal to Mozambique, the large Portuguese territory on the African mainland across channel from the big French island.

Landis Hits Back at Byrd Over Bowling

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

If Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and his joint Committee on Nonessential Federal Expenditures fail to see the wisdom in OCD's program to enroll 22 million bowlers behind the Nation's war effort, then they must not believe in recreation and relaxation for "men in the production line."

This is the type of reasoning used in statements made yesterday by Dean James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, and by the director of the OCD physical fitness division, John B. Kelly.

"Surely neither you nor your committee can have any objection to activities of that kind which cost the United States Government nothing and which give the men in the production line the kind of relaxation they need," Dean Landis declared in reply to Senator Byrd's statement on Monday to the effect that organization of bowlers hardly struck him as necessary to the war effort. He said the name of the OCD coordinator of bowling, Jack M. Willem, was omitted from the list of employes furnishes his committee by Dean Landis.

Omission Explained

In his reply yesterday, Landis said the omission was because Willem "has not nor will he be entitled to receive a nickel from the Federal Government."

Landis declared that although the coordination of bowling—said to be the first in the world's history—was in the physical fitness division "which is on the point of transfer to another agency" he personally believed it "is distinctly worth while, carried on as it is without any expense to the United States Government, but at the expense of the leaders of those 22,000,000 individuals who care about bowling as a healthy sport in the American tradition."

Director Landis failed to give his ideas on why the Government should be organizing and coordinating bowling in the first place, apparently taking the attitude rather generally held at OCD during its months of activity that everything is the Government's business and whoever thinks not doesn't believe in a strong America.

Kelly, who made his statement in Philadelphia, declared Senator Byrd's criticism of bowling as a civilian defense activity to be "a classic example of one of our national leaders boondoggling in Congress instead of focusing his attention on what is happening in the South Pacific and in Europe."

"Politics" Charged

"This is a perfect example of a politically inspired committee head asking for facts and then presenting them in twisted fashion for public consumption," Kelly declared, saying Senator Byrd wired his office for facts and was told Willem was not being paid.

After all, Kelly said, Willem is just one of 60 such coordinators now making up the physical fitness division's sports board. None is being paid even traveling money, he said.

"They're all patriotic-minded sports authorities who are spending their own money—not yours," Kelly said, "mine nor the Government's—to help develop the sports portion of a program designed to get this country physically fit to win the war quickly and decisively.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy . . . What is Senator Byrd's solution?"

Kelly said the Hale America Bowling Council was formed in Philadelphia at a conference called by his division and to which came delegates from the American Bowling Congress, the Women's International Bowling Congress, the National Duckpin Congress, the Rubber Band Duckpin Congress, the Candlepin Association, the American High School Bowling Congress, the Bowling Proprietors Association, and the Bowling Manufacturers Association.

"This was the first time all of these groups had been represented at any round table discussion. They came because they all had the same thing in mind—how they could best serve America's war effort," Kelly declared.

Straus Memorial Still Awaits Sculpture—After Two Years

NO PARKING—STATUE WAITING, NOT STANDING

Nearly two years after the site, accommodating 200 parked cars, was cleared, the Oscar Straus Memorial was still awaiting yesterday the two sculptural groups needed to complete it.

Situated just behind the District Building, the unfinished memorial plaza formerly was part of a large parking lot. In June, 1940, its 200-car capacity was eliminated and work was begun on the plaza fountain.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Commission of Fine Arts, asserted yesterday that A. A. Weinman, New York sculptor, "is working on large scale models of two sculptural groups which eventually will be installed."

He was unable to say when the models will be submitted for commission approval and how long after that it will be before the art works are set in place.

The memorial is being erected by the Oscar Straus Memorial Association on Government-owned land to honor the memory of the first Secretary of Commerce.

can), of Illinois, likened the building now under construction to "a rather resplendent stockade . . . which looks like a ball park."

"But I suppose they think a press release from down there will be more effective than a 1000-pound bomb," he added. "I suppose it was no accident it was built close enough to the Treasury to be able to reach out of a window and squeeze more money out of the pockets of the taxpayers from which all blessings flow.

"They propose to ensconse on that site a new temple of wisdom and thinking and to acquaint the people with what the Government is thinking and doing.

"It's a shame and an outrage that this should happen. It's a fine example to the people of this country when you shout at them for national unity."

Earlier in the day Representative Jennings (Republican), of Tennessee, declared sarcastically before the House: "In order to add to the gayety of nations, that sum would have employed a whole chorus of fan dancers, 125 in number, and we could have a Roman holiday here, to the disgust of the whole country.

"Mr. Mellett is shortly to go down there in that building . . . and have a corps of boys and girls from the rural precincts throughout the country, who certainly do not know anything about the Government setup here, but whose function it will be to advise business men when they come to Washington seeking Government business where to find the people with whom they want to do business."

Brazil to Sell U. S. Two Axis Vessels

Rio de Janeiro, March 10 (AP).—The United States has completed a deal with Brazil for the 24,000-ton former Italian liner Conte Grande and the 16,000-ton former German Windhuk, official sources said today.

The Axis ships holed up in Brazilian ports when the war started and subsequently were taken over by the Brazilian government.

Answers Easy For Miss Root, U. S. Authority

The United States Information Service, which will be the featured unit of the Office of Government Reports in its huge new building now being erected on Pennsylvania Avenue west of Post Square, was started in 1934 under the direction of Harriet Root—usually known as the "woman who knows all of Uncle Sam's business."

Miss Root and a staff of 50 answer questions covering everything from location of mica deposits to the number of Britishers now in Washington and whether to wear a white or black tie to the White House.

Whether Congressmen realize it or not, they use the service extensively. At the beginning of each term, new secretaries are called together and Miss Root invited to address them. Bill Young, information director for the Capitol Hill Secretaries' Club, said yesterday that Miss Root has been made an honorary member of the group "she is so helpful."

"At the First Nighters' program we always tell the new ones to call Miss Root if they get stumped about anything. We have more than 300 active members, but I don't think any of them have asked her anything yet she couldn't answer," he said.

War and defense made changes in the type of information desired, Miss Root said yesterday, and also increased the demand for it many times over. Federal offices, women's clubs, school children, magazines and newspapers, businessmen, and visitors trying to find someone who worked in the Government were named as a few of her "customers."

During the past year, the service received 28,076 requests in person, 115,682 by telephone, and 46,355 by letter. Requests from members of Congress numbered 9162, an increase of approximately 20 per cent over the previous year.

To fill the "stated needs" of teachers, civilian defense clubs, women's clubs and similar groups, information packets on specific subjects last year were assembled by the service for distribution on a loan basis. According to OGR's annual report, the packets cover, among other subjects: the War Program, the Armed Forces and Related Services, Selling to the Government, Nutrition, Women in Defense, and Citizenship. Official pamphlets and mimeographed material on the subjects are contained in the pamphlets.

Goodwillie To Testify On Housing

Arthur Goodwillie, of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, today will discuss his project to remodel homes in nine square blocks of Southwest Washington for Federal war workers as the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee considers the Senate-approved bill authorizing 70 million dollars for war housing and public works in the District area.

The District Commmissioners also have been invited to appear before the committee when it meets in the caucus room of the House Office Building at 10 a. m. today, Chairman Lanham announced last night.

The Goodwillie project, which would cost five million dollars and remodel homes in the area bounded by F and I Streets and Fourth and Delaware Avenue Southwest, was approved by the Senate when it raised the House-passed authorization for the total housing program from 50 million dollars to 70 millions.

As earmarked by the Senate Education and Labor Committee, 45 million dollars would go for approximately 10,000 permanent homes for Federal war workers here and 25 millions for facilitating public works.

Included in the proposed public works programs are funds for an additional 2100 beds in local hospitals, funds for more school rooms, expanded road, water, lighting and sewer facilities.

43 Jap Planes Downed by 'Tigers'

New Delhi, India, March 10 (AP).—The American Volunteer Group fliers in Burma destroyed 43 Japanese planes last week, dispatches received here today said.

In all, 60 or 70 A. V. G. pilots have been engaged in the Burma campaign, of whom only 7 have been lost in combat since hostilities began.

Two-Story Construction Shack Child of 'Great Boondoggle'

1 'PREP SCHOOL FOR MELLETT'S MADHOUSE'—To look at it you'd think it was a large part of Lowell Mellett's fast-growing information bureau building. But, no. Oh, no! It's just the builder's construction "shack," put up at the Government's expense preparatory to the actual start of work on the "madhouse"

2 TYPICAL OF THE GREAT BOONDOGGLE is the way in which the roof is being put on the "shack." It's being put on backwards! That is from the top down instead of the usual bottom up

The "great boondoggle" fathered a child yesterday.

The gigantic temporary office building being constructed on Pennsylvania Avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets Northwest to serve as an overgrown information bureau for Lowell Mellett's Office of Government Reports and as a headquarters for Mellett has become a major construction project in the last few days.

In fact, it is such a huge project that the contractors on the job, the Charles H. Tompkins Co., have been compelled to build a fairly large temporary office building to house a supervisory staff pending completion of the venture scheduled 60 days hence.

This construction "shack" which is as large as a block of two-story row houses will be paid for out of Government funds allocated for the joc—a cost-plus fixed fee affair. Thus far the project cost has been estimated at $600,000, but no one was willing to estimate what part of it would go for the "shack."

The construction office is about twice the size of the construction office which John W. Harris Associates installed on the site of the partially completed Hotel Statler, a $8,500,000 job. A Public Buildings Administration official glibly explained the difference by saying that the Statler job was not being done on a "cost-plus" basis.

Because of the cost plus arrangement, the Government must station a large crew of timekeepers, inspectors, accountants, engineers and clerks on the job to see that it is done within the estimate and that the Governments gets full value received.

This official declined to estimate the number of such extra persons that would be required, but indicated that they would fill up all space in the temporary construction building not occupied by engineers and other employes of Tompkins needed on the spot to do the actual Work.

The "shack" is a two-story affair. A Tompkins official explained that there was not enough room on the 48,000-square-foot lot to build a one-story "shack."

A construction man not attached to the job noticed that green roofing covering was being applied from the top down, instead of from the bottom up. But a Tompkins man explained that it did not matter, "so long as the rolls lap."

A PBA official declared that the agency was hiring the "brains" of the Tompkins outfit to do the job and that they were sure that Tompkins knew what it was doing.

He was not worried over the fact that the Government will have to foot the bills for his gigantic "shack."

War Jobless' Payment Again Shelved

House Group Votes Against Funds, 7 to 5

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration's second plan within a month to provide relief and training for war-displaced workers yesterday was rejected by a Congressional committee.

The program appeared shelved for the session. The House appropriations subcommittee on deficiencies followed the lead of the House Ways and Means Committee in turning thumbs down on war-displaced labor benefits, 7 to 5.

Pigeonholing action came on a 100 million dollar appropriation recommended March 3 by President Roosevelt to enable the Works Projects Administration to provide jobs and training for men temporarily out of work during war conversion of factories.

Original Plan Tabled

The original, far broader program, authorizing 300 million dollars to pay up to $24 a week in Government-subsidized unemployment benefits to the war's jobless, was tabled last month by the Ways and Means Committee.

State officials insisted at the time that State agencies could adequately meet the problem. Administration spokesmen denied this and said war unemployment is a National responsibility.

Weeks of controversy raged on the original proposal, with State governors protesting that it would mean "Federalization" of State unemployment systems. The Administration revised its plans, avoided the controversial social security issue, and submitted the second measure, narrowly limited to WPA. It was this second bill that was killed yesterday.

Chairman Cannon, of the House Appropriations Committee, who sponsored the WPA relief proposal, said he plans no further action.

Won't Attempt Revival

Only by a full committee vote to discharge the subcommittee could the bill be revived, and this will not be attempted.

Voting for the bill were Representatives Cannon, Ludlow of Indiana, Johnson of Oklahoma, Snyder of Pennsylvania and Rabaut of Michigan (Democrats). Voting "no" were Representatives Woodrum of Virginia, O'Neal of Kentucky and Johnson of West Virginia (Democrats) and Taber of New York, Wigglesworth of Massachusetts, Lambertson of Kansas and Ditter of Pennsylvania (Republicans).

Before the subcommittee vote, Howard O. Hunter, commissioner of works projects, and Ralph Hetzel, jr., of the C. I. O., testified in support of the outlay in executive session. Hunter said skilled workers must be given temporary work and training near the scene of war-converted factories lest they be forced to seek jobs elsewhere.

Hetzel presented a statement by President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. estimating that between 750,000 and one million workers have already been displaced and 'this number may be more than doubled." Murray asked an increase in the appropriation to 150 million dollars, payment of prevailing wages and that projects "be clearly designated as nonrelief."

Taber Finds No Evidence

Taber said there was no evidence that the unemployment problem was acute and WPA relief "should not be encouraged when there is a shortage of men to do essential work."

Rabaut, whose State of Michigan is hardest hit by war conversion of the automobile industry, said the majority had taken a "narrow view." He said failure of the bill will "create a bottleneck."

In a letter from Budget Director Smith forwarded to Congress by President early this month, Smith said the 100 million dollars would create one million man-months of work.

"In the circumstances," Smith said, "it is essential that everything possible be done to provide means whereby these unemployed may be trained for positions in the war industries or may be employed on work essential to the national defense pending the time of their re-employment in industry."

Greiner, 22-year-old Fort Myer soldier accused of the robbery-beating of Alfred Demazzon, head waiter at the Carlton, last Friday, waived preliminary hearing and was ordered held under $10,000 bond for grand jury action on a charge of robbery when he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday morning.

Meantime Demazzon, who told police Greiner severely beat him and then walked off with $40 in cash and jewelry valued at more than $1000 following an argument in Demazzon's apartment at 1921 Nineteenth Street Northwest, was reported making rapid progress toward recovery at Emergency Hospital.

Japs in Spain Seeking Data To Split U. S.

Japanese Embassy attaches in Madrid, Spain, have set up shop to purchase items of "information" usable as propaganda to destroy the American Government and create disunity, the Office of Fact and Figures reported last night.

The Jap Embassy in technically neutral Spain is the center of the propaganda plot, the OFF said, and is using the city as a "market place of gossip in which to shop for propaganda material to be passed on to secret agents and Fifth Columnists in the United States."

Evidence on this activity, OFF Director Archibald MacLeish announced, was in a report described as "utterly reliable," but necessarily confidential, lest the source be disclosed.

MacLeish cited the report as an indication of the effectiveness of American counterpropaganda organizations of both the American military and civil agencies.

The Jap officials in Madrid, the report said, are particularly interested in obtaining items under the following classifications:

"1. Political and economic problems that might make possible the weakening or overthrow of the Roosevelt government.

"2. Racial questions that might lead to disunity.

"3. Social problems and problems related to inflation."

The OFF commented on the "shrewd alertness" of Axis propagandists in catching and capitalizing statements of former isolationists, which are used to create disaffection in South America.

Mentioned specifically was a Fascist radio commentator's broadcast attempting to show Latin-American republics what a feeble ally they had in the United States by announcing:

"The president of the American Senate Navy Committee stated in the Senate that the United States coasts are practically defenseless, and that the day will soon come when it will be necessary to call the American Navy, which is far away, to protect the coasts."

The reference was apparently to Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who stated on February 17 that the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts were "almost defenseless" and that the need might arise some day "to recall our depleted fleet" from possible battle zones to defend this area.

House Votes 367 to 0 to Raise Debt Limit to 125 Billions

The House yesterday approved a 60-billion-dollar increase in the national debt while the House Ways and Means Committee considered billions in new taxes, including a retail sales levy to help the Government meet spiraling war costs.

The increase in the statutory debt limit from 65 to 125 billion dollars was approved by a roll call vote of 367 to 0. Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, told the House that the Treasury is rapidly approaching the end of its borrowing authority and the new limit must be fixed before the end of this month.

Earlier the Ways and Means Committee, leaning strongly toward a sales tax despite Treasury opposition, heard W. J. Schieffelin, jr., New York State Chamber of Commerce spokesman, recommend a gradual retail sales tax ranging from 2 per cent on food and low-priced necessities to 10 per cent on other items.

Schieffelin opposed enactment at this time of the entire seven-billion-dollar tax program recommended by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Opposes 7 Billions in Taxes

He said four billion dollars could be raised from a retail sales tax and another one billion dollars from steeper taxes on corporations and individuals, in a bill yielding a total of five billion dollars. He said a subcommittee, meanwhile, should start work on a bill yielding another two billions for enactment next fall.

Schieffelin urged that Congress couple with taxes slashes in appropriation bills aggregating more than $1,300,000,000.

Collection of taxes by withholding at the source, recommended by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Schieffelin said, "should be held in abeyance at least until our citizens have adjusted themselves to the 1941 rates, plus the retail sales tax and until our Government imposes an effective price control law including farm prices and wages, thus insuring that the people's money will continue to buy what they need instead of being chiseled away by creeping inflation."

As the House moved to lift the debt limit, the Treasury's daily statement placed the public debt at $62,489,937,466. Chairman Doughton reported to the House that the debt will reach $70,600,000,000 by June 30 and $110,400,000,000 a year later.

Other provisions of the bill approved yesterday by the House give the Treasury more flexible control over Government securities, permit payment of taxes with Government securities redeemable on demand and terminate the issuance of postal savings stamps when defense stamps are issued by the Treasury.

Economies Demanded

Demands for greater governmental economies mingled with warnings against inflation in the debate preceding the vote.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, said the debt increase meant "we are placing a mortgage on the homes, farms, businesses, productive capacity and industrial genius of our country," but urged the House to stop thinking about group interests and "concentrate on winning the war." He added, "After the war has been won, we can begin the hard task of liquidating this debt."

Representative Reed (Republican), of New York, said, "Congress must, if it would save this country, cut out every nonessential expenditure."

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, charged WPA "boondoggling" is continuing in the face of mounting war costs. He said WPA has approved $940,000 for a New York "music promotion" project.

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, said 125 billion dollars was equal to the assessed valuation of all property in the United States, but said there was no alternative to raising the debt limit.

The captain and 21 crewmen of the 5104-ton freighter Cardonia of the Lykes Brothers Steampship Co. were landed yesterday in northwest Haiti after their vessel was reportedly sunk on Saturday.

At Baracoa, Cuba, the 39 crewmen of the 7932-ton Panamanian tanker Hanseat also were landed yesterday. Their ship, owned by the Panama Transport Co., a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co., was torpedoed and shelled 20 miles off the eastern tip of Cuba.

The third ship was not identified, but 39 crewmen were landed at Kingston, St. Vincent, British West Indies. The survivors, many of them injured, reported that two men died in lifeboats. One man died after reaching shore. No details were given on the sinking.

An Axis submarine with a deadly aim split the Gulftrade in two.

The 19 missing men were in two lifeboats carried away by high waves, and blimps, surface craft and planes opened an immediate search.

Traveling northward fully loaded, the 22-year-old vessel was attacked only 60 miles from New York City.

"After we got as far as Barnegat we thought we were safe," Capt. Torger Olsen, of Port Arthur, Tex., said. "A few minutes before we were struck we saw two ships ahead of us. In order to avoid a collision I ordered the running lights to be put on. We were torpedoed while the lights were burning."

Capt. Olsen's account differed slightly from that of the Navy. He said the vessel was hit 3½ miles east of Barnegat Lighthouse and 42 miles from Ambrose Lightship.

"All I wish," said Olsen, "is that they would put me aboard a Coast Guard cutter so I could go out to sea and hunt that sub that sank my ship."

The Navy said the 5152-ton Brazilian liner Cayru was sunk between 7 and 7:30 p. m. (E. W. T.) Sunday night about 130 miles off Ambrose Light at the entrance to New York harbor.

The Navy said the first torpedo, coming without warning, struck the bow of the Cayru and failed to explode. The second struck amidships and the ship broke in two and began to sink at once.

All pasengers and crewmen got off in four boats but a howling gale soon separated the boats. A United Nations ship rescued the survivors landed yesterday after they spent 15½ hours in the pitching lifeboat.

Virginian Rescued

Four American-born naturalized citizens of Brazil were saved. They were Mrs. Willie De Sousa, her 15-year-old daughter, June, and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jaegers. They were taken to Ellis Island. Mrs. De Sousa was the former Willie Sanders, of Bedford, Va.

The Navy said the submarine surfaced and its commander, speaking in broken English that resembled German, asked the Cayru's captain the name of his ship and its destination. The captain is missing.

Collision With Freight Cars Derails Locomotive

GENERAL VIEW of the train wreck yesterday on the B. & O. main line under the Franklin Street overpass between Seventh and Eighth Streets Northeast. The locomotive of a Washington-bound passenger train was derailed and overturned when it crashed into the rear of a 14-car freight train. Caboose of the freight was smashed in accordion fashion between a steel-sided car and the locomotive. Fire destroyed it further. W. A. Summbers (inset), of Martinsburg, W. Va., fireman, escaped unhurt, as did the engineer, after crawling through a window of the locomotive

Women Must Take Millions of Jobs

taking jobs by family responsibilities, but said flatly:

"The groups from which most of the additional workers must be drawn are the women engaged in home housework or not in the labor force fo rother reasons."

Although the report predicted a shift of young, unmarried women from rural areas into cities where they could be directly employed in war industries, it said that the great majority of the needed increase in the labor supply must come from women in urban and rural nonfarm areas.

When the population count was made on April 1, 1940, there were 50,600,000 males over 14 years of afe, of whom 39,900,000 already were in the labor force. Of the remaining number, about four million were 14 to 17 years and in school, three million were unable to work because of old age, chronic illness or disability, 800,000 were in penal and mental institutions.

About one million, the bureau said, were students 18 or older, the most important group from which new labor might be drawn. Another one million were not in the labor force for various reasons and included many potential war workers.

21 More Cities Want to Copy District Penny Milk Program

Penny milk for underprivileged children, introduced here two months ago after an extended campaign by The Post, is spreading throughout the country, the Department of Agriculture revealed yesterday.

The program, in which the local government or private sponsoring agency buys the milk at 1 cent a half-pint and the Surplus Marketing Administration bears the cost difference, has been approved for 18 more cities and counties.

Investigations are being conducted preparatory to launching penny milk in 21 other cities and counties.

These are in addition to the nine cities, including Washington, where the program already is in operation.

Cities whose undernourished school children will soon be getting the milk are: Toledo, Ohio; Phoenix, Ariz.; Des Moines, Iowa; Minneapolis, Minn.; Athens County, Ohio; Pulaski County, Ark., (Little Rock); Duluth, Minn.; Superior, Wis.; Virginia, Minn.; Waterloo, Iowa; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Belleville, Ill.; Moline, Ill.; Rock Island, Ill.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Fort Madison, Iowa; Muscatine, Iowa, and Harrisburg, Ill.

Cities where the subsidized half-pints are now being distributed are: Lowell-Lawrence, Mass.; Boston, New York City, Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis, Madison, Wis.; Davenport, Iowa, and Washington.

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Industry, Labor To Crush Strikes, Says Miss Perkins

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins yesterday told a House Appropriations Subcommittee in executive session that the Nation need have no fear of any major strikes for the duration of the war.

Testifying in closed session before the committee considering appropriations for the labor and Social Security agencies for next year, Miss Perkins expressed the belief that the present agreement between management and organized labor will be adequate to quell all strikes during the war period.

Similar testimony was given by Assistant Secretary of Labor Dan Tracy, it was learned.

Secretary Perkins admitted that "wildcat" strikes may break out from time to time, but said that they will be small and will be crushed without delay by the combined efforts of industry and labor.

'Prosecution Complex' Laid To Sen. Lucas

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The man the Senate has charged with responsibility for the conduct of proceedings to deny a seat to Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, on charges involving "moral turpitude," yesterday heard himself accused of having a "prosecution complex."

In one of a series of angry clashes that have characterized two days of Senate debate of the Langer case, Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, attributed the complex to Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the subcommittee designated to investigate the two-time Governor of North Dakota.

Lucas "adopted the prosecution complex rather than a judicial attitude as required in the presentation of such a grave matter to the Senate," Brown declared. He urged Lucas to "get out of that frame of mind."

Tried to Be Fair, He Says

Lucas, who has been on his feet almost continuously for two Senate sessions, wearily replied that he had tried to be fair, but that he probably had said some things to Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, that he should not have said.

Brown's attack on Lucas came after he and Senator White (Republican), of Maine, asked if the Elections Committee which has recommended the "exclusion" of Langer as unfit to sit in the Senate, had examined the books of the Great Northern Railway to determine if the company had repaid one of its attorneys the $25,000 the committee charges was paid Langer for "worthless" Mexican land stock.

Brown contended the committee's report on the land stock deal to be "such as to make a suspicious story," but complained that the proof is lacking. Lucas pointedly observed that final payment of $12,475 for the stock was made by the attorney, Thomas Sullivan, of Chicago, a few days before three million dollars was "lopped off" the Great Northern's State tax valuation when Langer was Governor in 1938.

Langer "Great Fighter"

Senator Ellender, who has told his colleagues he considers Langer a "great fighter," accused the committee of presenting "conclusions instead of facts."

Lucas laid before the Senate yesterday two charges which, with the land deal charge, the committee considers to be the most serious against Langer. These are that he paid money to the son of a judge trying him for conspiracy, with the implication that the son was hired for unethical purposes, and that he accepted from one of the beneficiaries of North Dakota bond transactions—made while Langer was Governor—$56,000 for land with "an equitable value of $5600."

Lucas called to the attention of the Senate the fact that Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, one of the signers of a minority report of the Elections Committee—a report which Lucas off the floor said was prepared principally by Francis Murphy, Langer counsel—was one of the most aggressive cross-examiners of Langer during hearings on the case.

"There are a lot of things in the record that I connot condone, that I cannot square with my own conscience," Murdock said.

1000 M.P.H. Flight Envisioned; Man Can Endure It—Sikorsky

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., March 10.—Dr. Igor I. Sikorsky, the Russian-born aeronautics expert who designed the first four-motored bomber and the first transoceanic flying boats, declared today that human beings can "take" speeds of 1000 miles per hour in level flight.

"Such speeds are not possible with the airplanes of today," he said in an interview here before delivering an address on aeronautics at the Georgia Institute of Technology, "but they may be in the future."

Dr. Sikorsky talked with members of the Southeastern Surgical Congress meeting here and gave the physicians and surgeons some lessons on aviation medicine. A shy, courteous little man, he was abashed to discover that he knew more than his listeners about this particular branch of medicine.

"Horizontal flight even at 1000 miles per hour would have no more effect on the body than traveling 60 miles per hour in an automobile or train," he declared.

"Also vertical flight such as dive bombing is not dangerous except in the 'pull out,' when the weight of a man's body is multiplied by the force of gravity," he declared, and if his weight is multiplied five or six time he loses consciousness because of the blood being drained out of his brain.

This is the limiting factor in the use of airplanes in war, he told the surgeons, who are going through an intensive three-day course in wartime medical problems. "We can make planes which can withstand strains far greater than the pilot can take."

Dr. Sikorsky declared present airplane designs will be declared crude within a few years because they are limited to the speed of sound—approximately 745 miles per hour. Such speeds are already being attained in laboratories, but at such terrific velocity the propellers, moving faster than the speed of sound, are likely to crack to pieces and tear an airplane apart.

Asked what the answer is to the problem of achieving such a speed of 1000 miles per hour in an airplane, Dr. Sikorsky replied:

"Frankly, I don't know. I'm just a beginner in the science of aeronautics. It may be through rocket propulsion of airplanes or it may come from some entirely new principle in aeronautics."

Methodist Church Unit to Hold Party

With service men as special guests, more than 500 young members of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and their friends will attend a party tonight at 8 o'clock in American University gymnasium. President Dr. Paul F. Douglass will be host.

The party will climax the church's Young Adult Fellowship School for Christian Living, at which Dr. Douglass was an instructor. He will lead the grand march. Phil Hayden's Studio of Dance will present a floor show.

Fort Resigns Post In Secretaries' Club

Resignation of James H. Fort as vice president of the Congressional Secretaries Club was announced last night at a meeting of the group in the caucus room of the House Office Building. An election was set for next Tuesday night to elect a successor to Fort, who is secretary to Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia.

The club made plans for its annual banquet to be held April 15 at the National Press Club. Charles J. Brenner, adviser at the Civil Service Commission, spoke on a retirement system for congressional employes.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

97th Annual Statement to its Policyholders

The year 1942 finds this country in the throes of a war economy. All of the country's resources, all of its man power must be devoted primarily to the winning of the war if we are to preserve our institutions, our freedom, our independence. How does this obligation, which rests upon every one of us, affect a life insurance company and the responsibilities of management?

A year ago we said in our annual report: "The management of a life insurance company has a primary responsibility to its policyholders to invest the funds of the company and to conduct its affairs so that the company will be able promptly to meet all its contractual obligations to policyholders and beneficiaries when they fall due." And we added: "The discharge of that responsibility carries with it a great opportunity for service to the public at large."

War, particularly so devastating and extensive a war as the present one, does not lessen in the slightest either this responsibility to protect the policyholders or the opportunity for service. On the contrary, because of the uncertainties and hazards—economic, social and individual—which are inevitably incident to such a war, these responsibilities and these opportunities are greater, not less.

The Company has lived through four wars in which the United States was involved—the Mexican War, the War Between the States, the Spanish-American War and the First World War. During each of these conflicts the Company continued to grow in usefulness and service, both to the policyholders and to the country. It safeguarded its assets, it met its obligations, and at the same time, when needed, it aided in the financing of those wars. We must do no less today.

Early in December, following the declaration of war, the Directors of the Company considered the Company's course of action in the light of war conditions. The course then determined was, we believe, a conservative one. The reserves against the Company's contractual obligations were further strengthened, its real estate and mortgage loan assets were reappraised on a strict basis, and the funds held for general contingencies were substantially increased. As a result, a smaller amount of divisible surplus was available for the payment of dividends for the year 1942.

This action has added material to the fundamental strength of the Company and to the long-range protection of the policyholders themselves. This is important now that our country is engaged in a war which carries with it inevitable economic strains and future adjustments.

The Statement of Condition of the Company which accompanies this report continues to reflect great strength.

The year 1942 is a year for action, not words. In these circumstances this report is made as brief as possible.

A more complete report as of December 31, 1941, containing additional statistical and other information of interest about the Company, will be sent upon request. A list of the bonds and the guaranteed and preferred stocks owned by the Company is also available. These booklets may be obtained by writing to the New York Life Insurance Company, 51 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

PAUL YOUNG'S NEW BAND. Fresh as a daisy and dizzy as a hollyhock—that's the new orchestra that's just made its bow at Paul Young's. A fine selection of our town's smartest musicians has been made, with Ray Hyman leading from the sax; Tris Auer (formerly with Charlie Spivak) trumpeting, Tony Gaudio beating the drums, Ross del Ray at the piano and Hank Saltman as the tenor saxist . . . Singer Ugo Martinelli of the floor-show appeared with Sally Rand for 56 weeks, says "Life then was just a bowl of bubbles."

Seeing a major general in an unfamiliar uniform in the King Cole Room, Eve Knight caroled all the national songs she knew, figuring one of them would be right. He turned out to be a Norwegian. But he saluted Evie gallantly, and she's planning to learn the Norwegian national anthem.

THE APACHES ARE COMING! Lucienne and Ashour, the rare Parisian apache and comedy dancers who came to this country with the "Folies Bertgere" a couple of seasons ago, will open at the Troika tomorrow. They starred at Miami's Royal Palms earlier in the season.

WAR MUSIC. Talia is singing the "Hawaiian War Chant" at the Shoreham this week with a fire that shows she's intrinsically like her brother, Capt. Arthur Wermuth. Bataan's bad news to the Jappies . . . Most taking war song we've heard of is "The Son-of-a-Gun Who Picks on Uncle Sam" being played by Carl Hoff's orchestra in Del Rio. Carl has recorded the number for Columbia and you'll also be hearing its peppery and truly American lyrics in "Panama Hattie" when that picture reaches town.

"Ha-Cha" Gardner's return to the Mayflower Lounge has been delayed until next Monday. Seems he's delayed by some arrangements about planning crops for his Maryland farm and finding a caretaker for his Afghan hounds (half rodent, half reptile).

BETTEJANE GREER, only 17, who's Crossroads' new singing discovery

The Don Rinaldo Four, just arrived at El Patio, has been scouted by Universal, is looking forward to making movie shorts.

MEMORIES THAT BLESS AND BURN. Maestro Don Carper, of the Cafe Caprice, likes to remember the days when he played in the last edition of the Ziegfeld Follies with beauteous Meredith Howard, hostess of the Saturday "international luncheons at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. . . . Get Mischa Bess, Balalaika's head man, to tell you about the fishing trip he took with Douglas Fairbanks. Mischa can't look at a bucket of water without feeling qualmish in his innards. You can guess the rest . . . Singer Julie Colt, of the Pall Mall Room, smiles when she recalls all the eerie things that happened when she ran her own "straw hat" theater . . . Pianist Gustav Heintze, of Restaurant "823," played for movie star Louise Rainer when she was a Viennese entertainer. But Gustav doesn't like to remember Vienna. Maestro Grant Thompson, of the Neptune Room, once made a series of educational movie shorts, says: "I decided to leave Hollywood flat when they didn't give me an Oscar."

Paul Kain's Four will stay on in Mayfair until April 1, when Paul will have to get ready his Glen Echo band. Promotion Manager Al Orrisen is looking all over the country for a clever unit, to take their place. (Four-F ratings preferred.)

SIGNS OF SPRING. Copocabana's rumba band is getting new blue ruffled blouses with orange sashes and scarfs . . . Charlie Rock and his Hi Hat Four have exploded a piece of rhythm dynamite called "There's a Lull in the House" . . . Minstrel Les Colvin of Restaurant "400" is rushing back and forth daily to his Virginia farm . . . Chief chefess Pearl Best, of the Burlington Hotel, is planning "defense menus" that are 1000 per cent vitamins . . . Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, is reading House and Garden instead of Variety . . . The Kavakos Grill floor show includes a bunch of boxing cats!

Night spot musical treat of the week promises to be the Saturday evening opening of Carl Strassny's group at the Empire Restaurant. Each member of the group is of symphony orchestra caliber.

SUBURBAN ROVING. The Nightingale is crowded in cold weather and what it'll be like now that warmer days are here, we're afraid to guess. But even if they put out the S. R. O. sign, the Jack Maggio music will be a treat . . . You should see those boys from Camp Belvoir eat at the River Bend "Piggy Parties!" The puzzle is how they have enough energy to dance afterward . . . Gerry Black's band will continue to draw crowds at the Log Tavern, even if the boys and girls should have to bicycle down there.

House Painter Dies After Fall From Ladder on Roof

Warren Roosevelt Tickle, 35, was fatally injured yesterday at 12:45 p. m. when he fell from a house he was painting at 607 Kenyon Street Northwest.

Tickle, an employe of the Kay Realty Co., 5626 Georgia Avenue Northwest, was standing on a step-ladder on the roof of the front porch of the house when, police said, he lost his balance and fell, first to the porch roof and then to the pavement in front of the home. He was removed to Casualty Hospital and pronounced dead on arrival. Death was attributed to a fractured skull.

The body was removed to the morgue, where a decision as to whether to hold an inquest awaited the outcome of an investigation into the accident.

Tickle resided at the home of Joseph Still, 614 Fifth Street Northwest, who said he had been a roomer there for about a year and a half. Still said Tickle was unmarried and came to Washington from Welcome, N. C., where he has a brother and sister.

TWO ORIGINAL PATTERNS FROM

Household Arts

A WASHINGTON POST PATTERN SERVICE

Alice Brooks Pattern Number 7156

This crocheted mitten and cap set (Pattern No. 7156), designed by Alice Brooks, is a winsome twosome for a bright-eyed youngster or smart 'teenager. The braided edging and tassel trim on both mittens and the pillbox cap is jaunty; afghan yarn, in two brilliant contrasting colors. Even a novice will find Pattern 7156 simple to follow. To obtain this pattern send ten cents in coin to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 259 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Alice Brooks Pattern Number 6848

Exclusively his—or hers! These gay embroidery motifs (Pattern No. 6848) are a clever, modern way of identifying towels that will delight both newlyweds and settled homemakers. Fine for a bathroom shared by both brother and sister. This is a typical example of the clever needlework designs by Alice Brooks which are such favorites with our women readers—look for this feature regularly on the woman's page of The Washington Post. To obtain pattern 6848 send ten cents in coin to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 259 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

Farm Bloc Sees Victory In Parity Row

By the Associated Press

House farm bloc leaders asserted yesterday that President Roosevelt's farm speech Monday night had not won any votes for elimination from the agricultural appropriation bill of a prohibition against below-parity sales of Government-held commodities.

They reiterated their confidence that the House would accept the ban when a preliminary vote is taken, probably late today.

The President's speech, warning that increased farm prices would contribute to inflation, "will have no affect on the outcome of the House fight," was the opinion of Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia.

Tarver, who has been handling the farm bill since the House started debate on it last Tuesday, pointed out that the President made no direct reference to the sales prohibition.

"I believe we have the necessary votes to retain the ban," he told reporters.

His confidence was shared by Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, who contended the President's remarks had no direct bearing on the issue before the House.

Administration leaders, however, insisted they would have enough strength to strike the prohibition from the bill. They have repeatedly backed up the President's earlier declaration that acceptance of the prohibition would add a billion dollars to the Nation's food costs.

As the seventh day of debate on the 695 million dollar supply measure approached, some of the most controversial provisions remained unsettled.

They included committee-recommended reductions in funds for administration of the food stamp plan, continuance of benefit payments to sugar growers, deep slashes in funds for farm tenant loans and for loans and grants for rural rehabilitation, and a 90 million dollar reduction in the borrowing power of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Reductions in funds available for the Farm Security Administration were recommended by the committee after it had sharply criticized some of the FSA's past activities.

This criticism was carried before the Rules Committee yesterday by Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, who accused the agency of conducting "experiments in communism" through its collective farming projects.

Cooley asked the committee to approve a resolution ordering an investigation of the FSA, but the committee deferred a decision until Thursday.

Conferees Agree On Postal Pay

Senator Meade (Democrat), New York, announced yesterday that conferees had agreed on legislation to reward postal employes for long service.

As approved by the conferees, Mead said postal employes other than postmasters would receive an increase of $84 a year at the end of ten years' service, and $60 after an additional five years. A Senate amendment allowing a percentage increase for third and fourth class postmasters was eliminated, but Mead said separate legislation on this would be prepared.

Rent File Deadline Moved Up to Saturday

Almost literally swept off his feet by last-minute crowds of landlords trying to get their rent schedules filed on time, Rent Commissioner Robert F. Cogswell moved last night's deadline for the filing up to Saturday noon.

Although the rooming house proprietors had had since February 27 to file the reports, showing the facilities, rates and tenancy of every house in Washington accommodating more than three roomers, most of them waited until last warning was given over the weekend to get the schedules in.

More than 100 persons were waiting at the rent administration offices at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest when the offices opened.

'Quit Fiddling,' Says Taber; Hits Music Boondoggle

By the Associated Press

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, told the House yesterday, as it opened debate on the $350,650,826 appropriations bill for the War Department's civil functions, that the WPA had aproved a $940,106 music project for the City of New York.

"Isn't it time to quit fiddling around?" he asked, urging his colleagues to slash from the pending measure all boondoggling projects and all nonessentials to defense. "The money for this music project would be enough to buy three bombers."

Taber read a description of the project, which he said was sponsored by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York.

Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, asked Taber if the mayor he referred to was "the same Mayor of New York who recently resigned as head of the Office of Civilian Defense?"

"Yes," replied Taber, "and the same one who told us that he would not appoint some of these boondogglers when he appeared before our committee."

"Apparently he has transferred the activities of the OCD to New York City," remarked Case.

Wherry Named G. O. P. Western Director

Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., yesterday announced appointment of Kenneth S. Wherry, of Pawnee, Nebr., as Western director for the national committee. Wherry, chairman of the Nebraska State Republican Committee, will be the liaison officer between Chairman Martin and the Republican chairmen in Western States.

Wherry graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1914, attended Harvard University in 1915 and 1916 and served in the World War as a member of the flying corps. He served four terms as Mayor of Pawnee City and represented his district in the State Legislature for two terms from 1929 to 1933.

He has been a member of the Nebraska State Central Committee for a number of years and in January, 1940, was chosen State chairman.

Although a practicing lawyer, he is the owner of a retail furniture and implement store and several farms.

Wherry Pledges Fight

Pawnee City, Nebr., March 10 (AP).—Kenneth S. Wherry, newly appointed Western director for the Republican National Committee, said today he would endeavor to "coordinate the Middle West States into militant, aggressive, active Republican organizations that will win elections all along the line."

He said it was especially important to elect "Congressmen and United States Senators who in turn will see that we have an efficient, two fisted leadership in Washington and an administration efficient enough to win the war and at the same time to continuously fight for our republican form of Government."

Wherry said the appointment would "in no way interfere" if he should decide to run for office. He has been mentioned as a possible senatorial candidate.

KEEP 'EM "ROLLING"

HEAVY TRAINS speeding incredible quantities of raw materials to America's expanding factories — getting there on schedule — and rushing finished war equipment to ships eager to sail . . .

Keep 'em "Rolling" is the cry. And America's railroads measure up to their tremendous task . . . with Timken Roller Bearings contributing importantly to their accomplishment.

FACTORIES going at top speed day and night . . . producing mighty bombers, swift pursuit planes, heavy artillery, huge tanks — the weapons of Victory, equipped with roller bearings.

MACHINE TOOLS, many times more productive because of roller bearings, setting a tireless pace for relays of workers grim with remembrance of Pearl Harbor . . . doing the impossible now, ready for more . . .

Timken plays an important part in stepping up essential war production. With Americans everywhere, Timken men and management are resolved to: Keep 'em "Rolling"

Unsung Heroes

There is encouraging news from the Maritime Commission that more and more American merchant ships are being equipped with guns and personnel to man them. This at least indicates awareness of the hazards of ocean commerce and of the need to protect crews and cargoes. One cannot help observing, however, that arming merchant ships must contribute but little to the peace of mind of the men who live and work on the high seas. It is comforting, to be sure, to know that you have some means of fighting back, if an enemy surface raider or submarine is sighted. But time and again in this war, as in the last one, ships have been torpedoed without their members being aware of an enemy's presence. The grim fact, of course, is that the men of the merchant marine brave sinking whenever they venture out of port. For the risk they take they are compensated in part by wartime bonuses and personal insurance. So also, it might be pointed out, are a good many employes in comparatively snug berths ashore. Yet seamen, some of them survivors of sinkings, are sticking to their jobs with a tenacity that surpasses the comprehension of most landlubbers. This is the sort of spirit that helps win wars. It will help win this war, if the rest of the country borrows some of the tough-mindedness of the merchant marine.

Last Classicist

Those who have studied the movements of Jose Raoul Capablanca in some of his more celebrated tournament games declare that the spiritual effect of this study is much like that of hearing classical music. Capablanca's masterpieces, it is said, have all the refinement, elegance and beauty of pattern that one is accustomed to associate with, say, a Mozart concerto. The same words might have been used to describe the personality of this remarkable Cuban. Chess geniuses tend, like most other mathematical geniuses, to a kind of lopsided development, but Capablanca came perhaps as near as any celebrity of our times to fulfilling the renaissance ideal of the "complete man."

He was a man of many-faceted accomplishment, personable, affable, highly intelligent, highly cultivated and utterly honorable. His native country made no mistake in electing him to her diplomatic service, for he not only brought Cuba a world renown by his exploits at the chessboard, and by his six years' possession of the world's championship, but he also brought her great honor by his embodiment of all that is best in the New World Latin culture. He was, in short, a specimen of a genus which may well be on its way to extinction—that of the thoroughly civilized man.

Hara-Kiri

In the Japanese custom of hara-kiri there are elements of both strength and weakness. It is testimony to the loyalty of the Japanese to their Emperor, in his role as the sacred symbol of the divine spirit, that Japanese officers, almost without exception, should identify failure with disgrace and dishonor. That was the feeling of General Homma when he took his life in Manila. But the loss of General Homma, whose misfortune only was that he happened to be facing a better soldier, robs the Japanese of a general who might have restored his laurels on other battlefields. Such losses, if repeated, would undermine Japanese leadership.

That the Japanese are aware of the weakening effect on Japan of hara-kiri was shown in the Russo-Japanese war. The first Japanese army, advancing to the attack on the Yalu River, was ordered to halt while one brigade went forward to feel out the enemy. But the enemy had gone. Accordingly the brigade was instructed to retire and rejoin the main army. In the ranks the feeling arose that they had been disgraced, and more than a thousand committed suicide. This was one of several such incidents which caused alarm at Japanese headquarters, and eventually the Emperor had to issue a general order forbidding suicide.

It is because of the hara-kiri custom that Japan has been called a suicide nation. In the Japanese code it is just as sweet and honorable to take one's life for one's country as to be killed for one's country. That accounts for the brilliance and the dash which have so far distinguished the Japanese exploits in Asia. But the Chinese and the Filipinos have proved to be more than their match, and for a simple reason. Neither recognizes defeat. As to leadership, MacArthur on the ground and Chennault in the air provide evidence that outstanding leadership belongs to the United Nations. Thus, when the initiative is wrested from the Japanese, the toll of life among the Japanese from hara-kiri is bound to be considerable.

Streamlining The Top

It has been suggested that in 1939 Germany was ready for the next war, France for the last, and Britain for no war at all. What was said of France could have been applied with some measure of truth to this country when war came to America. The organization of the fighting services had become set in a World War I pattern. Old men held the highest positions, air warfare had not been recognized adequately, and coordination of strategy among all the fighting services had not been effected.

Indeed, after Pearl Harbor confusion in the Navy Department became more confounded. To be sure, a new ranking post was created, that of commander in chief of the United States Fleet. And Admiral King was promoted to it. But Admiral Stark still remained as chief of Naval Operations, though nobody knew where his duties ended and Admiral King's new duties began. It was soon obvious that in this reshuffle the President had merely added to the overlapping in the Navy Department. It was a half-reorganization that was worse than no reorganization at all.

That situation has now been straightened out. Admiral Stark will go to London as commander of United States forces operating in European waters, and Admiral King will direct all naval activities. He will thus absorb Admiral Stark's old duties as chief of Naval Operations. This is a good move, but aside from a concurrent renovation of the staff, it does little more than correct the half-reorganization at the top which was made after Pearl Harbor.

The changes in the War Department, however, are progressive. Secretary Stimson and General Marshall quickly learned from the lessons provided by Nazi Germany that this is a young man's war. On that basis they overhauled the officer corps from top to bottom, and the chief of staff later was relieved of much detail work by the simplification of the General Staff. The latest announcement shows that our Army heads have thoroughly absorbed the major lesson of this war, namely, the significance of air power. In the new staff the post as deputy under General Marshall is given to the air member, General McNarney.

The changes are announced as evidence of the streamlining that has been effected in the organization of the fighting services. The word is not misused. Both Admiral King and General Marshall now have much less unwieldy and much more responsible staffs in their departments. Thus they will be able to give more time to grand strategy. But the streamlining will not be complete till the fighting services are linked by a joint general staff. That would take off the overburdened shoulders of our President much unnecessary work in sifting and correlating the counsel of his military advisers. Not till we have this kind of unified command can it be said that we have brought our military organization in line with the needs of World War II.

Women Warriors

Efficient mobilization for war demands first of all the intelligent utilization of the Nation's human resources. In effect, this is merely a restatement of the maxim that to run a war properly you have to get the right persons in the right jobs. Under the pressure of wartime circumstance the Army has done its best to live up to the maxim insofar as it applies to military personnel. And it is to the Army's credit that it bases its support of the Rogers bill, which would establish a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, on the fact that there are some Army jobs which women can do as well, if not better, than men. Such jobs are, of course, noncombatant, and include clerical and laboratory work, telephone and telegraph operation, and so on. With the expansion of the Army the number of jobs which women can fill has naturally increased markedly. The sensible thing, then, is to enable women to work as an integral part of the Army.

They are already doing this in Britain, Russia, and China, where, in some instances, they serve alongside men on the fighting fronts. The Rogers bill does not propose that women be subjected to arduous campaigning. But it does permit the voluntary enlistment of women for useful military service. In Allied countries the war demands on man power have been in part responsible for the increasing absorption of women into military service. It may be that we shall not experience a similar drain on man power. But there is no assurance of this. The only assurance we have is that the way to win the war is first to mobilize our human resources, men and women, as intelligently as we can. This should be borne clearly in mind by the House when it considers the Rogers bill.

FSA Under Fire

The abolition of the Farm Security Administration for the duration will be promoted by the Comptroller General's opinion that the FSA has been acquiring large tracts of land without legal authorization. Since funds appropriated for the FSA were not directly available for land purchase, the agency's employes organized corporations in various States and proceeded to lend those corporations the money with which to make land purchases. After pointing out that there is no statutory authority for using appropriated FSA funds to buy land, the Comptroller General adds, "I cannot agree that the Farm Security Administration may thus accomplish in an indirect manner what it cannot do directly."

To be sure, the FSA was undertaking to relieve very serious distress caused by Government acquisition for defense purposes of an estimated two million or more acres of farm land. Some 18,000 farm families living in 22 States were in consequence displaced. A large proportion of these people require financial assistance if they are to reestablish themselves on farms. Their plight is made worse by scarcity of suitable farm lands in familiar localities. Admitting, however, the need for remedial action the FSA should have ascertained whether it had authority to intervene before acting. The mere fact that it resorted to elaborate indirect expedients to make land purchases possible shows that the legality of its procedure was in doubt. As the Comptroller General says, the "matter could and should have been presented to Congress, which has been in session practically continuously since the inception of the program."

It is encouraging to find Congress developing an interest in the innumerable agencies that it has hitherto provided with abundant funds and permitted to operate with little supervision. Even if the economy drive on nonessential Government activities accomplishes little else, it will ultimately save many millions for the Government if it makes Congress more critical of the organizations of its own creation that so often act as if they were a law unto themselves.

After Rangoon

Long before Rangoon was evacuated by United Nations forces that port had been reduced to a mass of smoldering ruins. The mistake which the British had made at Penang and other points in northern Malaya was not repeated. Nonetheless, the fall of Rangoon cannot be considered in any light other than that of a major defeat for the Allies. On the one hand, it gives the Japanese complete control of the Irrawaddy delta, an important base of operations for a drive—already under way—on Lashio and the Burma Road. On the other hand, it strengthens their foothold on the Bay of Bengal and enables them, should they choose to do so, to launch an offensive against Calcutta and the industrial regions of eastern India.

The point has been emphasized that because of difficulties of terrain, a land attack on India from Burma is practically out of the question. Certainly such an attack would be fraught with danger to the invaders unless and until the United Nations forces in central and northern Burma have been eliminated. A dual operation would be involved. The Japanese would have to push the Allied forces farther and farther into the Burmese interior so as to eliminate the threat of their flank. At the same time they would have to move up the western Burmese coast (as previously they moved up the Burmese panhandle) and ultimately attack Calcutta by land and sea. That might involve the Japanese in difficulties.

Still—no matter what the Japanese do elsewhere—an attack on India cannot be ruled out. Certainly we may now expect intensified Japanese naval activity in the Indian Ocean the entire eastern end of which, from Rangoon to the Strait of Malacca, is now in their hands. To be sure, there has been an attrition of Japanese naval strength through the sinking or damaging of possibly a third of their cruiser and aircraft carrier strength. Yet few of their powerful capital ships have thus far been thrown into the fight, and these may now appear in the Indian Ocean.

SKIING BY MOONLIGHT

We found a sloping field of snow,
Trackless and smooth and white.
There was no wind to blow,
But as we passed
The swiftness of our flight
Flung a cold spray of stars
Into the winter night.
The ski and skier knew
The hazard bright and bold
As speed and joy were caught
Into the heart of cold.
And when we passed . . . we left behind
The white divided by itself again,
Where our two tracks had crossed and met
Like thoughts recurring in the winter mind.

Letters To The Editor

Utmost For Victory

In "The Federal Diary" of March 7 appeared a sentence that should be taken out of its setting and weighed by all your readers.

Jerry Kluttz says, "If the Government alone invoked a 44 or 48 hour week, employes would quit by the thousands to take jobs in private industry where they are paid time and a half over 40 hours." I have been assured by an employe in the Government that this is true. If true, then it boils down to this: there are thousands of Government workers who do not know a world war is on, the issue of which will affect their very existence in any line of employment, and these thousands are not motivated by any sense of devotion to our governmental ideals as contrasted with that of Hitler, etc. Is this not the question we should all put to ourselves? In my niche of work, private or public, am I doing my utmost for victory? If I am not, then how dare I ask the armed forces to risk and meet death for the continuance of my self-centered views of life and duty?

Street Light Waste

Having heard our President has asked for conservation of electricity in the home how does it happen that the street lights are not turned off until long after daylight, at 7:45 a. m., in the Rock Creek section of Massachusetts Avenue. Perhaps Washington has not yet wakened up to the fact that we are on war daylight time in order to save electricity.

Random Comments

Your editorial, "The Great Boondoggle," in The Sunday Post was splendid and timely. Keep up your good work. I wish you would start a campaign for elimination of all income-tax exemptions, making every earner subject to some direct tax—no matter how small. When every earner feels the tax burden he will demand an end of waste.

Your "Case for Forced Savings" editorial this morning is constructive too. Since our boys can be forced into the service whether or not it interferes with their careers; since the labor unions can collect unwillingly paid dues by means of the payroll check-off, why not extend conscription or the check-off to savings for defense bonds by every person earning wages or salary. This might prevent the "political pressure for repudiation or inflation" mentioned by the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee on February 20 "if the bonds are held by a minority of the tax-paying group."

With regard to the full page advertisement in this morning's Post, would the members of the organization paying for that advertisement be willing to publish their names and invite the Dies Committee to check their records?

$100 A Plate

Your recent "$100 a Plate" editorial impels this subscriber to ask three questions which have been in his mind for some years:

1. Who should be primarily concerned with wiping out the deficit of the Democratic National Committee, caused by the job of electing the President, if not we Democrats, including various recipients of non-civil service appointments in this Administration and those of any party or no party who sincerely believe his election, and continued leadership in a grave hour, was a good thing for their country?

2. Is not this popular method of sharing the party debt, by these $10 to $100 dinners, in the public interest and highly preferable to large financial and industrial corporations and wealthy individuals with perhaps special axes to grind paying the whole freight—a method of paying one debt of all the Democrats and possibly creating another which, to discharge, might require all the Republicans also to pay increased consumer costs of one kind and another?

3. Is it not the moral obligation of believers in a cause, Democratic or Republican, to support it to the best of their abilities and the moral right of its responsible leaders to inform and even to remind them of that obligation?

All this great solicitude for the "poor" Democrats in this Administration, with only one full-dress shirt to their names, brings tears to my eyes. JOSEPH LAWRENCE.

Speed Up Traffic Lights

The front page story in The Post Saturday morning, by Bill Brinkley, Post staff writer, on the non-observance of the traffic lights in downtown Washington just about breaks down my resolution not to write to the "paper" about the much discussed traffic situation in Washington.

There has been more written and less done about the Washington traffic problem than any other item of public interest I can think of. On one point nearly all are agreed. It is bad and not getting any better with all the additional people coming here. I have not been in all the larger cities lately, but I have been in enough to feel that the traffic regulation here is about the most antiquated I have observed. As I have been interested in highway traffic safety for a number of years I have taken the trouble to observe the methods used in various parts of the country.

There are certain inherent difficulties here that cannot be overcome without the expenditure of many millions of dollars. The layout of Washington was considered ideal in the horse and buggy days, but is a very poor setup for modern congested traffic. To correct this would require a major operation. The building of arterials would help no doubt, but would not result in as satisfactory a result here as in other cities where the plan of the city lends itself readily to such developments. The cost of such an improvement would be tremendous and would take some time. In the meanwhile the situation is getting worse.

Regardless of what ultimate solution on a grand scale may be proposed or even made effective later I do not believe we should take the attitude that we should do nothing now to correct some very obvious faults that can be corrected with little expense. The staggering of working hours has spread the "peak" and no doubt has helped some, but even this is denied by many drivers.

The story of Mr. Brinkley on his downtown observation of disregard of traffic lights, who by the way I sincerely welcome into our union of amateur traffic observers, brings to light the regulation of traffic lights. Mr. Brinkley missed the point entirely in his attempt to analyze the trouble. If you expect people to be regulated you must give them something simple and sensible. People generally do not pay much attention to laws or regulations they think are silly, even if they are promulgated for their own safety or welfare. Those "WALK—DON'T WALK" neons should be eliminated, and the simple standard lights used. Then the lights should be speeded up all over town and properly synchronized so traffic can move. The long delays in waiting for the light to turn invites violations. Just enough time should be allowed for a pedestrian to get across the street. He would know he could not get across if he started later than the instant the light changed. This town is dead on its feet. Speed up your lights and wake the people up and the alertness developed will help your accident problem. Of course there will always be some violators and some accidents, but why not do some of the things that have been found to help in other cities?

If the lights are speeded up and properly adjusted many bad intersections that cause traffic to be jammed for blocks could be equipped with lights and the whole stream of traffic kept moving instead of jammed as at present. Too few intersections with lights and too slow timing of those lights now installed is simply aggravating a bad traffic condition.

Valley Of Hokus-Po

Thumbing through a musical score of a light opera which was popular early in this century—"Woodland" (by the authors of "Prince of Pilsen," "Burgomaster" and others)—I find a lyric which might have been written to describe Lowell Mellett's Information Madhouse. Its title is "The Valley of Hokus-Po" and it suggests a possible new name for this $600,000 building. Here is the lyric:

On the hitherward side of the hills of hope,
In the Valley of Hokus-Po,
They say there's a fellow who's able to tell
What anyone wishes to know.
So when you're in doubt, if you want to find out,
The easiest plan is to go
To that wonderful seer, who makes everything clear,
In the Valley of Hokus-Po.

Chorus:

If you want to find out, you must go
To that Valley of Hokus-Po.
Better buy you a map
And go hunt up that chap,
For whatever he'll tell you is so.
If the answer you now want to know,
I'm afraid you must wait till you go
To that wonderful chap who has knowledge on tap,
In the Valley of Hokus-Po.

Second lyric:

Does a house burn down or a house burn up?
What cracks at the break of day?
And why when a fellow decides to wed
Should the bride be given away?
Whenever a gasoline lamp goes out,
Say, where does the blame thing go?
If a schooner of beer sails over a bar,
Is the tide running high or low?

The Post Impressionist

Blackout

We had breakfast late and there was a curious look in the eyes of my wife. But the night before at the office had been a hard night and I was not yet fully awake and I didn't notice the look.

I sat there drinking coffee and rubbing my eyes and thinking that the war certainly was not going so well, and wondering where I was going to find the money I needed to make the first payment on my income tax, and didn't pay any attention when my wife cleared her throat several times and started to speak.

After breakfast, I went into the living room and hunted around for the paper. I looked high and low, but the paper was not to be found and I shuffled around the room in my slippers, muttering under my breath.

Finally I gave up and called to my wife.

"Honey," I said, "have you seen today's paper?"

She had remained in the kitchen and she was pounding something with a hammer, and she did not come out, but called out:

"I think the baby was playing with it. I can't stop to look now. I'm too busy."

I hadn't noticed the scraps on the floor, but I noticed them now and I saw that that was all that remained of the paper.

The baby must have been tired, because I found a part of Page 1 that was not torn into small bits, only crumpled, and I smoothed out the wrinkles and sat down in the big overstuffed chair and put my feet on the hassock and started to read.

But there was so much noise from the kitchen that I couldn't read and I went back to the kitchen and found my wife standing on a big stool nailing big sections of cardboard over a window.

She has done a lot of strange things and I am not surprised when she does something strange, but this thing just didn't seem to make any sense.

I stood there for a minute, looking at her, and I said:

"What's going on? Are you expecting a storm?"

She turned around on the stool and gave me the look she reserves for the times when I am particularly stupid.

"No," she said, patiently, "I am not expecting a storm, but there is a blackout tonight and I have to cover these windows."

I remembered then having seen in the papers that there was to be a blackout and I stood there for a time watching her and then I went back to my paper.

But I didn't read long, because my wife had finished her work in the kitchen and came into the room, dragging the stool.

She stood there with her hand on her chin, quizzically, and she said:

"I can't quite decide which would look best in here, the quilt or some of those big, red bath towels."

I was reading about what the Japanese were doing to Java and I didn't pay any attention, but before long it grew suddenly dark in the room and I looked up and saw that she was tacking the quilt over the windows.

I put down the paper and got up and left.

I went upstairs and undressed and the baby came in and looked up and said, "Hi, Daddy," and ran away with one of my slippers.

I put my robe on and went into the bathroom with one slipper and got in the tub and pulled the curtain across the shower rod and started to bathe.

The hot shower made me feel better and I started to sing and thought that my voice really sounded well in the shower.

But then the door opened and someone came in and I pulled back the curtain and looked out and it was my wife.

She stood there with her hands on her hips, looking at me, and I have seen her look that way at the baby.

She stood there angrily, looking at me, and she said: "Of all the dumb things to do. I told you twice to take a tub bath. I told you twice I needed that curtain to blackout the windows in the bedroom and now it's all wet."

SHIRLEY HURST.

Concentrate Efforts

Don't you think we should be realists and do one of two things? If we are going to help Russia against Hitler, shouldn't we demand the use of her base on the Siberian frontier so that we can launch some real bombings against Japan now while we still have friends and allies in the Pacific?

If she doesn't want to do that, shouldn't we think first of the protection of the Western Hemisphere—Canada, Alaska, North and South America? With our huge production facilities we can make ourselves so strong no one will dare attack us.

We can't arm and equip half the world, send our boys all over the globe, and have protection from invasion ourselves. In time, with proper economic planning between North and South America, we can be self-sufficient from both Europe and Asia. Perhaps we could also have peace for a few generations.

We would like to save Britain and all the other peoples who have been ground under the heel of the dictators, but supposing we can't save them and save ourselves, too? Isn't it better to save what we already have, and what our nearest neighbors have, and preserve a civilization which can be a light of encouragement to the rest of the world?

Events move swiftly these days, and what we thought yesterday doesn't seem feasible today. If we are going to survive ourselves we will have to consider every possibility, however unpleasant it may be. Who thought we should see Mr. Churchill, who brought England through its darkest hour and who according to his own words had done his utmost to get the United States into the war, stepping down for Sir Cripps?

It makes one pause and think.

Our Japanese

By Ernest Lindley

Treating Them As A Racial Bloc

LINDLEY

THE WHOLESALE movement of Japanese and Japanese-Americans from the Pacific Coast military areas may be necessary. Certainly this is a time when no chances on the national security can be taken. The legalistic classifying of American citizens in one group and aliens in another is not of practical value in dealing with this problem.

But the wholesale transfer is, at bottom, a confession of ignorance. We do not know enough to separate loyal persons of Japanese blood from those who are Fifth Columnists or who, under pressure of the war, find themselves torn between loyalty to their fatherland and loyalty to the United States. But there must be thousands of second and third generation Japanese who have been imbued with a real sense of devotion to this country and its institutions. In this connection, it should not be forgotten that an overwhelming proportion of the Japanese in Hawaii have behaved in exemplary fashion since the beginning of this war. The evacuation of the entire population of Japanese blood from Hawaii has not been undertaken. It would disrupt Hawaiian economic life—just as the evacuation from the Pacific Coast area will have disturbing, if lesser, economic effects.

In addition to the economic and humanitarian aspects of the transfer is a third consideration. Some of the Japanese-Americans whom we are treating, in effect, as potential Fifth Columnists might be useful to us in the same role. The President has declared that the principles of the Atlantic Charter apply to the East as well as to the West. The old imperial system of the European maritime powers is on its last legs. In the southwest Pacific the Japanese have ruined it by sheer military power. Their own form of imperialism, judging by their record in Korea, Manchuria and China, will be more harsh than the colonial system which they have destroyed. But they nevertheless flaunt the banner of "Asia for the Asiatics." The substantial justice of this slogan is undeniable.

SENOR ELIZALDE, Resident Commissioner for the Philippines, and others who know the Oriental mind have been emphasizing that the Western powers cannot arouse or keep alive resistance to Japan among the native peoples of the East by offering them a return to their old colonial status. This seems destined to become a war for liberation of the peoples of the East as well as for the conquered nations of Europe. Freedom and democracy must be the pledge of the United Nations as an alternative to the military imperialism of Japan.

Most persons of German extraction in this country are anti-Nazi, and most of the Italian extraction have become anti-Mussolini. There are German and Italian refugees here—still aliens—who are working and praying for victory for the United Nations as zealously as any of our citizens. Despite the racial complication, it is unreasonable to suppose that there are not Japanese-Americans who are against the military and imperial ambitions of the present Japanese regime? If properly guided they could, in time, be of immense service to the cause of the United Nations.

THE MORE venturesome, even now, might be employed in intelligence and under-cover propaganda work throughout East Asia and the south Pacific. In time, as the tide of war changes, others might be most useful in hastening the collapse of the Japanese military effort.

This may be day-dreaming, but some of our most foresighted officials do not think so. They are extremely sad over the handling of the Japanese-Americans—yet they have no ready remedy because they, like officials on the West Coast, do not know how to make the discriminating selections, or how to teach others to do so.

IF OUR AIM in the Pacific phase of the war were the extinction of the Japanese race, there would be no point in trying to differentiate between loyal and dubious persons of Japanese blood in the United States. But the principles of the Atlantic Charter apply alike to our enemies and their temporary victims. As an alternative to expansion by military conquest, we offered Japan commercial opportunities. Our implicit aim today is to destroy the Japanese military empire and the armed force on which it is based. In due course, the creation of a democratic Japan may be avowed, not merely implied, as one of our specific objectives.

The treatment of Japanese, and Japanese-Americans, in the United States as a racial bloc, regardless of their rights as citizens or their individual loyalties and ideals, may hamper the entire effort to convert the Pacific war into a war of liberation for the native peoples. Through ignorance and lack of resourcefulness a valuable opportunity may be irretrievably damaged.

Secret Service

By Dr. Otto Strasser

Canaris vs. Himmler

"CANARIS has daily detailed reports of all telephone conversations between Reich ministers and full details of their movements. He can and does give orders to the Gestapo. Constitutionally he is less highly placed than Himmler, but in practice he is at least equal, if not superior, to the Gestapo chief. He has full powers over all external political warfare and is responsible for espionage . . . the one man in Germany who knows the exact intimate details of all political and military events taking place in every group and circle . . ."

So runs a recent news report. But who is this man, practically unknown to the world, yet credited with a position of such influence and power in Germany? The story of Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, head of the German secret services, and of his mysterious role, takes us back a little. That his name should at this moment break into the front emphasizes once again how deep-seated is the impending conflict between army and party, personalized in the field of secret service by Canaris and Himmler.

It must be remembered that since Hitler's advent to power, Germany has had not one, but at least two secret services. The first is that of the army; the second is that of the party—the Gestapo and the SS. Indeed, by virtue of his powers as Prime Minister of Prussia and commander of the Luftwaffe, Goering tried earlier to build a third secret service. In the autumn of 1936, however, the head of his organization was murdered in Breslau by Himmler's agents, following which the field was left to the secret services of army and party.

THE GERMAN ARMY has always had one of the best secret services in the world. During the war of 1914-18 it reached a peak of efficiency under the direction of Col. Nicolai, whose efforts drew praise from Ludendorff in his memoirs. But according to the Treaty of Versailles, Germany was forbidden to have any secret service, and its existence was maintained only through a subterfuge engineered by Ludendorff.

Arrangements were made for the financing of espionage by a group of men, such as Krupp, Thyssen and Flick, so that after 1918, Col. Nicolai continued his work in their "private employ." The result was an interesting development. To secure a bare minimum for carrying on a secret service abroad—where normally its concern lies wholly—he was forced to cater to the special interests of his sponsors, which, of course, lay in the domestic field. As a result, Col. Nicolai's secret service centered chiefly within Germany.

But the work never regained the high caliber of the war years during this hand-to-mouth period of existence. In fact, it was not until a new figure rose from its midst, and rapidly superseded Col. Nicolai. This was Kapitan zur See Wilhelm Canaris.

CANARIS is credited with having seen action in the Battle of Jutland; if so, he left the active service soon afterward and started the work which laid the broad basis of experience for his present position. He became a valuable collaborator of Col. Nicolai, who sent him as naval attache to the German Embassy in Madrid—one of the most important centers for naval espionage during the last war.

After the war he continued with the navy, maintaining his close collaboration with his former chief, now financed by a group of big German industrialists. But Canaris found his efforts greatly restricted; all naval expenditures were closely scrutinized by the Reichstag during the days of the Weimar republic. Thus he determined to raise his own funds, resorting to many ingenious methods. For example, he "convinced" the naval committee that they must have propaganda films, and then rapidly expanded the project into a moving-picture firm, called "Phoebus." Most of the proceeds, of course, went into the espionage work, with the result that "Phoebus" was always on the verge of bankruptcy.

Eventually, information of the whole scheme began to leak out, threatening for a time to develop into a political scandal involving most of the important admirals and generals. But there were enough people of importance entangled to have the whole matter hushed up, and Canaris was sent off as commander of a cruiser until the storm blew over. However, he never lost his position in the navy, and after Hindenburg's election returned to his old post.

Canaris is of Greek origin, yet a strong German nationalist, who supports Hitler because Hitler has served the nationalist cause. He is crafty and cunning—the most cautious and silent man in Germany. He has no personal friends, but he is so useful to both the army and the navy that he has no enemies. His high devotion to service has won him the confidence of all the higher authorities, who retain their connection with him because he is an extremely valuable person to know. In turn, he gets from them information which is pooled with that from his widely varied sources.

By contrast, Himmler, at the head of the party secret service, is distrusted by all. Yet he holds this great advantage over Canaris: he controls not only a spy organization, but an executive power; all he need do is give an order and the Gestapo carries it out. Because of this Himmler may have the edge on Canaris in the domestic field—but it is not very great. Canaris has good contacts with the Red army, in spite of his anti-Communist feelings. Furthermore, he has taken into his fold Col. (now Gen.) Nicolai and the organization he built up. Thus the positions of head of the secret services and right-hand man have been switched between the two wars.

With Gen. Nicolai's collaboration, Canaris has an extensive domestic espionage. Abroad, of course, his contacts are of the best, so that Canaris is not only the best informed person on military secrets, but a very close second best on the situation at home, being especially familiar with the doings of every party leader.

On this side, of course, Himmler has built up a foreign department, using the SS, and through the cooperation of Ribbentrop (who is a high SS official), the diplomatic and consular services. In the balance of power between the two organizations, Canaris is no doubt stronger in the foreign field, while having an extremely well-oiled machine at home. Himmler is in the stronger position at home, by virtue of his command of the Gestapo, but abroad his organization has been dealt an irreparable blow with the almost universal severance of diplomatic relations with Germany.

While Nazi Germany was forging ahead the conflicting interests of the army and party secret services remained in the background. The common cause of Germany resulted in their cooperation. But with the increased difficulties, and especially the already evident rift between army and party and their impending clash, these two far-flung organizations are going to devote an increasing amount of their attention and energies to nullifying the others' efforts. Behind the scenes a dark drama is being enacted, and with it the name of Canaris, though little known, stands in increasingly bitter opposition to that of Himmler. These two men personify but another of the many phases of the inevitable conflict between the army and party.

Preliminary Crisis

By Mark Sullivan

The Battle For Australia

THE UNITED STATES is at a crisis in the war. Not at all a concluding crisis—almost one might wish it were. It is, rather a preliminary crisis, the outcome of which will be a turning point, largely determining the course of things thereafter.

This crisis, in terms of recent days, is not unexpected. But in terms of months it is so unexpected as to be, to many of our people, incredible. Who, as recently as last December 1, would have believed that by mid-March Japan would have come as far in our direction as Australia, that stopping her at Australia would depend upon American forces, that it would not be certain we could keep her out of Australia, and that if she succeeded in taking or dominating Australia, we would be, in effect, in the position of fighting to defend our continental shore.

SULLIVAN

Japan is within 300 to 400 miles of Australia—a two-hour flight for her bombing planes, a one-day trip for her naval vessels. While not yet securely based off the Australian shore, she soon will be unless driven back within the next few weeks. This does not seem probable. Japan can only be dislodged from her present holdings by the United States. And it seems doubtful whether we yet have sufficient force in those waters to do that.

THE QUESTION is now asked, will Japan try to take or dominate Australia, or follow some other course? The other course would be to entrench herself where she now is, and concentrate her fighting in the other direction, toward India. The answer to this question is known definitely in only one place, in the minds of the Japanese strategists at Tokyo. All that anyone can do is to argue from reason. And reason says clearly that Japan will try desperately to take Australia, or as much of it as she needs for military purposes; or at least try to prevent us from establishing a base in Australia.

Is Japan likely to remain where she is now, and give the United States time to build up an enormous force in Australia, a force which in time would be sufficient to take the offensive against Japan? Or is Japan more likely to drive into Australia while we are still comparatively weak there, try to take Australia or as much of it as she needs for the time being, then consolidate herself there? By this course, if successful, Japan would eliminate us from the Far East, would compel us to fall back to a base at Hawaii, some 5000 miles nearer to our home shore.

WHAT SEEMS immediately ahead is a battle for Australia. Against Japan almost the whole dependence will be the United States. Australia, with a population of only some 7 million, can contribute little. Of the Dutch who defended the East Indies, little can be left. Great Britain can help hardly at all, for, with Singapore gone, she has no naval base in the Far East. In effect, the battle for Australia will be between Japan and the United States.

For weeks we have been sending great forces to Australia. But the force we have delivered there up to date has not been enough. This is proved by our inability to save any of the East Indies. Yet correspondents on the scene report that what we lacked of enough was very little—in some of the battles in the East Indies, the judgment of correspondents is that had we arrived a few hours earlier, Japan would have been stood off.

Building up a great American force in Australia is difficult, and from now on will be harder. The journey is long, from San Francisco about 7000 miles. In the latter part of the journey, our naval and cargo ships are subject to attack by Japanese submarines and planes. From now on, with Japan in full possession of all the East Indies, every day that enables her to increase her force there will increase her capacity to harass American ships going to Australia.

IF AND WHEN we establish ourselves in Australia in sufficient force, we will have a choice of courses. We may try to drive Japan gradually backward out of the East Indies islands that she has successively seized; we may try to engage the Japanese navy in battle; we may, after getting a foothold in some islands farther toward Japan, attack the cities of Japan's home islands.

Alternative courses in other areas are sometimes proposed. It is suggested that, while holding Australia, we should make our attack upon Japan by way of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. An objection to this is that the Aleutian Islands do not provide desirable bases, they lack anchorage and other facilities for a fleet.

Another suggestion is that we persuade Russia to grant us air bases near Vladivostok, and from there bomb Japan's home cities. That would be feasible and desirable. The obstacle is that Russia is not likely to grant us the air bases. It may be taken as a fixed policy of Russia that she will not, in the near future, either grant us air bases or take any other step that might involve her in war with Japan. Russia will not do this until she has driven every German off her soil. For this, Russia is not to be reproached. We can see Russia's position by applying it to ourselves. If the Japanese had landed on our Pacific Coast and occupied our territory as far east as Denver, our public opinion would insist upon driving the Japanese off our soil before we diverted any force to fight Hitler in Europe.

Spring Offensives

By Barnet Nover

The Cloth And The Pattern

THE ONE CERTAINTY in an uncertain world is that the coming spring and summer will witness the most titanic struggle the world has ever seen.

NOVER

The winter of 1941-42 was no "phony" war period, as was the winter of 1939-40. It saw the spread of the conflict to the South Pacific, with the Japanese rapidly overrunning that entire vast area from Wake Island to Australia. It saw Germany attempting to deliver a knock-out blow to Russia and, failing in this ambitious and costly effort, forced to assume the defensive on the Eastern Front. It saw a steady whittling away of the Reich's not inexhaustible strength by the Red army, a fierce ebb and flow in the tide of battle in Libya, naval combat in all the seven seas.

Yet taken altogether, the world-shaking events that have occurred since last fall are likely to prove only a faint prelude to what is now about to occur.

NOW, AS AT every stage in a war which began as a struggle of four nations and now directly involves three-fourths of the human race, the determining factor in the months to come will be the factor of time.

If the United Nations could only be sure that regardless of present and prospective losses they can hold the Axis at bay this year they could view the situation with reasonable optimism. America's industrial capacity alone is such that, if given time to harness it to the full, the force we can ultimately throw into the scales will be beyond the power of the Axis to match. For this reason it was once assumed that the United Nations need only remain on the defensive this year to be certain of winning the war in 1943 or 1944 when our offensive capacity will be sufficient for the task at hand. But there is no assurance whatever that our enemies will vouchsafe us the time we need. We can expect them to do all in their power to win before 1943.

WHAT HAS happened in the Pacific since December 7 has created grave doubts as to the wisdom of a wholly defensive strategy. Yet nothing could be more foolhardy than for the Allies to move to the opposite extreme of waging offensive war in the naive belief that there is any virtue in offensive action for its own sake.

The offensive launched by Marshal Foch against the Central Powers in the summer of 1918 was a huge success. But Gen. Nivelle's offensive of the previous year came very near to defeating the Allies by bleeding them white. The difference was that while, in 1917 the Allies had neither the men nor the materiel to drive ahead regardless of losses, in 1918 the attrition of the German forces, while the Allied ranks were strengthened by large-scale reinforcements of men from the United States, gave the Allies that superiority which made a successful offensive possible.

Many similar illustrations of the all-importance of timing can be found in the history of the last few years.

WE MUST CUT our cloth according to a pattern determined by geography, industrial production, availability and extent of trained man power and, last but by no means least, shipping facilities. Our enemies can be expected to pursue precisely the same course.

The geographic pattern, so far as the United Nations are concerned, has been tragically simplified by the events of the past three months. In some cases it would be foolhardy to pursue anything but a defensive course, regardless of how attractive offensive action would seem to be.

That is certainly the situation with respect to Australia. If Australia is held it can ultimately serve as a base for offensive operations against the Japanese. But it must first be held. The same holds true of India and Ceylon and also, for the time being, of the Libyan theater of war.

YET THERE ARE other theaters where offensive action or at least counteroffensive moves by the Allies are or may soon be possible.

The relative stalemate that has existed on the Eastern Front may soon be ended. The limited offensive which the Red army has carried out against the Wehrmacht in the period since December has netted considerable results. Nazi losses have been heavy. Certain key positions, such as Rostov and Mozhaisk, which Hitler planned to use as the spearpoints of a spring offensive, have been retaken by the Russians.

Yet unless the present German line is effectively smashed in the near future such an offensive on the Eastern Front is certain. And it is likely to be coupled with an intensive German drive to the Middle East, with the Crimea, Bulgaria, the Aegean and Dodecanese Islands and Libya as the jumping-off points.

With the active or tacit support of Vichy an attempt may also be made to transform the Western Mediterranean into an Axis lake.

THE AMOUNT of force which Hitler will be able to throw into his eastern drive will depend, in part, on the reserves he has on hand and those he has managed to acquire from satellite states and, in part, on the forces he will find it necessary to maintain in the west. The indicated United Nations strategy in Europe, therefore, is to compel the Nazis to maintain as large a force as possible in the occupied regions of Western Europe. Germany can be weakened in Europe as the United Nations were weakened in the Pacific, by compelling her to spread her strength over as wide an area as possible and as thinly as possible.

The effectiveness of an Allied counteroffensive in Europe will depend on several things.

The first is the available strength particularly in the air, which the Allies have been able to mobilize and which is or can be based on Britain.

The second factor that will help determine Allied strategy in Europe will be the success or lack of success achieved by Russia during the next weeks. If, for instance, Nazis can be driven out of the Leningrad salient we could anticipate a collapse of Finland's war effort and the possible establishment in Northern Norway of a joint British-Russian front backed by air power based on Murmansk and sea power based on the United Kingdom. Such a foray would not only compel an expensive diversion of German strength to a remote theater of war but would also make possible a freer flow of supplies from Britain and the United States to Russia.

So far, however, the Nazis have succeeded in holding on grimly to their positions in the Leningrad salient. The reported concentration of German troops in the Baltic zone and renewed German pressure on Sweden suggests that they are by no means certain this will continue.

For the time being both sides are jockeying for position, feeling out each other's strength, girding their loins for the coming struggle. But this preliminary period is about over. A fight of gigantic dimensions impends.

Taft Urges Parties to Agree To Truce on Social Legislation

By the Associated Press

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, proposed yesterday that Democrats and Republicans agree to a truce under which controversies over existing or proposed social legislation could be eliminated for the duration of the war.

Declaring that the military effort ought not to be used as an excuse either to seek new social changes or to repeal major measures of this nature already enacted, Taft said he thought both parties would do well to concentrate on attempts to increase the efficiency of the war production program.

The Ohio Senator said his suggestion for a political truce on these domestic issues was prompted by reports that Attorney General Francis Biddle recently had urged a gathering of administration supporters to do their best to prevent the junking of New Deal social legislation during the war.

"I think both parties ought to agree to preserve the status quo on social legislation as much as possible," Taft told reporters. "This is not the time to be seeking further changes in our domestic economy, nor should the war effort be used to cancel some of the things that already have been done.

"For instance," he continued, "I am opposed to repeal of the 40-hour week law. But, on the other hand, I don't believe the vital necessity for production of war equipment should be used to enforce provisions of contracts calling for the payment of double time for Sunday work.

"It was well understood when those provisions were written into the contracts that they were penalty clauses, to force the spreading of work among as many employes as possible. They should not be used now to penalize the employer who is being asked by the Government to operate his plant on Sunday."

Taft said he had received "a great many" suggestions for repeal of the Wagner Labor Relations Act because of the stress of the war emergency—suggestions which he said he had rejected emphatically.

Taft's proposal for a truce on social legislation obtained an immediately favorable reception from Senator Hill, of Alabama, the Democratic Whip, who also spoke at the meeting addressed by Biddle.

Hill said he felt that the war effort should be paramount, but that it should not be made the unsupported excuse for the scuttling of New Deal agencies and legislation.

'Healthy Recreation' Will Help Win the War, President Feels

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the American war effort would not be hampered but actually improved by a "sensible participation in healthy recreational pursuits."

However, he said, it had to be borne in mind that "recreation as usual" is just as bad as "business as usual." The war effort, he asserted, is the primary task of everybody in the Nation, and recreation under present conditions should be undertaken solely with the purpose of building up body and mind with the thought in mind that this will help win the war.

It had been shown, the President said, that human beings cannot sustain continued and prolonged work for very long without obtaining a proper balance between work on the one hand and vacation and recreation on the other.

The Chief Executive declared that recreation could come through various sports, motion pictures, music, the drama, picnics and the like.

Statement Gives Views

His statement, issued at the White House, follows:

"Many people have written to the Executive Office asking for some statement of the general attitude of the Federal Government toward the continuation of various sports, dramatics, concerts, vacations and general recreation and amusements during the war effort. Most of these letters point out that the writers are anxious to do their utmost to help in the prosecution of the war and wonder whether such activities are considered to be harmful to the prosecution of the war.

"It is, of course, obvious that the war effort is the primary task of everybody in the Nation. All other activities must be considered secondary. At the same time it has been proven beyond doubt that human beings cannot sustain continued and prolonged work for very long without obtaining a proper balance between work on the one hand and vacation and recreation on the other. Such recreation may come by participation in, or attendance at, various sports, motion pictures, music, the drama picnics, et cetera. All of them have a necessary and beneficial part in promoting an over-all efficiency by relieving the strains of war and work.

"The actual occurrence of very large gatherings, of course, must depend on local safety conditions of the moment.

"Within reasonable limits, I believe that the war effort will not be hampered but actually improved by sensible participation in healthy recreational pursuits. It must be borne in mind, however, that 'recreation as usual' is just as bad as 'business as usual.' Recreation under present conditions can be undertaken solely with the purpose of building up body and mind and with the chief thought that this will help win the war."

N. Y. Votes 25 % Cut in State Income Levy

Albany, N. Y., March 10 (AP).—New York's Legislature voted today a two-year 40 million dollar saving for State taxpayers by a 25 per cent cut in the levy on 1941 and 1942 personal incomes and adopted a 376 million dollar State budget, 10 million dollars less than the current plan.

The program went to Gov. Lehman, who proposed the tax reduction for expected swift approval simultaneous with a bill permitting immediate quarterly payment of the State income tax due April 15. Payments are now required in three installments.

The tax saving will be in addition to an expected 21 million dollars annual reduction in taxpayers' payments through elimination this year, also proposed by the Governor, of the 1 per cent emergency income levy effective since 1933.

2 Baltimoreans File For Congress Seat

Annapolis, Md., March 10 (AP).—Two Baltimoreans are seeking the Congressional seat now occupied by Representative John A. Meyers from Maryland's Fourth District.

W. Frank Just and Joseph M. Wyatt filed their certificates of candidacy for the Democratic nomination with Secretary of State Thomas E. Jones. Meyers, also a Democrat, has not yet announced whether he will seek reelection.

Just is in the rug cleaning business while Wyatt, 36-year-old attorney, is associate magistrate of the Baltimore Traffic Court.

Five More Days to File Tax Returns

With each day's returns and payments of income taxes averaging a thousand more than last year, Washingtonians have entered into their deadline week, displaying an unequaled spirit and willingness to make the annual contribution to their Government's support, officials here said yesterday.

At the rate the returns are coming in thus far, it is expected that the total filing at the offices set up in the Bureau of Internal Revenue will be well over 100,000 or about 30% more than last year, A. P. Rasin, deputy collector said yesterday. This week is known as the "7000 week" because every day more than 7000 taxpayers will file; and if present indications are accurate Saturday and Monday will be the two biggest days in the Bureau's history.

More than 180 clerks, acting as advisers, collectors, cashiers and deputies, have been assigned to assist the taxpayers. Between noon and 1 p. m. each day the staff handles its biggest rushes. The most frequent difficulties for taxpayers in filling out returns arise in figuring out the "surtax" and the "earned income credit." But with the rest of the forms there seems to be no trouble, tax officials reported.

A greater number of people this year are paying their taxes in full at the outset rather than using the installment method providing for quarterly payments. In commenting upon the complete payments, Deputy Collector Rasin said that either the people were more patriotic this year or that they were simply paying in full now because they had the money and that they were not entirely sure of what taxes they would have to pay in the future. About 50% of the "small income" class are using the new short form initiated this year, Rasin stated.

CHAPTER II.

Life Story of Philippine Defender

MacArthur The Magnificent

By Bob Considine

Copyright International News Service

"HOWEVER horrible the incidents of war may be, the soldier who is called upon to offer and give his life for his country is one of the noblest developments of mankind. I do not know the dignity of his birth, but I do know the glory of his death."

DOUGLAS MacARTHUR, AUGUST, 1936.

Douglas MacArthur and Manuel Quezon needed only five minutes to seal their bargain concerning the defense of the Philippines. The deal between the recent Chief of Staff of the United States Army and the dapper little President of the new Commonwealth was arranged shortly after MacArthur's arrival in Manila late in 1935.

But for each man's love of pretentious phraseology, the deal could have been consummated in one minute. Each had but one question to ask the other. Quezon asked MacArthur if the islands could be successfully fortified. MacArthur said they could. MacArthur asked Quezon how much money the Commonwealth was was willing to spend each year on building up its defenses. Quezon said 8 million dollars, plus all the conscripted soldiers MacArthur could use.

The shook hands. The flashlight bulbs of Quezon's ardent little press merrily spilled their lightning . . . perhaps blinding both men to the problems that lay beyond.

Those middle 1930's were great days for Filipinos. After 37 often fumbling years of trying to play the role of imperialists, we had agreed to give the Philippines the independence for which their leaders had been passionately shouting since we replaced Spain as the overlord of those 7083 islands and 16 million natives.

But, to the dismay of some rabid isolationists in Washington, it was not to be the "complete, absolute and immediate independence," for which Quezon had been crying ever since reluctantly surrendering his insurrecto sword to the father of Douglas MacArthur at the turn of the century. Under the terms of the Tydings-McGuffie Act there was to be a 10-year period of transition. The education of the Filipino, in government, was to continue. An eye was to be kept on Japan, whose hot breath had been blowing southward for five years. This was the independence of a yo-yo top. The top had been flung away, but a string still led from it to the strong finger of the thrower.

At the end of ten years, in 1946, we would see what we would see. If Japan slept safely, after the process of masticating that enormous bite out of China . . . If all went well otherwise, including the problem of the Philippines' duty-free sugar and hemp, then there would be absolute independence. But there were those in Congress and throughout the United States who thought and said that this period of transition was one more blunder in an endless stream of blunders centering around our foster-fathering of the "orphans of the Pacific."

When Douglas MacArthur got into his work early in 1936 as military adviser to the Commonwealth, a trace of the fervor began to flee the high-tone "independence" oratory of Filipino politicians. The Commonwealth was something like the carefree ward of an indulgent uncle, the morning after the ward has gone on an enthralling binge and loftily told the uncle that he would not be needing him any longer.

But as the burdens of full independence became apparent, and the clack of Japanese buck teeth sounded to the north, waiting to munch the tasty tid-bit the United States was to leave, Quezon began exploring the chances of eating his cake and retaining it. Remaining a ward of the United States had merit in many ways. The thought of Manila Bay without the United States Asiatic Fleet was now a little terrifying. But for Quezon to have expressed any such feeling at that time would have been tantamount to political suicide. For it had been because of his fiery crusading for complete independence that he had become a leader of his people.

MACARTHUR was a part of Quezon's attempt to solve a vexing problem. He knew the general was a military genius; that he knew the Philippines better than any other American; that he was advanced in the ways of modern warfare; that his name was without parallel in the annals of the islands; that his princely bearing and medals would provide the showy front that is so dear to the Filipino. He knew, too, that MacArthur was a good friend of Mr. Roosevelt and that Mr. Roosevelt would be even more kindly disposed toward Quezon and the Commonwealth, with MacArthur there on loan.

It was a trying period for MacArthur. His mother, who had hardly left his side from the time she bore him, 55 years before, died at 82 not long after they arrived in Manila. It was a tremendous blow to MacArthur. His love of the eternally faithful woman who had comforted and encouraged him through triumph and vicissitude was boundless. Medicine, sent dramatically by plane from the States, failed to reach her in time to prolong her life.

And yet powerful forces of compensation were at work. No one was more sympathetic or helpful to him at just this time than Jean Faircloth, the soft-spoken, intelligent Southern girl he and his mother had met on the boat that brought them to Manila. The courtship and marriage that followed dated from the grievous loss of his mother.

So it was in an atmosphere of great changes in his life that he began what he called the job of changing the Philippines from "a tempting, juicy morsel to a rugged citadel of militant freedom . . . Strong enough so that they will not be taken without great blood and sweat and toil." If the work was the least bit strange to him, he soon felt at home. For 10,000 miles way, in Washington, his perennial critics opened up with a fresh blast against him.

One charged "this bellicose, swashbuckling former Chief of Staff is setting up a military dictatorship for his pal Quezon." Champions of immediate independence for the Philippines renewed their attack on the 10-year plan, and complained that the American flag should not be flying over the work MacArthur was doing.

Quezon's answer to this was to appoint MacArthur field marshal of the Commonwealth army. It was the first such title ever held by an American soldier, for MacArthur was still a major general in our Army—having reverted to that rank after wearing four stars as Chief of Staff.

His induction as field marshal was held with considerable pomp and circumstance at Quezon's Malacanang Palace on the night of August 24, 1936. Quezon had come a long way in the world—from the status of a minor insurrectionist to a social plane which saw him the ruler of the rich archipelago, with handsome cars, the yacht Casiana which had belonged to Edward

MacARTHUR AND QUEZON—Gen. Douglas MacArthur (right) and President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines engaged in this hearty handshake shortly before the war in the Pacific started

Dynasty, and such a dazzling appurtenance as a private Arthur Murray dance instructor, and now, he said by broad inference in his opening remarks, here he was hiring the distinguished son of the distinguished Lieut. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, who had once received Quezon as a prisoner in this very banquet hall!

By the time Mrs. Quezon had handed MacArthur the 11-ounce gold baton of field marshal, that evening, MacArthur was ready to reply with a declamatory broadside that put to shame the trills of little Quezon's talk.

"The progress of a man's life," MacArthur said, "is punctuated by a series of culminations. For me, this is one. I shall always treasure the memory of this hour, not only because of its own intrinsic significance, not only because of the courtesy and hospitality which have so delightfully characterized it, but more than all because it forges another link in a long chain of friendship and cooperation which has bound the MacArthur family with the Philippines for four decades.

"This baton, in itself, is a piece of compelling artistry. It commands admiration. But in its significance it means much more than that. It is an impelling symbol—the symbol of the soldier. It is probable that almost as soon as men began to collect together for common purposes that some kind of conspicuous objects were used as emblems, or symbols of a sentiment, as rallying points for common aspirations and efforts. The mystery of symbols lies deep in human nature. Impulses to that end spring spontaneously in the hearts of men. The cross, the crescent, the flag, perhaps the three greatest symbols, have represented from time immemorial the codes of Christ, of Allah and of native land.

"The baton from the twilight days of antiquity has symbolized the creed of the soldier," this incredible speaker rolled on without the use of notes. "Its core—the military code—has come down to us from even before the age of knighthood and chivalry. It embraces the highest moral laws and will stand the test of any ethics or philosophies ever promulgated for the betterment of mankind. Its requirements are for the things that are right and its restraints are from the things that are wrong.

"The soldier, above all other men, is required to perform the highest act of religious teaching—sacrifice. In battle and in the face of danger and death he discloses those divine attributes which his maker gave when He created men in His own image. No physical courage and no brute instincts can take the place of the annunciation and spiritual uplift which will alone sustain him. However, horrible the incidents of war may be, the soldier who is called upon to offer and to give his life for his country is one of the noblest developments of mankind. I do not know the dignity of his birth, but I do know the glory of his death.

"He dies unquestioning, uncomplaining, with faith in his heart and on his lips the hope that his country will go on to victory. He passes beyond the mists that blind us here to become part of that beautiful thing we call the spirit of the unknown soldier. In chambered temple of silence the dust of his dauntless valor sleeps, waiting, waiting in the chancery of heaven, waiting the final reckoning of judgment day.

"Every reasonable man knows that war is cruel and destructive, yet our civilization is such that a very little of the favor of war is sufficient to melt its veneer of kindliness. We all dream of the day when human conduct shall be governed by the Decalogue and the Sermon on the Mount, but as yet it is only a dream. The springs of human conflict cannot be eradicated through institutions, but only through the reform of the individual human being, and that is a task which has baffled the highest theologians for 2000 years and more.

"The Philippine army is being organized solely for the preservation of peace, or for the restoration of peace after it has been lost by others.

"I often wonder," MacArthur mused, "how the future historian in the calmness of his study will analyze the civilization of the century recently closed. It was ushered in by the end of the Napoleonic Wars, the American Civil War, the Crimean War, the Austro-Prussian War, the Franco-Prussian War, the Boer War, the opium wars of England and China, the Spanish-American War, the Russo-Japanese War and finally the World War.

"If he compares this record of human slaughter with, say the thirteenth century, when civilization was just emerging from the Dark Ages, when literature had its Dante, art its Michael Angelo, education its dawn of famous colleges and technical schools in Europe, medicine its organization of hospital systems and politics its foundation of Anglo-Saxon liberty and the Magna Carta, the verdict cannot be that wars have been on the wane. In the last 3400 years only 268—less than one in 13—have been free from war. No wonder that Plato, the wisest of all men, once exclaimed: 'Only the dead have seen the end of war.'"

MACARTHUR had expressed his resignation to the instrument of war, now he sought to deal with this primary occupational disease of mankind.

Dionysius, the ancient thinker, 20 centuries ago uttered these words: 'It is a law of nature common to all mankind, which time shall neither annul nor destroy, that those that have greater strength and power shall bear rule over those who have less.'" MacArthur let that sink in. "From the dawn of history to the present day," he suddenly roared, "it has always been the militant aggressor taking the place of the unprepared.

"Where are the empires of yesterday? Where is Egypt, once a State on a high plane of civilization, where a form of Socialism prevailed and where the distribution of wealth was regulated? Her high organization did not protect her. Where are the empires of the east, and the empires of the west, which ones were the shrines of wealth, wisdom and culture?

"Where are Babylon, Persia, Carthage, Rome, Byzantium? They all fell, never to rise again, annihilated at the hands of a more warlike and aggressive people, their culture memories, the cities ruins. Where are Peru and old Mexico? A handful of bold and crafty invaders destroyed them, and with them their independence, their institutions, their nationality and their civilization.

"Saddest of all, the downfall of Christian Byzantium. When Constantinople fell, that center of pleasure, learning and wealth, and all the wickedness and corruption that goes with it, a pall fell over Asia and southeastern Europe which has never been lifted. Wars have been fought for nearly five centuries that have had for at least one of their goals the bringing back under the cross of that part of the world lost to a wild horde of a few thousand adventurers on horseback whom hunger and the unkind climate of their steppes forced to seek more fertile regions.

"The thousand years of existence of the Byzantium Empire, its size, its religion, the wealth of its capital city, were but added incentives and inducements to an impecunious conqueror. For wealth is no protection to aggression. It is no more an augury of military and defensive strength in a nation than it is an indication of health in an individual. Success in war depends upon men, not money. No nation has ever been subdued for lack of it. The nations swept away were submerged by force of arms. Once each was strong and military, each rose by military prowess, each fell through degeneracy of military capacity, because of unpreparedness. The battlefield was the bed on which they were born into this world, and the battlefield became the couch on which their worn-out bodies finally expired."

He meant all these things as much for the United States as for the little brown men who sat at his feet, in swank evening dress, that night at Malacanang Palace. But the chief American reaction seemed to be the standing offer a picture magazine made. It would pay a bonus for any picture of MacArthur arrayed in the trappings of a field marshal's uniform.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'To Be or Not to Be' Was A Nice Choice of Title!

It Pertained Also to Yesterday's Screening; "Athaliah" to Open Tuesday With Benefit; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

SOONER OR LATER, YESTERDAY—mostly later—one presumes that the harassed Mr. Dan Terrell, the Sun Valleyite of the loewcal Loew organization, got hold of a print and managed to negotiate a preview screening of "To Be or Not to Be" for the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks. If he did, he takes on new stature as a go-getter, because at time of departure of this department, without having seen the lamented Carole Lombard and the reconstructed Jack Benny, in what is reputed to be one of Ernst Lubitsch's best comedies, Manager Fred Rohrs' United Artists shipping department was lending Mr. Terrell very spotty assistance in his effort to run down a copy of the picture.

FLORENCE REED

At 11:30 a. m., the appointed hour for the screening, it would "be over in just a minute." At 11:45 a. m., 12 m., 12:15, 12:30 and 12:45 p. m., it had "just left the Union Station," no longer than a good, healthy home-run from the projection room at 306 H Street. Art being long and time fleeting, and the running time of the film something in the neighborhood of two hours, that is when we started our sprint back to the columns of this instrument of public enlightenment as a favor to a deadline that is "touchier" than Mr. Lubitsch's direction. Touchier, even, than Mr. Terrell was beginning to be. Otherwise, why was he offering to send out for coffee and sandwiches and stuff?

Anyhow, "To Be or Not to Be," is a honey of a picture—so I hear—and I hope you will like it, once "Son of Fury" gets out of its way at the Palace.

But time was not wholly a-wastin' in Paramount's plushy theaterette. During the hour and a quarter United Artists devoted to giving new point to the title of their feature, the resourceful Mr. Terrell sprayed the screen with shortreel subjects, one after another, after another, after another. To begin with, Mr. Fulton Lewis, jr., with a party including Manager Bill Dolph, of WOL, cheered a Fox Movietone survey of governmental Washington in wartime, for which the commentary was delivered by Mr. Fulton Lewis, jr., in a manner to give Lowell Thomas, John Kennedy and the rest of the boys a slight case of the shakes. Then we looked at "Flag of Mercy," one of John Nesbitt's "Passing Parade" releases, in which Sara Haden briefly reenacts the career of Clara Barton, whom she resembles almost as closely as Raymond Massey does Lincoln. Then came the payoff in a first glimpse of "Jasper and the Watermelons," a Paramount Technicolor short that would be a cartoon except that what it is is a "puppetoon," acted entirely by animated miniatures of a most amazing nature. Keep your eye out for Jasper. He is the first one of his kind. "To Be or Not to Be" was on its way over from the station!

A Collision Avoided

Out of a long-distance conversation between Father Gilbert V. Hartke, of Catholic University, and Florence Reed, in New York, on Monday afternoon, came the decision to present the premiere of the C. U. Speech and Drama Department's production or Racine's "Athalih," starring Miss Reed, on Tuesday night, March 17, in the University Theater, instead of Wednesday night, as originally announced. The opening performance will be for the benefit of the canteen conducted by the American Theater Wing War Service, in New York, in which Miss Reed, along with most of the rest of the theatrical profession, is deeply interested. The change in inaugural date not only will afford an agreeable means of celebrating St. Patrick's Day, but also will avoid a clash with the finals of the District One-Act Play Tournament, in Roosevelt High School Auditorium, on next Wednesday night. Miss Reed, incidentally, will be honor guest at a press tea in the home of Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller on Sunday afternoon from 4:30 to 7.

So, on behalf of Joseph Heidt, of the Theater Guild, as well as this column, we retract. Paul Muni in "Yesterday's Magic," at the National the week of March 30, will NOT be the sixth and final subscription play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society season. That will be "Arsenic and Old Lace," coming along about the middle of May. Mr. Heidt's wire, apparently, was a little confused by the number of bonus plays Washington subscribers have been getting at subscription rates. So were we, evidently, else we would have checked instead of taking his word for it.

Personal-Aside-to-Mr. Terrell Note

Did it ever get there?

After All, Lady, the Manicuring, or Whatever, Could Wait!

GEORGE BRENT, MISCHA AUER AND JOAN BENNETT in one of the unconventionally hilarious scenes in Edward Small's new picturization of the famous old stage farce, "Twin Beds," soon to be released by United Artists. Mr. Auer, the Yehudi with a derby hat,, quite obviously is the little man who wasn't supposed to be there!

Miss Hepburn Plays Barry Comedy Next Week

"WITHOUT LOVE." With Katharine Hepburn in the leading role and four of the people most concerned with her smashing hit, "The Philadelphia Story," this new comedy by its author, Philip Barry, opens a week's run at the National Theater Monday evening. Contemporary Washington is the setting. Elliott Nugent costars with Miss Hepburn, while their supporting company includes J. M. Kerrigan, Audrey Christie, Barry Thomson, Don Briggs, Robert Chisholm, Royal Beal, Emily Massey and Leonard Mudie. Robert B. Sinclair is directing and Robert Edmond Jones has designed the set. This is the fourth subscription production of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society season. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Capitol

"THE LADY HAS PLANS." Paulette Goddard plays an American reporter mistaken in Lisbon for an international spy in this new film costaring Ray Milland. On Miss Goddard's back is suppposed to be a secret war plan stolen from the American government. Those striving for a look at the Goddard spinal column include Roland Young, Albert Dekker, Cecil Kellaway and Edward Norris. Jimmy Durante, he of the prominent nose, headliens the new stage revue, which further features Caryl Gould, songstress, the Del Rios, dancers, and the returning Rhythm Rockets. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"FANTASIA." Walt Disney's remarkable marriage of his Technicolored drawing and a concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra returns to town as a popular priced attraction after considerable eclat as a "road show." The musical compositions for each of which Dosney employs his own characters include "The Nutcracker Suite," "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," "The Rites of Spring," Beethoven's 'Postoral" Symphony, "The Dance of the Hours" and "A Night on Bald Mountain." Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"DANGEROUSLY THEY LIVE." This story of the kidnaping of a girl worker of the British Export Bureau costars John Garfield, Raymond Massey and Nancy Coleman. Her escape leads her to a hospital where her story of sabotage is doubted. Lee Patrick, Moroni Olsen, Esther Dale and Ben Welden are featured. Ray Kinney's "Salute to Hawaii" brings his orchestral group to the Earle stage. Featured are Mayme Holt, Alfred Apaka and the five Aloma Maids. Follows "Louisiana Purchase."

Palace

"SON OF FURY." With Tyrone Power in the swashbuckling central role, the film version of the novel, "Benjamin Blake," by Edison Marshall, continues for a second week on F Street. Gene Tierney and Frances Farmer are Power's leading ladies in an 18th century story of revenge and South Sea pearl fishing.

Metropolitan

Columbia

"NAZI AGENT." With Conrad Veidt in the dual title role, this M-G-M film of espionage in this country immediately preceding the current war remains for a second week on F Street. Ann Ayars has the central feminine role. Veidt plays a conniving resident consul.

Little

"CITIZEN KANE." The Orson Welles triumph continues into its third revival week. Welles and his Mercury Players play all the roles in this novel relation of a much-hated, much-loved newspaper publisher's career.

Pix

"LADY FOR A NIGHT." Joan Blondell, John Payne, Blanche Yurka and Philip Merivale have the top roles in this new film of life among the Memphis aristocrats around the 1890s. The story concerns the girl from the wrong side of the tracks who marries the scion of a destitute, blue-blooded family. Ray Middleton, Edith Barrett, Leonid Kinskey, Montagu Love and Carmel Myers are featured. Opens Saturday afternoon.

Trans-Lux

"MAIN STREET, U. S. A." This "March of Time" heads the fifth anniversary bill of the newsreel house, emphasizing what life in America might be like under Hitler. "Wacky Wigwams" is the color cartoon for the week, while the Kaltenborn and McCrary editions of the news are seen in their most recent editions. Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"RUNNING WILD." Joan Carroll headlines the company of this burlesque revue arriving Sunday afternoon on the stage of the Gayety. Billy Hagen and Harry Seymore have the top comedy assignments, while other principals include Patricia Morgan, Ted Blair, Aleen Moody, Merle Sevier, Jerry and Jane Barton and Andy Arcary. Midnight performances every Saturday evening.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, March 10.

A Polish Embassy official, who had been among the last persons to see Poland's Foreign Minister Josef Beck, relates this story which Beck told him. At his final conference with Hitler, when the Nazi leader tried to persuade him to give up his pact with the Allies, Hitler offered Poland a large slice of Slovakia . . . "But how can we be sure," asked Beck, "that Poland will be able to keep Slovakia?" . . . "We can be sure," said Hitler, "because the philosophy of National Socialism will prevail in Europe for more than a thousand years" . . . "Only one philosophy—Christianity—has prevailed here for more than a thousand years," was Josef Beck's final, decisive, reply, "and He didn't promise us Slovakia."

TYRONE POWER

The third in WNYC's "Salute to United Nations" series—the one devoted to Yugoslavia—will be written by Fiorello LaGuardia, who once had been an American Consul in that country . . . Mrs. Maxim Litvinoff, wife of the Russian Ambassador, has become a painter. She's just finished her first canvases . . . Tyrone Power visited the Naval Headquarters here to try to enlist in the Naval Aviation Corps. He was told that he lacked the required collegiate credits, but might obtain a waiver. He then was questioned about his marital status. Power informed that he's married. "We take no married men," was the ruling.

At Carnegie Hall, on March 18, the American Art Federation will have a concert featuring a number of artists, each of whom represents one of the United Nations. Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, telephoned Mrs. David Dubinsky, of ORT, and demanded: "Why isn't the Luxembourg government represented on your concert-program?" . . . Mrs. Dubinsky was puzzled by this strange query. "I don't know any artist who comes from Luxembourg," she confessed. "In fact, I don't know anybody who ever came from there" . . . "I was born in Luxembourg," said Woll, "and I'll find an artist for you" . . . He did. And Luxembourg will be represented.

A Dr. Tannenbaum demonstrated mass-hypnotism before the student body at Yeshiva College. Fifteen of the rabbinical students volunteered for the experiment . . . The hypnotist directed them to eat apple pie, which had been placed before them. The 15 hypnotized students obeyed. He then directed them to eat some slices of bacon. All 15 refused to touch the non-kosher food . . . He then ordered them to drink water. Fourteen obeyed, but one refused—for he wasn't wearing a hat, and therefore resisted the command to violate the ban against eating or drinking while the head is uncovered.

To the agency office of Chamberlain Brown came a young man named William Zuckert, 6 feet 2, from Erie, Pa., and he asked for a job on the stage. He confessed that he had no experience. "What brings you here?" asked Brown. The young man told him this story: He had walked by the Gaiety Theater, the burlesque house which was closed by order of City Hall. A man stopped him, and asked him to sign the petition asking that the Gaiety be reopened. Zuckert signed his name. There was a line on which he was to write his "Occupation." He confessed he was unemployed. "Then put in 'Actor'," the man suggested, "go see Chamberlain Brown."

The new loan now being made to China is being described in Washington as "Knox's Folly"—because of Knox's statement that Berlin, and not Tokyo, was our No. 1 enemy . . . "Beauty Parade," dedicated to the most beautiful girls in the world, is featuring a portrait of Sophie Tucker

A Host of Stars for De Mille Hostesses

Hollywood, Calif., March 10.—Now that we're about to celebrate Cecil B. De Mille's thirtieth year as a producer by releasing his latest picture, "Reap the Wild Wind," at the beautifully redecorated El Capitan Theater, in Hollywood, I have a suggestion to make—which will probably be laughed off lightly. Here it is anyhow. Why not have as hostesses for that memorable night some of the ladies Cecil B. De Mille helped make into picture stars? The list would astound you—Gloria Swanson, Jane Darwell, Blanche Sweet, Ina Claire, Geraldine Farrar, Mae Murray, Mary Pickford, Wanda Hawley, Kathleen Williams, Florence Vidor, Julia Faye, Lila Lee, Bebe Daniels, Agnes Ayres, Mildred Harris, Leatrice Joy, Lois Wilson, Anna Q. Nilsson, Nita Naldi, Estelle Taylor, Vera Reynolds, Jetta Goudal, Lillian Rich, Dorothy Cummings, Phyllis Haver, Kay Johnson, Eleanor Boardman, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert, Loretta Young, Jean Arthur, Franciska Gaal, Barbara Stanwyck, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard and Susan Hayward. There are few men in this business that can match that record.

CECIL B. DE MILLE

That skin rash Dorothy Lamour has developed came from the scratch of a tiger in her last picture. It's been giving her a great deal of trouble. Dottie's such a good sport she went right on working after it happened, but she's had several recurrences of breaking out of the skin since that, which has her and the studio plenty worried. And because of it, she may have to give up "Road to Morocco," with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope.

Ran into Bob Porterfield, founder of the Barter Theater, in Abingdon, Va., who barters entertainment for provender. He has a swell idea for keeping defense stamps rolling. On his way out from the East, every tip he gave to a porter, taxi driver, waiter or bell hop was a defense stamp. The boys all welcomed the idea. Why not make this rule universal, Mr. Morgenthau?

Cowboy Star Roy Rogers comes to work on a bicycle. His horse comes in a special trailer.

Patricia Grant's in town making a test for "Pearl of Paradise," because Director Al Santell got a traffic ticket in San Francisco. When he went to pay it, Patricia was behind the desk, looking so attractive that this test is the result of that fine.

With all this chat about the Jack Oakies wanting to adopt a couple of children, few people know that they've been taking care of two English children for months, and will continue for the duration.

Since the hit of "Woman of the Year," it's a cinch that George Stevens will get Katie Hepburn for "The American Way."

County Heads Call for Wage, Profit Ceiling

States. These are the things the people in our counties are thinking about."

A brief preamble to the resolutions praised the Vice President for inviting cooperation, then summarized the impressions of the county officials in these three paragraphs:

"We are concerned and alarmed at the evidences of confusion and lack of coordinated action which exist in the Federal Government on all sides.

"In these times employers, labor, agriculture, Government officeholders and seekers, and all others, must call a halt to personal ambitions, bickering and partisan measures.

"War profits, short hours and many peacetime rights and privileges must give way to the transcendant need for war material and preparations, if our way of life is to survive."

Henderson Also Speaker

Besides Vice President Wallace, the conference of county officials heard William A. Smith, president of the County Officials Association of the United States; Price Administrator Leon Henderson, Edward Ennis, chief of the alien enemy control unit of the Department of Justice; Dean James M. Landis, director of the OCD, and Maury Maverick, chief of the bureau of governmental requirements, War Production Board.

Former Representative Maverick had invited the officials to meet here to discuss war problems.

After a survey of the situation, the resolutions adopted yesterday were drafted and unanimously recommended by a committee composed of Chairman Pete Hughes, Pueblo County, Colo.; Walter D. Ralston, commissioner of Butler County, Ohio; W. O. Folger, Weschestir County, N. Y.; Harold E. Wallace, Salt Lake County, Utah; Dave Miller, Tarrant County, Tex.; Guy Gordon, Douglas County, Oreg.; C. L. Preisker, Santa Barbara County, Calif.; Bryan Hanks, Dade County, Fla.; W. Clyde Koonts, Rockingham County, Va.; Mr. Halley, of Georgia, and Mr. Halahan, of Virginia.

Informal Seminar

During recesses in the sessions, the "grassroots" officials carried on a lively informal seminar on the war problem.

Some overheard statements:

"We have plenty of power in this country—if only we can stop wasting it."

"We've got to have guidance if we're going to pull together; and we've got to pull together to win."

"Of course, I believe in democracy—we all do—that's why we're here—but there's nothing in the book about democracy having to be inefficient."

"The folks down in my county are ready to do their part and more; but they don't want their efforts wasted by bumbling here."

Off to Get His Wings

WILLIAM (BILL) HANCOCK, Jr., of 3600 Park Place Northwest, has completed his preliminary flight training at Anacostia Naval Air Station, it was announced yesterday, and is bound for the naval air field at Corpus Christi, Tex., for advanced flight training. tion."

At this point, the President, amidst much glee, turned to Secretary Early and asked in a pleading voice if he would rewrite the letter.

Tell them, the President directed, that in buildings where they have to keep work going, to put something across the windows. And tell them further, he said, that in buildings where they can afford to stop work for a while, to turn out the lights.

the war, and require him to do it.

The survey shows, first, that 82 per cent of voters throughout the country favor a national registration by which the Government can determine what each person not already in national service is qualified to do. Public opinion was then measured on the total mobilization issue itself with the following results:

"After finding out what each person can do, should the Government have the power to tell each citizen what to do as his part in the war effort and require him or her to do it?"

Yes	61%
No	32
Undecided	7

If the undecided vote is eliminated in the tabulation, the vote of those with definite opinions would be:

Vote of Those With Opinions

Yes	65%
No	35

These results emphasize four things about public opinion and the war today.

1. The poll is striking evidence that the American people are ready and willing to accept voluntarily sacrifices and deprivations for war which the people in dictator countries were forced to accept whether they liked it or not. Clearly the American public is willing to make far more drastic sacrifices than political leaders have yet asked for.

2. The public is not particularly afraid of enormous centralization of power during the war emergency. The typical voter, the poll found, argues that such blanket power is essential to fight the kind of total war necessary to beat the Axis. This reaction serves to emphasize that in the American democracy bold and unprecedented actions can be taken in time of crisis without disturbing public unity. Total mobilization is without precedence in American history, and yet the people are voting for such a program even before it has reached the early stage of formulation into a Congressional bill.

3. The number of voters who favor total mobilization is nearly as large as the number who in 1940 voted for conscription for military service in a series of institute surveys. Many weeks before any major political leader had advocated conscription, the people were voting for it by a substantial majority (64 per cent). Congress passed the act four months later.

4. The poll results suggest that the morale problem in the United States is not public apathy or complacency, but rather how to get managerial action along the homefront that is drastic enough and tough enough to measure up to the public's own ideas as to what should be done.

The largest percentage in favor of total mobilization was found in the Rocky Mountain States, where 69 per cent of all persons polled voted for it. The Pacific Coast States likewise show a high percentage in favor (63 per cent), as does the South (66 per cent).

The idea of total mobilization has more support among men than among women.

Final Results in Poll On Total Mobilization

Nelson Serves Blunt Warning

equipment now involved in war production were used 24 hours a day, seven days a week, "we would practically double the man-hours" now going into military production.

Nelson noted that 20 per cent of American war plants now operate only five or five and one-half days a week. Many plants, he added, close on Sundays. In many others, the second shift uses only 40 per cent of the plant facilities, and the third shifts use only 20 per cent.

This, he concluded, means that thousands of machines needed for munitions work now stand idle part or all of every weekend and from 8 to 16 hours every weekday.

In another illustration, the production boss said that if the facilities of all the Nation's 31 aircraft engine and propeller plants were used to the same extent as those of the three with the best records, production could be increased immediately by 25 per cent.

Similarly, if all of America's 153 machine-tool factories operated at the same level of utilization as the top three, machine-tool output would be stepped up by 45 per cent, he said.

Admitting a "slack" production, Nelson insisted there was no single cause, and that blaming any one group, or "smearing," or "name-calling" would not help.

Nelson acknowledged that the cooperation he asked between labor and management would not be easy and said he was aware of the "tradition of mutual rivalry and suspicion in some plants vital to our war production."

"But," he added, "I was never surer of anything in my life than I am that we either work together for the common good or we shall inevitably share the common evil of defeat."

"We have but little time. That time has been bought at the price of American boys fighting on lonely islands, in steaming jungles; by American boys aboard storm-tossed warships warding off the death that strikes from the clouds and from beneath the wave; by American boys fighting in the best warplanes in the world, planes of which we must make more and more fast. If through selfishness, inertia, indifference or any other cause we let them down, then the American people will damn us forevermore," he said.

Two Tags Replace World War I Disks

The new tags, of stainless and rustproof monel metal, replace the aluminum disk used by United States troops in World War I, which did not contain the valuable medical information prices are in excess of 110 per cent of parity, Henderson is entitled to freeze them under the authority of the new Emergency Price Control Act.

Henderson Sets Prices on Pork and Used Tires

In setting levels at which used tires may be sold to the consumer, Henderson admitted that he was "striking directly at profiteering," inasmuch as there have been complaints of "gouging" by dealers. The price boss pointed out that used tires constitute the only remaining market for the average consumer, estopped from buying new and retreaded tires by the rationing program.

The ceilings are based on the amount of wear of the tread and the sizes of the casings. Prices existing between October 1 and October 15 last year were taken into consideration in setting the maximum levels, the OPA said. In general, tires in the best class, with more than seven thirty-seconds of an inch remaining on the tread design, will sell for about half the price of a new tire of the same wheel size.

The tire and tube price schedules will become effective after March 16.

The move to stabilize pork prices is the second major step the OPA has taken in the field of food products. The first set maximum prices for canned fruit and vegetables.

Big Item in Family Budget

Henderson said the pork order was expected to "help importantly in holding down the cost of living, since these meats constitute a major item in the family budget."

Although neither farmers on the one hand nor retailers at the opposite extreme are directly covered by the order, both are expected to be affected, inasmuch as the ceiling will determine the prices which packers can pay for hogs, and the prices at which retailers can obtain the dressed and cured meat.

Pork, the OPA pointed out, is by far the most important meat of the average American consumer, who paid a total bill of more than two million dollars last year for hog products.

Prices for pork products have risen substantially in recent months, Henderson noted, under the three stimuli of military buying, Lend-Lease requirements and increased national income of American consumers, until retail levels are now the highest in recent years and fresh pork sales in New York during February were at a 22-year price maximum.

At the expiration of the 60-day freeze order, a permanent schedule of pork prices will probably be issued, Henderson said.

Yesterday's price regulations were submitted to the Agriculture Department, which "does not see any conflict at this time with its production and procurement programs," it was stated.

From the field, major packing houses yesterday generally expressed approval and indicated their willingness to operate under the order.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Who Hasn't Seen Fiance Since Last October, When He Entered Army, Is Planning to Marry Him At Easter, Against Parents' Wishes; Should She?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl, 19, and for the past year (since March, 1941, to be exact), I have been going with a boy who is now 21. We had planned to be married at Christmas, but he was drafted into the Army last October, so we decided to wait. Since being in the Army, he has been going to a supply school and has worked himself up, so that he may get his rating as supply sergeant later this month. If he does, we plan to be married around Easter, barring unforeseen developments. He is stationed in South Carolina and I plan to live down there. We have almost everything to furnish a small apartment.

My problem is this: My mother does not approve of this boy, although she tells me she has nothing in particular against him. She has never approved of any boy I have gone with, and seems to think I should never get married. As for my father, I have told him all our plans, and while he doesn't disapprove of my marrying this boy, he says it is the wrong time for us to be getting married. We agree with him, in theory; but we are also bearing in mind that this war may not be over for years.

We might see things differently if we could be together more and talk things over. But I have not seen him since last October, and all of our plans have been made by mail. I may not see him again until he comes to take me back with him. I have never met his father, mother or one sister, although I have had several invitations to visit them. They live in southern Virginia and as I have to work six days a week, I could not accept their invitations.

Do you think it is wise for me to marry him, since I do not know his family and since he is in the Army? I have never known a boy who was nicer or more attentive than he; and he has written to me regularly since going away. I shall be watching your column for an answer. Sincerely,

ANXIOUS.

Wartime Marriages Fall in Two Classes

DEAR ANXIOUS: I think you are in far too much of a hurry to get married. Remember the old saying: "Marry in haste and repent at leisure." Even if these were normal times, and you would be stepping into a secure sort of berth, by taking a husband with a well paid position and promising future—a young man whom your parents cordially approved, and with whose family and background you were fully acquainted—I should say that you were too young (at 19) to be irrevocably signing away your girlhood, as you would be doing in getting married, whether or not the marriage lasted.

I don't believe you are looking any further ahead than the end of your nose. Your plan to live in South Carolina, because your soldier husband is currently stationed there, suggests as much. After you had settled in South Carolina (according to plan), what would you expect to live on? Not on a soldier's pay, surely? And do you know whether you could find a position there, paying a self-sustaining wage?

If your husband were to be suddenly transferred to some faraway place, what then? It is hardly in the cards that he will "stay put" where he is, for the duration of the war. Would you have the cash-on-hand to pay the expense of following him about the country, toting your household goods along? And what if he were sent to serve on foreign soil? Wouldn't that mean, for you, coming back where you started from—and trying to get settled all over again?

Are you sure you could stand up to (indeed, have you given any thought to) the proposition of being neither "maid, wife nor widow," during your husband's absence, which will be most of the time? Do you realize that marriage, in these circumstances, means you would be saying good-by to an easy, friendly association with unattached boys and girls your own age,—the very age at which it seems most important to be "one of the gang?" If you were to keep faith with a bridegroom's natural expectation of thoroughgoing wifely loyalty, and avoid furnishing food for malicious gossip, you would be forced into semiretirement, socially. Your "contacts" would include only relatives and a few female friends at equally loose ends.

Please understand that I am not opposed on principle to persons marrying in the face of war's uncertainties. But I think there is a vast difference between hurrying into marriage "because of" war—as you are thinking of doing—and deliberately getting married "in defiance" of war, as certain adult-age couples who had long planned the step proceed to do, even after an outbreak of war has dislocated their careful peacetime calculations. The one kind of marriage is a "panicky" move; the other, a philosophical adjustment to a disappointing, but not necessarily defeating, turn of events.

Your emotional investment of interest in each other scarce deserves to be called love, if it demands to be served at the expense of dragging you down together into a worried, hand-to-mouth sort of existence. And such is the prospect you would be surely facing, if you got married at Easter, as planned. My advice to you is to shelve this plan, confident that if the feeling you share is really love, it will survive and even flourish if put to the test of prolonged separation.

By means of correspondence, you can keep in touch as you have since last October, reaffirming loyalty and renewing memories. And while awaiting a suitable season for marriage—say, two or three years hence—you can make no better use of your time than to get well acquainted with his family. If it happily develops that you and they "take to each other" from the start, a specially consoling bond with him will have been established. Your feeling of need to rush into marriage, lest you lose each other, will be relieved. But if, on the other hand, you find them of alien and hostile temperament, you should beware of marrying him—much as you may care for him today. Because in order to be a truly happy wife, a woman must be a cherished in-law.

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

The girl whose weekly salary is being absorbed in dress alterations may now take heart. At last there are clothes to fit her figure, which probably is not a "junior" type and yet doesn't belong in "misses" clothes. This new size range, called "plus sizing," is designed for the "average" figure, which has been found to be about 5 feet 3 inches in height, weighing 133 pounds.

Through survey by the Department of Agriculture, it was found recently that this "average" girl is far from perfect in her figure proportions. These measurements were taken into consideration by the new size range. The outfits have a misses' shoulder, but are fuller through the bust than a junior style. The waist is also shorter than a misses', but not as short as the junior's.

Gay Slip Covers To Greet Spring

ALL DRESSED-UP and ready to greet spring with a smile—that's the way your rooms will look when you disguise shabby wintry furniture with fresh slip covers. Tailoring your own covers is easy, the pin-on way.

To be truly spring-like, choose a lovely flower-decked chintz—perhaps with creamy magnolias on a rose ground. Then set to work draping your fabric right over the old upholstery.

Remove cushion and cover the inside-back and seat, leaving a 4-inch tuck-in between to relieve strain. As you drape, pin fabric in place where seams will be, then cut 1½ inches outside pins to allow for generous seams.

Pin and cut the rest of the cover the same way, remove carefully and baste. After a try-on, finish seams with welting or binding. As a last step, sew on the skirt. Your cover will look truly smooth, professional!

You can easily slip-cover chairs, love seats, sofas, even chaise longues, with the directions in our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully." Explains and diagrams each step, from measuring and cutting to fitting and finishing. Tells how to make bound and welted seams, swag and pleated flounces.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Keeping Fit

WHILE receiving simultaneously a manicure and a pedicure, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, yesterday held her twice-postponed press conference.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"Since entering war work I have simply been rushed to death," declared the indefatigable president of the Do Something About It League. "All my reforms are at a standstill because of my defense activities, but I feel the service of my country must come first."

"Just what are you doing for defense, Mrs. DeGoofey" asked an undercover man for a city desk.

"Just now I am getting my feet into condition for walking and other emergencies," was the reply, "And since, in order to be prepared for the worst, I have taken up the study of typing, I must have almost daily manicures. Why, who knows but that at any moment a general might ask me to type a letter for him!"

Defense Coiffure A Vital Need

"But just what do you intend doing to help win the war?" inquired a "How to Beat the Japs" editorial specialist.

"Well, tomorrow I am going to have a new defense coiffure," was the answer. "I can't do a thing with my hair under this cap. So I am going to have either Gasperre or Chignon design me a hairdress to suit my outfit. Then, of course, I shall have to have a new permanent. You know how necessary a trim hairdress is to a uniform."

Then the next day I suppose you will be starting your parachute practice" suggested an anti-boondoggling defense columnist.

Mrs. DeGoofey paused to drink a glass of persimmon juice handed her by an office minion. "I take this every hour for the Vitamin Z 27 it contains," she explained. "That is the vitamin that gives us aggressiveness—also oomph. As to my schedule for the day after tomorrow, I believe that is the day I get my Turkish bath and massage. You see, I am training down so I will cut the right kind of figure in my uniform—also, of course, so I shall be toughened up to meet the Japs. Do you know how many pounds I have lost in two weeks?"

"Just a minute, Mrs. DeGoofey!" interrupted a Dutch East Indies correspondent "Is it true that you are going to lead a volunteer force of Amazons to help save Australia?"

"I am not yet ready to announce such remote plans," said the reformer, "My trainer tells me it will be some time before I am in perfect form for my uniform. You see, in addition to my bathing and massage, I am working three times a week with a Swedish gymnast. Then I have enrolled in a hikers' club and I am taking private breathing lessons from a Yogi——"

Radical Change In Make-up

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey," protested an Australian correspondent, "don't you realize that the South Pacific is in immediate danger?"

"Yes, but I believe in thorough preparation for any action," was the reply. "Now will you excuse me while I drink my quince juice? I find this juice a rich source of the mineral zanzanese, which is the base of all good posture and also improves the skin pigmentation. And, by the way, that reminds me! My cosmetician is due any minute. You see, since donning a uniform I have had to change my make-up radically."

"Mrs. DeGoofey," broke in a publicity representative of Eat an Orange a Day, Inc., "is there any chance of getting you to assist in the California blackouts?"

"It will be impossible to leave here at present," replied the reformer, "because I have not yet finished my ultra-violet ray treatments, and I am also enrolled in a Spanish class and taking a course in ukelele playing. Also I have signed up for choral speech lessons and I have about 17 more pounds to take off and, if I can finde time, I want to do something about my personality. I think the first duty of every woman in this solemn hour is to keep fit—for—well, for whatever might happen. By the way, I think it is time for my avocado juice!"

You Can Eat Well and Still Lose Two Pounds Weekly

By Ida Jean Kain

A DIET is now good eating. A few years ago the stress was on what not to eat, and the list was sure to include your favorite foods. But today it is on what to eat, and the list is made up of so many of the foods you eat from choice that dieting is no hardship.

On a balanced slimming diet you can't help but marvel at the amount of food you can eat and still lose two pounds a week—and keep your good disposition.

Good Breakfast Needed

The science of nutrition makes it possible to plan a reducing diet that is adequate—even abundant—in every respect except calories. You can safely draw on excess body fat for part of your energy, provided all the essential food elements are furnished in the daily menus.

In planning your low calorie meals, begin the day with a good breakfast. Have fruit juice or tomato juice, buttered whole wheat toast and coffee, with one teaspoon of cream, and your ration of sugar—all this for 250 calories, and enough food to keep you going strong until noon.

Your reducing allowance for luncheon is about 350 calories. Choose them well and have a good meal. You might like grilled cheese, bacon and tomato on a slice of whole wheat bread, with a tossed green salad, a small serving of fruit for dessert, and hot tea with one lump of sugar. Yes, you're still on your diet!

You can dine and diet on a generous serving of roast lamb or broiled fish with lemon and parsley, fresh spinach, carrots, a hot roll of enriched or whole wheat flour, a small pat of butter, and a glass of milk with the fat calories skimmed off. The spinach and carrots are high enough in vitamin A to make up for that taken out of the milk with the cream.

Protective Menu

There you have a day's menu which furnishes an abundance of the protective elements. It may be superior to what you have when you eat as you please and gain weight.

If you wish, you can plan your own menus according to the dietary essentials:

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

Socially speaking—which is what I generally am—yesterday afternoon was no time to catch up on your spring shopping, even though the weather seemed cut to order just for that. . . . A calendar that has been liberally dotted with parties all season was literally jammed with them, from tea time on until late evening when numerous dinners drew to a close.

Mrs. Henry Downe

Seven-league boots would have come in handy for scores of Capitalites who probably started out to at least three fetes, and then gave up after arriving at the first, and decided to linger on, relax, and enjoy themselves.

From 5:30 to 7:30—and long afterward—Countess de Marenches was receiving in her Fairfax apartment in compliment to her sister, Mrs. Henry Downe. . . . During the same hours, the Argentine First Secretary and Senora de Scilingo were entertaining in the Madison Room of the Wardman Park Hotel; and also, during the same hours, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Robbins were greeting guests in their Spring Valley home.

"I'm sure I'll be the first one here," said Mrs. Philip Bonsal, as she deposited her coat before going in to greet Senor and Senora de Scilingo, "but I've simply got to get to another party . . . and it's miles away." She and I went in together. Found several guests arrived already. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, another who had to "get on to another party" (her son's), was chatting with Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, who said she had to be off "in a moment" in order to get back to Warrenton, Va., in time for the first-aid class she teaches there.

"Feel as if I'm playing hookey from work," said Warren Lee Pierson, as he and Mrs. Pierson came in, and took one look at the sunny room that gave the party an appearance of a mid-afternoon affair even though the clock said 6 p. m. . . . Mme. Bruggmann was another early arrival, as were Senora de Michels and her pretty daughter, Cristina; the Chilean First Secretary and Senora de Rodriguez, and several members of the Argentine Embassy staff.

Senora de Scilingo, who was smartly turned out in a street-length black frock, styled on straight lines with long, fitted sleeves, and Mrs. Robbins, whose black frock, trimmed in powder blue, was worn with a matching feather hat, discussed "the dress situation." Mrs. Robbins vowed she would be greatly relieved if women's wearing apparel became so standardized that all of us could keep wearing this season's clothes as long as they would last. Said she had a shopping splurge only twice a year anyway, and she'd like to do away with even that.

Celebrities Out in Droves

From the Scilingo fete, which gathered in more and more celebrities as the hour grew later, Mrs. Robbins and Mrs. Bonsal went on to the "Hutch" Robbins party; and later, Mrs. Robbins was hostess at a dinner in her new home—a dinner, incidentally, that started out "to be a party for four and grew to 17 in no time at all."

Meanwhile, as a distinguished throng filled the Madison Room for the Scilingo party, an equally interesting group was enjoying Countess de Marenches' party—the second on her calendar this week. Both the hostess and her sister have scores of friends in Washington; so when it comes to entertaining, they find it necessary to give "a series" instead of just one party. . . . Yesterday's item in the current run was one of those pleasantly informal affairs, so thoroughly accented with celebrities that guests lingered on as long as possible; far longer, in most cases, than the final hour for which they were invited.

Mr. Martinelli

Anybody dropping in for that party would have been able to understand on short order why Mrs. Downe won such wide acclaim as one of the outstanding hostesses in Paris for so many years. She was here, there, and everywhere yesterday—seeing that everybody met everybody else; and that all guests had a good time. Countess de Marenches was carefully attending to her duties at the same time—with the result that all guests were loathe to leave, even after the final party-hour rolled around.

"Have you met Giovanni Martinelli?" was the question rippling the length and breadth of the room when I arrived. I hadn't; but I soon did. Found him interesting; and interested—in everybody else in the room. "Wish I could stay until the end of the party," he said. "But I've got an appointment. Must be on my way." And, with a low bow to the hostess, Mrs. Downe, and the room-full of guests in general, the famous Metropolitan tenor took his leave.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope were among those present; also, Miss Carolyn Nash; several members of the French Embassy staff, including M. and Mme. Georges-Picot; Georges Bertrand-Vigne, Baron James Baeyens, and Etienne Burin des Roziers. Lothrop Stoddard was among those arriving for the latter half of the fete; as were Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Merritt Swift, Col. and Mrs. Bentley Mott, Capt. and Mme. Karl Wessel, of the Swedish Legation; George Abell, who tore away to catch a train for New York; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, several members of the State Department, and more Army and Navy officials than I've seen collected under one party roof in a long time.

Spanish was spoken—and often—out at the party given by the "Hutch" Robbins. The host and hostess, who formerly made their home in South America, had gathered in a sizable group of friends with South American "connections" in one way or another, and the party moved merrily along—as did several others under way during the same hours.

'Bill' Browns to Be Honored

Society-go-Round: Back in Washington once more, the William H. Browns, of Pittsburgh, will be guests of honor when Mrs. George Barnett and Fred Roy gather in a number of friends from the young-married set on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Barnett's home on Rhode Island Avenue will be the scene of the 5-to-7 party. . . . Frequent visitors to the Capital, the Browns are widely known here, and there has been wide rejoicing since the announcement made the rounds that "Bill" Brown had received a naval commission and would be on duty here for a while. . . . First time I ever saw young Mr. Brown was at the French Embassy back in 1939 when Count de Saint Quentin, then French Ambassador, decorated him with the insignia of Officer of the Legion of Honor . . . The citation had something to do with his "assistance and advice in the development of French export trade," and there was mention of his being a member of the American Chamber of Commerce of Paris; and also of his continuation "of humanitarian work in France initiated in the World War by his mother."

Gretchen Damrosch (Mrs. Thomas K.) Finletter's telephone has been ringing constantly ever since her sprightly narrative, "All The Other Girls," appeared in the current issue of The New Yorker. . . . Apparently, everybody has read it and found it highly amusing. . . . In case you haven't, and somebody mentions it at a tea party, you can get by without making any admissions if you'll just say, "Yes, those Junior Miss pieces are delightful, aren't they? And the mothers in this one! I guess all of us know several Mrs. Eccleses, don't we?" . . . Better still, you might take time out and read it . . . You'll love it.

Miss Dillard Wins Sweet Briar Honor

Miss Evelyn Dillard, daughter of Mrs. Frank M. Dillard, of Alexandria, has been chosen as one of the two sophomore house presidents of the Student Government Association for the year 1942-43 at Sweet Briar College in Virginia. Miss Dillard, who is a freshman at Sweet Briar, made her debut here during the winter.

Miss Phyllis Tenney, daughter of Mrs. Keeler Tenney, of Washington, will be next year's editor of the Brambler, student literary magazine which is published five times annually at Sweet Briar. She is a member of the sophomore class this year and has been an honor student since she entered college.

Bettie Beach Arriving Soon For Vacation

Spring vacation time is arriving with the first warm breezes, and a younger set newcomer who will soon descend upon Washington for a few days of freedom from books is Miss Bettie Beach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex S. Beach.

Miss Beach will get into town Friday with ten days' leave from Penn Hall and will visit her parents at their apartment at the Broadmoor. So that she may meet some of the young people her own age here, Mrs. Frank Thorp, jr., will give a cocktail party Sunday in her honor at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Beach, who have been here for the past season, are calling Washington home for the duration. Mr. Beach is an attorney, and he and his family used to spend much of their time abroad. Bettie received her schooling in Spain. When summer comes, however, the family probably will return to their home in Camden, Me. Mr. Beach, incidentally, is not the author, but a cousin of the author. The name runs in the family, according to Mrs. Beach.

Hendrik Ligtelijns Are Guests of Honor At Farewell Fete

The chief clerk of the Netherland Legation, Hendrik Ligtelijn, and Mme. Ligtelijn were guests of honor at a farewell luncheon yesterday given by members of the legation staff at Hotel 2400. The honorees will leave today for New York where Mr. Ligtelijn will join the office of the Java, China and Japan Steamship Line.

Among the guests at the fete, at which Mme. Ligtelijn was the only woman, were the Minister Counselor of the legation, Baron von Boetzelaer; the Commercial Counselor, Kleijn Molekamp; the Naval Attache, Admiral Meijer Ranneft; the Commercial Counselor, J. H. Daubanton; the First Secretary, Dr. H. R. Van Houten; the Assistant Naval Attache, Commander J. Blaauboer; Dr. H. Riemens, H. S. Hallo, Willem Adams, Dr. G. E. Mellema; all commercial secretaries, and Attache, Th. F. Valck Lucassen.

Miss Schall Returns to City

Miss Padgett Schall, daughter of Mrs. Thomas David Schall and the late Senator Schall, has returned to her home, Wyncrest, in Berwyn, Md., following several weeks of winter sports.

Miss Schall has been in Vermont for several weeks, and while there skiied down Mount Mansfield—a feather in the cap of any skier. She also attended the University of Vermont winter carnival.

Mrs. Edward Pou Is Honored

Mrs. Allard H. Gasque entertained at the first in a series of luncheons at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mrs. Edward Pou, widow of the late Representative from North Carolina, who is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wadden.

Seated around the table, which was centered in jonquils and narcissus that one of the guests, Mrs. B. W. Covington, had brought up from her home in Florence, S. C., were Mrs. Ellison D. Smith, wife of the Senator from South Carolina; Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniels, Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax, Va.; Mrs. John Council, Mrs. Eldon King, Mrs. Robert Doughton, Mrs. W. C. Harllee, Mrs. Edward B. Gibson, Mrs. John Rogers, Miss Tecie McDavid and Mrs. Benjamin Hill.

Senator Chavez Gives Dinner For Col. Abbey

Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, entertained at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last evening in honor of Lieut. Col. Evers Abbey, United States Army Air Corps, who is soon to be transferred to the field from the Office of the Chief of the Air Corps. Ranking guest at the dinner was the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Rodolfo Michels.

Among the other guests were Maj. Gen. Henry Miller, Army Air Corps; Col. Harold L. Clark, Army Air Corps; Col. J. M. Tildsley, Marine Corps; Col. Wilton B. Persons, General Staff Corps; Lieut. Col. Guillermo Marin, Assistant Military Attache of the Chilean Embassy; Maj. E. R. Diggs jr., Army Air Corps; Elwood Ashey, Leslie Biffle, Dr. Tomas Cajigas, Robert Rogers, of New York City; John Coakley, of Youngstown, Ohio; Dennis Chavez, jr.; Ernest Espinosa, J. Ramon Espinosa; George W. Angell, C. E. Fleming, Dr. Julian Hawthorne, of Rye, N. Y.; H. C. O'Brien, and Henry Grunewald.

Nancy Ruth Seal To Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Riggs Seal announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Nancy Ruth, and Stanley Abrahamson, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stolle Abrahamson, of Virginia, Minn. The wedding will take place Tuesday, March 17, at 8 o'clock in the evening at home.

Miss Seal attended Abbott School and the University of Maryland.

Mary Linda Graves To Be Spring Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Graves, of Germantown, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Linda, to John Wellington Kitterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Kitterman, of Kensington, Md.

The wedding will take place in the spring at the Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church of Kensington.

Sumner Welles Gives Dinner for Nicaraguan Foreign Minister

Leading off in the first of a series of official parties for the visiting Nicaraguan Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mariano Arguello Vargas, the Acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, entertained at a stag dinner at the Carlton Hotel last night for the visiting statesman.

The Minister and his daughter, Senorita Rosita Arguello, arrived from Nicaragua on Friday after flying to the Capital from New Orleans, where their boat from the Central American republic had docked. They are staying at the Shoreham with Dr. J. J. Sanchez and Senora de Sanchez, who accompanied them from Nicaragua.

During their two weeks' stay here, a number of parties have been planned for the Foreign Minister and his daughter, including the diplomatic reception at which the Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de DeBayle will be hosts on Monday. The fete, which will be a 5 to 7 o'clock gathering, will take place in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower. Today, the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, will entertain at a luncheon at the Union for the visitor and other informal parties are on the calendar. Last night, Senorita Arguello was honored by Senora de DeBayle at an informal "all ladies" dinner at the legation.

Among those attending Mr. Welles' dinner last night were the Minister of Nicaragua, Leon DeBayle, Dr. J. J. Sanchez, the Postmaster General, Frank C. Walker; the Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones; Senator Tom Connally, Senator Joseph Guffey, Senator Warren Austin, Representative Sol Bloom, Representative James P. Richards, Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin, the Assistant Solicitor General, Charles Fahy, and Pierre de L. Boal.

Others there were the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, Harold D. Smith; the Assistant Secretary of State, Breckinridge Long; the Deputy Administrator of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Will L. Clayton, George T. Summerlin, Leo S. Rowe, the President of the Export-Import Bank, Warren Lee Pierson; Dr. Herbert Feis, Paul C. Daniels, Selden Chapin, Robert A. Knowlton, Alburn D. West, Joseph Kingsbury Smith, Emilio G. Collado and Raymond D. Muir.

Admiral's Daughter To Be Bride in Saturday Rites

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Francis W. Rockwell announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Rockwell Woods, to Lieut. John Thompson Lowe, jr.

The wedding will take place Saturday at St. Patrick's Episcopal Chapel in Foxhall Village, and in the absence of Admiral Rockwell, who is on active duty, the bride will be given in marriage by her brother, Warren T. Rockwell. She is the widow of the late Lieut. Melvin W. Woods.

Lieut. Lowe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson Lowe, of Lexington, N. C. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934 and is now a member of the Air Corps.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill On Radio Program

Mrs. Lionel Atwill will have an opportunity to hear herself talk over the radio tomorrow night. A recording she made a few days ago for a West Coast station will comprise a 15-minute program over Station WWDC.

A question-and-answer feature on the general subject of women in wartime Washington, the program is an informal, and impromptu, interview with Mrs. Atwill. Well received by West Coast listeners, it is to be rebroadcast here by special request.

A. W. V. S. Requires That Its Members Earn Their Uniforms Through Service

By Genevieve Reynolds

NO LONGER can a woman walk into the A. W. V.'s headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue, join the organization, immediately pop into a uniform and parade the streets as a full-fledged member. In the future, the uniform must be earned, not merely bought.

Miss Phipps

This is the latest dictum of Miss Anita Phipps, president of the D. C. unit of the American Women's Voluntary Services. The alert president, who served as director of the Motor Corps Services of the Pennsylvania-Delaware division of the American Red Cross, and subsequently as director of Women's Relations with the U. S Army, has issued strict orders on uniforms of the organization.

To be entitled to a uniform, a member must have served 50 hours in class or on active duty. Twenty hours of first aid and 12 hours of civilian protection are obligatory, according to Mrs. Phipps.

"The District of Columbia unit has adopted its own insignia," said Miss Phipps, "thereby distinguishing its officers and chiefs of details so that no confusion will arise as to the person in charge of the many details of the A. W. V. S. members in the various defense agencies."

Miss Phipps's own insignia, as president, is three red stripes on navy blue epaulet. Mrs. Robert M. Griffin, vice president, wears two red stripes. All section chiefs rate a single red stripe. Operating chairmen wear two red stripes on the regular uniform epaulet, assistant operating chairmen one. Navy blue service stripes, one for each year, are worn on a slant on the lower part of the uniform sleeve.

After a woman earns her uniform and insignia, she still has a few more do's and don'ts to observe. National headquarters of the A. W. V. S. in New York has sent out the following regulations which must be adhered to:

Correct, erect posture. Brown, low-heel, plain toe oxfords. Careful grooming—hair rolled neatly, which means no shoulder length tresses over collar. Caps should be worn slightly to the right. No earrings or other jewelry is permitted. Handkerchiefs must not protrude from pockets and bags go under the right epaulet.

"Uniforms aid morale," explained Miss Phipps. "In the first place they create a business-like atmosphere and members feel that they must work harder. Also, much of the work soils clothes so, in the long run uniforms save clothes and are cheaper."

Wild Flowers

DO YOU know your wild flowers? One man who is well versed in flower-lore is Senator George D. Aiken, of Vermont. He has made the growing of flowers his life's work as well as a hobby. Also, he is the only person known who has grown the fringed gentian and white trillium commercially. Tomorrow at 2 o'clock, Senator Aiken will give an illustrated lecture on "Wild Flowers" before members of the nature section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md.

Doings of the Day

MRS. GRACE LATONA, author of a group of children's stories, "Oak Tree Tales," reads a few of her stories at the Zonta Club's luncheon meeting, 1:30 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Latona agreed to speak in the place of Mary Mason, director of Women's Activities of N. B. C. who originally was scheduled to talk to Zonta members. "Cousin Mary," as she is known, is ill. . . . Business and Professional Women's Club holds open house for city newcomers, 6 to 8, at the Silver Bowl, and will continue to do so each Wednesday throughout March and April. . . . Alexandria Woman's Club meets at 10:30 o'clock with Mrs. Joseph Calaway, jr., 415 South Washington Street. Mrs. Paul L. Miller speaks on the "Electicism of the Persians."

Traffic Safety

IF PLAIN and hard talking will decrease traffic hazards, the Women's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association is ready to do more than its share. In order to obtain greater security in traffic for the large groups of Federal employes flowing into the District daily (approximately 150), the committee is initiating a series of brief talks on traffic safety. The talks will be given in various departments of the Federal Government.

Mrs. Bennett

Mrs. John S. Bennett, superintendent of Central Union Mission, founder and director of the Children's Emergency Home, as well as president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, will give the first in the series of traffic safety talks today, at 4:30 o'clock, at "Tempo U." Twelfth Street and Constitution Avenue. She will address the "training pool" conducted by the personnel office for Emergency Management. Hereafter, members of the Women's Safety Committee of the A. A. A. will address the Training Pool of OEM each week on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Tomorrow afternoon at 5:15 o'clock, Miss Garland Ferguson, wife of Commissioner Ferguson of the U. S. Federal Trade Commission, will address another group of Federal employes. Formerly a vice president of the Women's National Democratic Club, Mrs. Ferguson is a charter member of the Women's Safety Committee.

The committee pointed out that 13 per cent of traffic fatalities in 1941 involved Federal employes.

Quota Club

HATS ARE OFF and sleeves rolled up! Washington Quota Club is ready for a pitched battle in the political arena. For the club recently voted unanimously to present one of its members—Miss Sybil Baker—as a candidate for the office of director of Quota International. Miss Baker director of the Community Center, Office of the Department of Recreation of the District, will be on hand when her name is presented to the convention of International Quota Club on Mackinac Island in June.

Miss Baker

Miss Mary Jane Winfree, executive secretary of the National Education Association and a member of Quota Club, who has just returned from the Pacific Coast, reports that the morale of the Californians is absolutely unshaken and that business is proceeding as usual.

Girl Reserves To Celebrate Tomorrow

GIRL RESERVES—from all points of the city—will celebrate their membership in the Y. W. C. A. by gathering at headquarters tomorrow afternoon. The program will be held at the Seventeenth and K Streets Y. W. C. A.

Members of the Washington Y. W. C. A. Board, Girl Reserve Advisors, members of the Girl Reserve Council, and women representing the Y. W. C. A. in England, China, and South America, will be honored guests at the tea to be held in Barker Hall from 4 to 5 o'clock.

Miss Emma Lou Heine, president of the Senior High Inter-Club Council, is chairman of the tea committee, which is made up of representatives of the Junior and Senior High School clubs. Assisting Miss Heine are Miss June Pollock, president of the Junior High Inter-Club Council; Miss Ruth Waterman, of Alice Deal Junior High; Muriel Speidel, of Roosevelt Senior High; Beverley Pinkstaff of Washington and Lee, and Annena Billings of Western High School.

As a special feature of the celebration tomorrow afternoon, local Girl Reserves will broadcast over Station WWDC at 4:30 o'clock. Members of the Girl Reserve Glee Club will sing.

Of special interest to Washington Girl Reserves are the Defense Courses in Child Care, Home Recreation, First Aid, Knitting and Cooking; classes of which are now under way at the Y. W. C. A. and are scheduled to continue through April 18. Each girl completing a course will receive a certificate and will be qualified to serve the community in that field in which she has specialized.

Girl Scouts Plan Anniversary Fete

IN OBSERVANCE of the thirtieth anniversary of Girl Scouting in the United States, the Washington Scouts have planned and prepared more than a dozen exhibits on nutrition and defense to be on display in store windows throughout the city from now until March 18.

The nutrition windows have been prepared by girls who have taken courses in nutrition. One exhibit is built around sugarless desserts and the suggested recipes were all tried by the girls before submitting them. A window prepared by a group of intermediate Scouts in District 4 is built around dairy foods and their substitutes, with recipes. The girls designed and made the posters on display. One poster shows a girl assembling a food kit for evacuation. It contains food necessary to nourish a family well for several days.

Luggage Advice For Bride and Groom-to-be

- Get together and purchase an ensemble of matching pieces.
- It looks smarter, and more important, makes for ease of identification.
- Buy luggage with good hanging system, because if it doesn't carry your clothes properly it fails in its primary purpose.
- Purchase it from experienced salespeople who understand your luggage requirements.

Campfire Girls to Observe 30th Anniversary March 20

ALTHOUGH too busy to celebrate, Campfire Girls in the Potomac area will commemorate the founding of the organization 30 years ago, when they participate in the grand council fire on March 20. The ceremonial will be held at Woodrow Wilson High School and Miss Mary Fiedler, national field secretary, will come from New York to award ranks and national honors earned during the past year.

In the local poster contest, sponsored by the Campfire council, winners announced by Mrs. Russell Clevin Coile were as follows: First, Carolyn Dieter, Arlington, Va., of the Wikate Group; second, Grace Reese, Washington, of the Aowakiya Group, and third, Helen Sheppard, Washington, of the Okihi Group. Poster entires covered a variety of subjects, all of which illustrated the Campfire defense project, "Fortifying the Family."

Throughout the area girls are responding enthusiastically to community needs. Mrs. Joseph America reported that in the past year her girls have knitted over 100 hanks of yarn into needed garments. Campfire Girls in the East Bethesda Elementary School have entertained pre-school children three times a week, for a total of 20 hours, while the mothers attended a first-aid class. Games, songs, stories, simple handcraft and personal care were provided by the older girls. Over in Virginia girls in the Wikate Group have tacked three quilts for tuberculosis patients, and have two others in hand. Most of the time given is outside of regular group meetings, and each girl who gives ten or more hours will be allowed to wear the "Service for Victory" emblem on her uniform.

Club to Meet

The National Mothers' Memory Club will meet tomorrow at 1 o'clock with the hostess, Mrs. Roy Knox, 3775 Oliver Street Northwest.

Mrs. William H. Wagner, the club president, will preside for the last time, as she is to leave shortly for Philadelphia, where she will make her future home.

TECHNOCRACY

Urges

Total Conscription

Of Men, Machines, Materiel, and Money—With National Service from All and Profits to None!

TOTAL WAR STRATEGY DEMANDS DESIGNED DIRECTION

THE CONFLICT OF WORLD EVENTS compels the United States to install immediately the designed direction of the strategy of total war or face disaster.

The United States must efficiently install at once a complete mobilization of all the resources of its national entirety.

This designed direction of national operations cannot be attained if America permits business and party politics to dominate the administration of the defense of America.

America must realize that in this age of technology the methods and practices of history cherished by the upholders of the Price System are incompetent to operate a Continent under the demands of total war. The facilities of yesterday's success have suddenly become the futilities of today and the defeat of tomorrow. The structure of America's economy demands that we Americans abandon the haphazard conflict of private and group interest in order that we may win this world war and thereby defeat the enemies of America and win the peace for America.

Men do not create events; events create men. Today's crisis necessitates that America call upon the ability and statesmanship capable of installing the technological and social mobilization required for victory.

Technocracy makes the unequivocal statement that such ability and statesmanship do not exist amongst the party politicians and business leaders of America. Technocracy charges that the business leadership of America lacks the vision to design and install a Continental operation of total war, and that such vision cannot possibly stem from the picayune confines of private business and party politics.

Technocracy charges that America must abolish immediately all production for profit at a price, and substitute in its place the engineering design of production for the technological operation of the strategy of a Continental offensive.

Technocracy asks: How many disasters will America have to suffer before it installs the design now called for by the march of events?

TOTAL CONSCRIPTION

Technocracy urges immediate institution of total conscription by the United States of America, namely, that:

The Government of the United States shall immediately institute the total conscription of all effectives, male and female, over 18 years of age for all necessary military and civilian duties.

The Government of the United States shall institute as part of this program of Continental operations, immediate conscription of all national corporate wealth and its attendant institutions such as banks, trusts, and insurance companies.

The Government of the United States shall conscript all of the physical facilities and operating personnel of rail, bus, water, and air transportation.

The Government of the United States shall conscript all of the physical facilities and operating personnel of all telegraph, telephone, and radio communications systems.

The Government of the United States shall conscript all of the physical facilities and operating personnel of public utilities and power producing and transmission systems.

The Government of the United States shall conscript all of the physical facilities and operating personnel of the manufacturing industries of the country.

The Government of the United States shall conscript all of the physical facilities and operating personnel of all corporate enterprises engaged in mining.

The Government of the United States shall conscript all of the physical facilities and operating personnel of all export and import corporations. The Government of the United States shall be the sole exporter and importer.

The Government of the United States shall conscript immediately all patents, inventions, and processes extant in our national domain whether of foreign or domestic ownership.

The Government of the United States shall assume all financial indebtedness of all municipalities, counties, and states; and the Government of the United States in return for assuming complete responsibility for the financial obligations of all municipalities, counties, and states, shall arrogate to itself the sole power of levying all taxes now levied by them.

The Government of the United States, as a measure of national safety and national welfare, shall close all public bars, and limit the sale of spirituous beverages, wines, and liquors to restaurants, hotel dining rooms, and licensed liquor stores.

The Government of the United States, as a measure of national safety and national welfare, shall abolish all foreign language periodical publications, foreign language advertising, and foreign language radio programs for American consumption.

The Government of the United States, as a measure of national safety and national welfare, shall abolish all foreign language and hyphenated American organizations, associations, and fraternal societies regardless of whether they have been formed to promote political, commercial, cultural, educational, linguistic, artistic, or other relationships.

The Government of the United States shall prohibit the transfer of United States purchasing power in the form of currency, notes, drafts, or money orders by all corporations and residents of the United States to any corporation or resident of any alien country.

The United States Army shall be directed under the unified control of a land command; the United States Navy shall be directed under the unified control of a sea command; the United States Airforce shall be directed under the unified control of an air command; the fortifications of the Continental defense shall be directed under the unified control of a fortifications command. The entire military command shall be under a General Staff with the constitutional Commander-in-Chief in supreme command.

All industry, mining, transportation, communications and other necessary units of Continental operation shall be unified under their various functional commands under a technological command of the whole. The entire technological command and the entire armed force command shall be under the unified direction of the constitutional Commander-in-Chief.

These specifications for total conscription to remain in force not longer than 6 months after termination of the war.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Action Taken to Set Up 48-Hour Postal Week

The first step was taken yesterday toward placing the 300,000 postal employes on a 48-hour week. Chairman Milton A. Romjue of the House Committee on Post-offices and Post Roads, introduced an Administration bill which would give the Postmaster General discretion over the hours of postal employes. The law now requires a 5-day 40-hour week and employes who work over that time are given compensatory time off within a week. If Postmaster General Frank Walker is given discretion over the hours, he plans to invoke a 6-day, 48-hour week wherever it is necessary and to pay employes straight time for the additional eight hours.

The bill is approved by the President and Budget Bureau. That makes it of the utmost importance to every Federal worker. There's considerable talk of suspending the Saturday afternoon holiday law and placing all Federal workers on a 6-day, 48-hour week, and if that's done, the white-collar employe here can point to the postal worker and ask for the same treatment.

The postal bill is expected to be given quick approval by Congress. The department is losing thousands of its employes to war industries and the military services . . . it is unable to hire competent replacements because of the man-power shortage . . . and the regular pay for the extra eight hours will make postal employes happier and help them offset increased living costs. The Postoffice here has been so burdened with work that employes have been asked to work Saturdays and forego compensatory time off that the law requires.

Blow to Press Agents

Government press agents will be told shortly to cut down on their production of press releases, pamphlets, books and other publications for these reasons: (1) the Postoffice Department has protested against the flood of Government publications being sent through the mails. So much is being sent that the service of the Washington Postoffice has been hampered; (2) the shortage of paper. The Government uses millions of pounds a year; and (3) the fact that war news has crowded much Federal news out of newspapers and other publications.

Reduction of press releases is just a part of the general plan to simplify the Government's many information services. Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, has a hand in the general plan. The Budget Bureau is studying some sort of consolidation or coordination of the information services. Agencies like OFF, the Coordinator's Office, Office of Government Reports, and the several others, may be combined. In any event, the press agents in war agencies are due to be subjected to over-all control.

The life of some dollar-a-year men isn't as soft as their critics believe. At least three of the key men at War Production Board are now living on borrowed money after having paid their 1941 income taxes. One of these men, chief of one of WPB's most important divisions, probably will be forced to quit because he can't afford to continue working for a dollar a year. He would be paid only $8000 under the Government's salary schedule. He formerly drew about $60,000. Incidentally, something may be done soon to raise the general level of WPB salaries. Donald Nelson, the second most powerful man in America, is paid only $10,000. If he were paid $15,000, the salary of a cabinet officer, his bureau chiefs then could be paid $12,000.

Windows in Federal agencies are being taped to prevent glass from shattering in case of an air raid . . . More than 400 employes are needed to fill vacancies outside Washington in the decentralized agencies. A majority of the vacancies exist at Kansas City, St. Louis, Columbus, Cincinnati and Chicago. Make application at 801 E Street Northwest . . . The British have taken over the third floor at the Public Health Service Building. Public health employes were moved to the old Naval Hospital . . . At Interior, it's being said that Secretary Ickes has held out longer than MacArthur. Ickes is holding out against decentralization of three of his agencies. An order is due Friday on the date and place of the transfers.

Is the Enemy Confused?

Kodiak, Alaska, March 10 (A.P.).—The Kodiak Bear, camp newspaper published at the Naval Air Station, carried this note in its weather box on page 1:

"Weather reports suspended for the duration. But, man, this ain't Pebble Beach!"

Blackout Test May Be Held Friday

Set for This Week By Young; Won't Be Be as Long as Last, Probably 4 Hours

Another blackout test for Metropolitan Washington can be expected this week and probably will be on Friday night, Commissioner John Russell Young, coordinator of defense, announced yesterday.

The practice will be called for a shorter period of time than last week's, perhaps only four hours, but will be of the same type, with street and traffic lights remaining on. It will be announced through the newspapers.

"We know from the blackout of last week that the citizens' hearts are right, but we must have some more tests to insure that their preparations are right," Young said. "They need to be so good normal life can continue without interruption. Also, the wardens need some more practice."

Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy yesterday said he was so "worn out with knowing what is going on" (supposedly in his warden services, where various workers have been suspended), that he refused to answer "any more questions from anybody."

Getting the Run-around

"You'll have to talk to Col. Bolles at headquarters. I'm referring everything to him, and I mean everything," he added when asked to confirm or deny reports that Edward A. Langley, 106 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, had been named Assistant Deputy Warden in the Southeast to succeed William A. Robinson. The latter was suspended from the service by Murphy on Saturday night and now is awaiting investigation.

The office of Col. Lemuel Bolles, defense director, declared, on the other hand, that all such appointments were up to Murphy and needed no confirmation from headquarters.

Langley, formerly a zone warden, declared the fight in the Southeast is with communism and "not unionism." He said he started the investigation into alleged "pink activities" of William A. Cornelius, ousted deputy warden of the Southeast section, and that the fact Cornelius is a C. I. O. man had nothing to do with it.

Chief Murphy, on the other hand, had said Monday that Cornelius was C. I. O. and Robinson A. F. of L. and that this caused some of the friction between them.

Regulations Announced

Regulations backing up recent blackout suggestions were announced yesterday by the District Commissioners and will be effective March 22. On that date, every light in the Nation's Capital that cannot be extinguished immediately when an air-raid siren sounds must be turned off or screened for the duration.

This covers all advertising signs, shop windows, and lights in office buildings and private homes. It is particularly aimed at stores and other businesses which have no night watchmen. If someone is on the premises and lights are so arranged they can be turned off immediately, the regulation is answered. If no watchman is around, but an outside switch has been installed and the warden or police services can reach it quickly, the law has been served.

Forced Entry in Blackout Ruled Legal by Bar Unit

Use of force and entry of dwellings where necessary to enforce blackout regulations were declared legal and proper last night, in a report of the blackout committee of the District Bar Association.

Although the Constitution forbids unreasonable searches and seizures and requires warrants, the committee pointed out, there is also a provision that the Congress shall "provide for the common defense," and make all laws necessary and proper to that end.

E. Barrett Prettyman, president, called the report a "monumental work," adding that it was the first study of the kind, as far as he knew, in the country.

Busy on the work for three months have been Hugh H. Obear, chairman; Arthur P. Drury, former Representative Carroll L. Beedy and Chester H. Gray.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins of the District Court repeated before the association his address on speeding up jury trials, which attracted wide attention when he gave it before the recent judicial conference.

The association adoped a report recommending that lawyers from other jurisdictions be admitted to the bar here without examination if they had practiced five years and come from States with substantially similar qualifications.

McLaughlin's Body Still in Morgue; Relatives Sought

The body of Michael A. McLaughlin, 58-year-old telegraph operator in the House press gallery, who died Monday night following a heart attack, remained in the morgue yesterday while efforts were made to contact relatives.

McLaughlin, fellow employes said yesterday, had complained of feeling ill early Monday afternoon, but did not ask for relief at his job. About 7 p. m., as he was leaving the House he told a guard he was ill and asked him to call a taxi. The guard called an ambulance instead, but McLaughlin was dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital. His body was taken to the morgue, where officials said yesterday there were no suspicious circumstances connected with his death.

McLaughlin, who lived alone at 1219 L Street Northwest, was a native of Chester, Pa., and had been employed here since 1933 by Postal Telegraph which yesterday was trying to get in touch with a sister and brother believed to be living in Pennsylvania.

Sulfa-Drugs May Cause Death in Hands Of Layman, Speaker Tells Dental Session

Declared to Result In Highly Pernicious Blood Disease

Though capable of remarkable results in arresting infection, the sulfanamides nevertheless may produce a deadly blood disease if taken without proper supervision, the Five State Post Graduate Clinic was told yesterday.

Sponsored by the District Dental Society, the scientific session heard Dr. Roy R. Kracke, professor of pathology at Emory University, warn that agranulocyposis — as lethal as its name—may result from self-administration of the sulfa drugs.

The conference, which ends tomorrow, is being held at the Hotel Mayflower.

The rather rare blood disease was first identified in this country in 1924, said Dr. Kracke. Fatal in nine out of ten cases, it causes destruction of the white blood cells, which are the blood's "policemen" against infecting organisms.

When it was found that most of the victims had been using medicines, cosmetics or drugs containing a certain chemical, this ingredient was taken out of commercial use in such preparations. Incidence of the disease dropped.

About five years ago, however, when the sulfa drugs began coming into wide use, it was noted that agranulocyposis cases were on the increase.

Given proper administration of the solfanamides by a physician or dentist, the patient need not fear the cell-destructive disease, Dr. Kracke decleared.

More than 2000 dentists, oral hygienists, technicians and others are in attendance at the five-State assembly.

D. C. Auxiliary Firemen Best In Country, Chief Porter Says

"Washington leads all other cities in the Nation in the efficiency of its auxiliary firemen," Chief Stephen Porter, of the District Fire Department, told 300 Petworth auxiliary firemen last night.

At the meeting held in the MacFarland Junior High School, 4400 Iowa Avenue Northwest, Chief Porter commended the firemen for their industry and speed in answering emergency calls.

"There are 1200 members in the Washington auxiliary fire corps now," Porter said, "but there is a need for an additional 800. If two thirds of the present staff would each sign up another man, the auxiliary force would then be complete."

In answer to Chief Porter's request for extra men, R. J. Wheaton, vice president of the Petworth auxiliary, announced that 100 additional firemen had been signed up for service during the past week.

Children to Receive Nutrition Folders

Each family with a child in Washington's public schools will receive within the next few days a "nutrition folder" prepared by the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers and approved by the nutrition committee of the Office of Civilian Defense.

More than 90,000 copies of the folder have been mimeographed, are being folded today at 1201 Sixteenth Street Northwest, and will be distributed by the American Women's Voluntary Services to offices of all supervising principles.

Mrs. Lucian Jordan, vice president in charge of health, said the folder is one of two to be prepared by her group. Members of the nutrition committee, in addition to Mrs. Jordan, are Mrs. Ola Day Rush, Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, Mrs. H. N. Stull, Mrs. B. M. Costenbader, Mrs. Frank Borden, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, Mrs. Hildegarde Davenport and Mrs. Edward R. Seal.

Kenilworth to Get Report on Defense

Reports on progress of civilian defense preparations in the Kenilworth area will be made at a mass meeting at 8 p. m. today at Kenilworth School, Forty-fourth and Ord Streets Northeast.

Incendiary Bomb Demonstration Tonight

An incendiary bomb in action, and the way to extinguish it will feature a mass meeting of residents of the Connecticut Avenue area in the John Eaton School, Thirty-fourth and Lowell Streets Northwest, at 8 o'clock tonight.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, civilian defense director, and Clement Murphy, chief air raid warden, will speak. The program also will include films on air-raid precautions. Residents are urged to attend by Mrs. C. L. Curtiss, secretary of the Connecticut Avenue Civilian Defense Committee.

Press Women See Films On Civilian Mobilization

Four films describing extent of civilian mobilization for war in Great Britain were shown members of the Women's National Press Club yesterday by the British Press Service under the direction of Gerard St. G. Walker, film officer.

Documentary in nature, the movies covered a salvage plan so complete it includes fishbones, the role of the housewife, the part women have in the air service, and what happens to "aid from America." Names of the films were "A Few Ounces a Day," "The Air Women," "They Also Serve" and "We Won't Forget."

Day Wardens, Couriers Sought by Midway

Women willing to become daytime wardens and boys willing to serve as messengers are wanted by the Midway Citizens Association as civilian defense recruits. President George Johnson yesterday asked those interested to send names and addresses to him at 1529 T Street Northwest.

2 Home Nursing Courses Open Today

The District Red Cross will open two home nursing courses today at the E. V. Brown School, McKinley and Connecticut Avenues, Chevy Chase. They will be held Wednesdays and Fridays, one from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. and the other from 1 to 3 p. m.

An evening class in home nursing is meeting on Mondays and Wednesdays, from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., at the Carlos Apartment, 1575 Spring Place Northwest.

D. C. Night Club Operator Held For Killing Wife

Miami, Fla., March 10 (AP).—A coroner's jury today ordered a charge of first-degree murder filed against Zachariah Thomas Goldsmith, 53, former Washington, D. C., night club operator, in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Margaret, 37.

I. R. Mills, State investigator, testified that Goldsmith signed a statement confessing the shooting because Mrs. Goldsmith had refused to return with him to their Chicago home.

The woman was killed March 1 in the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Green, who testified she saw Goldsmith empty his pistol into his wife's face, then bend over her body and kiss her.

Darden Gets Bill Fixing Boundary

Fenwick Measure To Settle Dispute Between D. C., Va., Passed at Richmond

The Fenwick bill fixing the long-disputed boundary between the District of Columbia and Virginia yesterday passed the Virginia Senate at Richmond and was sent to Gov. Darden for approval.

The boundary bill, introduced by Delegate Charles R. Fenwick, of Arlington, will in effect ratify a similar measure pending in Congress introduced by Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee.

Under provisions of the bill as it was passed, the Washington National Airport would be placed entirely within the State of Virginia but with the status of a Federal reservation. The rest of the boundary between the District and Virginia would be fixed at the present high water mark of the Potomac on the Virginia side.

As such the District and Virginia would retain concurrent jurisdiction over the airport, with Virginia having exclusive control over the sale of liquor and the collection of automobile gasoline taxes. All jurisdictional disputes arising in the future would be referred to the Governor of Virginia and the Attorney General for negotiation after Congress acts on the Randolph Act.

Three-Century Old Dispute

The boundary dispute between the District and Virginia was instigated more than three centuries ago when King Charles of England gave Maryland to the Calverts. Maryland and Virginia used to fuss over the dividing line when both were colonies. Then the District succeeded Maryland as the northern contestant.

For the formation of the District, Maryland ceded to the Government 70 square miles on the northern side of the Potomac liver and Virginia ceded 30 square miles on the south. The Virginia portion then was known as Alexandria County. Practically no use was made of the Virginia part, and in 1846 the State asked Congress to give it back.

Congress debated at length, principally on the question of the constitutionality of retrocession. At any rate, Congress finally passed the retrocession bill in 1846, returning what became Arlington County and Alexandria City to Virginia.

Airport Revived Row

In the years that followed controversy reared its head time and again.

In 1935, Judge G. A. Iverson, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, pointed out that under grant of King Charles I, Virginia territory extends only to the high-water mark on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

Then when Washington recently dedicated its imposing new airport, the controversy arose again. It developed that the site, partly filled land, was bisected by the Virginia-District line.

The latest development popped up when the War Department selected a site in Arlington County for its huge building.

Today there is much speculation whether the only unsettled boundary in the United States will remain settled in the future.

Legion Post's Party to Aid Blood Bank

More donations and more parties were announced yesterday for the benefit of the Children's Hospital blood, plasma and serum "bank" as the fourth annual campaign rolled on toward its goal.

Cosponsors of the drive, whose objective is to keep the life-saving hospital bank in operation for another year, are the American Legion, Washington Bridge League and The Post.

Cooley-McCullough Post, American Legion, announced that its third annual benefit party will be held at the clubrooms, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, at 8 p. m., March 23. Carl Kuldell is post commander. Arrangements are in charge of J. S. Haldenstein, assisted by Charles Cohen, Guy Nadeau, David Bloch and Kuldell.

The post's auxiliary unit and the auxiliary juniors have contributed $20 to the fund.

Washington Police and Fire Auxiliary Union, American Legion, announced it will raise funds for the blood bank at its meeting Monday.

Washington Post employes gave a benefit card party in the National Press Club auditorium lounge last night, with the entire net proceeds going into the fund.

Contributions announced yesterday by American Legion groups included $12 from Gen. U. G. McAlexander Auxiliary Unit, of which Ann Dickerson is president, and George E. Killeen Post and Auxiliary Unit, which turned in $62, the proceeds of a benefit party held February 17.

More individuals and organizations are urged to hold benefit parties before the end of March. Souvenir tally cards for bridge games are available at The Post, first floor. Checks should be made out to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund and sent to The Post.

Communications Unit To Start New Course

Having completed the regular 60 hours of fire department training, members of the Communications Unit of the Auxiliary Fire Service will begin a Red Cross first-aid course tonight. The meeting will be at 8 o'clock in the quarters of Engine 1, 1634 K Street Northwest.

BETTY ASHMORE,

a secretary in the District Traffic Department, displays one of the new red, white and blue license plates soon to become standard for the Federal Government's 276,000 motor vehicles. The new tag design, a modified Union shield, traced in blue on a white background, with the words "U. S. Government" in red across the top, was personally approved by President Roosevelt. It will replace 43 different kinds of plates used by Federal agencies

Mrs. Lee Injured By Fall Off Horse

Mrs. William Justice Lee, wife of Commander Lee, U. S. N., and well known horsewoman, was injured yesterday when she was thrown from her horse at Bradley Boulevard and Fernwood Road, Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Lee was given first aid by the Bethesda Rescue Squad and taken to Georgetown Hospital where she was said to be in a serious but not critical condition. The Lees reside at 8800 Rockville Pike and are prominent socially and in horse circles.

Accident Unit to Get Close Check

Traffic Advisory Council Requests Additional Time For Its Survey

A thorough study of "every phase" of the Police Department's Accident Investigation Unit will be made by the legislative and enforcement committee of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council.

Committee Chairman Harry Wender announced that his group had asked for and received from the commissioners an extension of time in which to study the report of three police officials who made a survey of the A. I. U. and are believed to have recommended a reorganization of the unit so drastic that some sources fear the unit may be abolished.

Previously, the committee had been scheduled to make its recommendations on the report at a meeting of the Traffic Advisory Council to be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Municipal Building. The council meeting will be held as scheduled, but there will be no report from the committee at that time and none is expected until the council's next meeting April 9, it was stated.

The decision of Wender's committee to seek more time in which to study the police officials' report was reached during a four-hour session Monday night when, the chairman said, the members felt the "matter was of such great importance that they would not be able to give a satisfactory report to the council Thursday night."

C. U. to Mark Anniversary of Pope's Coronation

With members of the diplomatic corps, high Government officials, national legislators and friends of the university participating, the third anniversary of the coronation of His Holiness, Pope Pius XII, will be commemorated in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

In the presence of His Excellency, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to the United States, a solemn high mass will be celebrated, with the Right Rev. Msgr. Egidio Vagnozzi, auditor of the Apostolic Delegation, officating. The sermon will preached by the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. Following the ceremony the Apostolic delegate will receive the distinguishd worshippers in the offices of the director of the Shrine.

All morning classes at the university will be suspended to enable members of the teaching staff and their families, with superiors and clerics of the religious communities of the university, as well as the student body, to attend the services.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 10.—Baseball's club owners know that a war is going on, and they are making the most of it in their salary battles with players who are argumentative in the matter of salaries. In these times when able-bodied men are getting $21 a month in the Army, minus laundry charges, the ball club owners are very much aware that they have the salary holdouts on the spot.

POVICH

In devious ways the magnates are taking full advantage of the fish-eye the general public may be giving the well-paid ball player who is holding out for more dough. One of the popular methods of alienating public sympathy for the holdout, the club owners have decided, is to take public the details of the salary negotiations.

The club owners are trying to make the holdout ball players appear like bloody capitalists in these time by confessing the salaries they have been paying. Clark Griffith, for example, the other day made a formal statement to the press pointing out that Dutch Leonard had turned down $13,000 as a salary, which, of course, makes Leonard no hero to friends of the lads who are getting $21 a month. In a statement yesterday, President Ed Barrow, of the Yankees announced he would shortly announce to the public the details of Joe iDMaggio's refusal to play ball for $40,000 in 1942.

The magnates are seemingly trying to be very open-handed about their dealings with the players, but such frankness must be labeled a war-baby. In previous seasons, the club owners guarded such matters very zealously and implored baseball writers to keep salary figures out of print. "It's private business," they would say.

Publication of salary figures might engender jealousy, he said. But it was a private business only os long as it suited the club-owners' purpose. When the time came when they thought that publication of salaries might scare recalcitrant players into line, baseball wages were no longer private business but a public matter.

Griffith deemed his dealings with Leonard to be a public matter only so long as it served to put the pitcher in a bad public light, apparently. Anyway, he called in the press to announce that Leonard had turned down an in-these-times munificent wage of $13,000. But last night, when Leonard finally signed a contract, Griffith apparently considered it a public matter no longer as far as figures were concerned. He refused to state the salary they had agreed on, and Leonard's tongue was silenced on orders.

The war conditions the club owners have been wailing about have been nothing but kind to them so far. They have more of the profitable night games following the green light given baseball by the White House, and with the draft, affecting clubs all down the line, the owners are out from under the heavy payrolls of former seasons.

The Yankees, for instance, blandly offered Joe DiMaggio the same $37,500 contract he had last season after he broke all records by hitting in 56 straight games. No raise was contained in the first contract they sent him, despite the fact that DiMaggio made money not only for the Yankees but every other club in the league during his two-month hitting streak, besides carrying the Yanks to the pennant.

Every club profited from DiMag's amazing hitting streak. During that two-month period he drew customers to the park, by sheer magic of his fame, in sufficient numbers to earn his salary many times over. He packed the park in Washington, Philadelphia and and Cleveland during his streak despite the fact the Yanks were making a runaway of the race. When the Yanks played one series in St. Louis, the Browns placarded the fact that "DiMaggio is coming" in barber shops, hotels and public places as if he were a circus attraction.

Yet the Yankees didn't feel obligated to offer him a bonus, and the first contract they sent him contained no raise, as we were saying they pointed to "war conditions." The $40,000 they are now offering is, of course, a heap of money but it dwindles in perspective when it is labeled merely as a $2500 raise. Twenty-five hundred dollar raises are common with ball players who have been getting $5000 a year. To DiMaggio, it may reasonably look like small reward for his heroics of 1941.

DiMaggio was talking about his Yankee contract in St. Petersburg the other day. "I was surprised when they didn't offer me a raise," and they told me that the usual procedure was to offer the same contract as last year and then do business from that point. I don't like it that way. I don't want to haggle about the money I'm going to be paid. If they expected to pay me more why didn't they offer me more to start with? I told Mr. Barrow in the future to give me his final offer and he wouldn't have any trouble signing me."

Washington-Lee Rally Wins, 24-23, for Metro Title

Nat Pitching Sparkles in 1-0 Edge on Indians

W.-L. Beats Bethesda for Title, 24-23

Phillips' Shot Ends Uphill Battle in Metro Meet; Losers Lead at Halftime

By Bill Burhett

Because they didn't know when to quit, Washington-Lee High's valiant band of basketers today own the impressive title—"Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Champions of Washington."

They acquired the mantle for the first time in their history last night at Tech, taking hold of a 10-point deficit and converting it into a 24-23 triumph over favored Bethesda-Chevy Chase in the final of the tenth annual city tourney.

The Perfect Ending

The crucial points were credited to chunky Bob Phillips with 55 seconds of play remaining. And appropriately enough the same youthful star, who amassed 42 points in three tournament efforts, was named "Most Valuable Player" by a committee headed by Coach Bil Reinhart, of George Washington University.

Last night's battle provided a perfect ending for the local schoolboy cage season. And, if nothing else, it proved that the Little Generals from Arlington had the "number" of their cross-town rivals. It was the third time they had beaten the Barons, once by three points and twice by one.

Before Phillips got around to chalking up his inning basket, one of the wildest and yet most exciting games of the year had been recorded. It started very slowly and evenly, went Bethesda's way in the second quarter, W.-L.'s in the third, and wound up in a blaze of rough but thrilling action.

The teams missed a total of five foul shots in the first period before Carll Jullien, of the Barons, got the first two-pointer. Going into the second stanza, it was tied 4 to 4, but then Bethesda went scoring crazy. While the Generals watched helplessly, Jullien and Bob Brewer sparked a drive that pushed Bethesda into a 16-to-6 halftime lead. The Generals' only counters were by Maynard Tiahrt and Bab Huff.

Phillips' Eight Points

But then it was W.-L.'s turn. While the Barons could manage for only four points in the next eight minutes, Phillips' eight points were topping a drive that accounted for 15 and a 21-to-20 edge. The last quarter was a seesaw affair, despite the scarcity of points.

Tom Kirby gave the Bethesdans a 21-to-21 tie at the start, but Phillips grabbed the lead back with another charity toss. Again the losers came up even on Loring Appleby's shot, and a single pointer by Julian completed Baron scoring with a minute and 20 seconds left. That set the stage for Phillips' throw, a set shot from just outside the foul circle.

Phillips' final outing in the meet, sending Bethesda off to the Duke University tournament in Durham, N. C., without the local crown, netted him 11 points. Brewer, pivot man of the Barons, finished second with 8 points.

In this shot of last night's metropolitan schoolboy tournament finale, won by Washington-Lee High, 24-23, what looks like two fouls are being committed without a toot from the referee's whistle. With his team leading near the half, 16-6, Bethesda's Bob Brewer takes a rebound despite the clinging arm of Bob Huff, who in turn is being pushed by Dick Poerstel. First-Inning Lead Saved Throughout

Hudson, Carrasquel And Wilson Share Honors; Batters Fall Down on Job

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 10.—The Nats scored a run and won another ball game today, because the Cleveland Indians didn't score at all. Washington's 1-0 victory was a triumph for Pitchers Sid Hudson, Jack Wilson and Alex Carrasquel, who permitted only two Indians to reach second base. If the Indians know what third base at Tinker's Field looks like, they must have inspected it before the game.

The Washington athletes weren't exactly wonderful, aside from their pitching. They didn't even appear very astounding when they scored their game-winning run in the first inning. In fact they butched the inning.

That one lonesome run of the ball game was scored by the Nats before a batter was retired in the opening inning, but Manager Bucky Harris isn't too proud of it because the Nats should have scored more.

Hits Come Bunched

George Case singled to center on the first pitch of the game by Clint Brown, veteran Cleveland right-hander, and in rapid succession, Stan Spence singled to right and Bruce Campbell doubled to center. One run was home, runners were on third and second and none out when the Nats went into reverse.

They got nothing more out of the inning because on Vernon's medium-sized fly ball to Hockett in left field, Spence feinted a dash for home and succeeded in befuddling only himself. Playing Manager Lou Boudreau cut off the throw to the plate and slung it to Keltner at third and it was a very sheepish Spence, indeed, who was tagged out before he could get back to the bag. Thus the incipient big inning collapsed.

However, Hudson, Wilson and Carrasquel made that run stand up very nicely in restricting the Indians to five hits, all singles. Hudson surrendered only one hit in his three-inning turn. He was groping for his control, but he offset two bases on balls with three strikeouts. Hudson's fast ball was banging into Early's mitt with a thunderclap bang.

Tuck Helps Alex

Wilson got by his three-inning turn nicely, allowing only two singles, but Carrasquel was carrying his horseshoe with him. The Indians banged four line drives into the mitts of Washington outfielders during the last three innings, and Case finally dropped one for an error with one out in the ninth that put the tying run on first. Cleveland's two rookie outfielders, Edwards and Hockett, were easy marks for Carrasquel in that crisis, however.

Left-handed Harry Eisenstat and Tom Ferrick, the right-hander obtained by Cleveland from the Athletics during the winter, followed Brown on the mound and the Nats ended up with only eight hits.

The Nats were double-play minded today, but only on offense. They hit into three of the things in the first five innings, which explains their lack of scoring.

Cope Makes 41 Points; A. U. Bows, 72-57

By the Associated Press

Swarthmore, Pa., March 10.—Stan Cope, Swarthmore star, set a new individual game high scoring record of 41 points tonight as the Garnet defeated American University, 72 to 57.

Cope, a Ridgeville, Ind., youth tossed in 18 field goals and five free throws to shatter the previous Philadelphia mark of 39 made two years ago by Larry Kenney, of St. Joseph's.

Playing his last game for the Garnet, Capt. Cope all but refereed the contest. He was all over the court, scrapping, passing, blocking shots and throwing them up. The rangy forward racked up 17 points in the first half to give his mates a 35-26 lead. At the start of the second half, Cope had 13 points to go to equal 200 markers or better for three consecutive years.

Record Set in '38

In the course of making this 200 mark Cope broke the Swarthmore College scoring mark of 26 set by Jim Buckingham in 1938. The crowd roared its approval as the Garnet star, his back to the bucket, dropped the thirtieth point of the game and 200th point of the season.

The Little Quaker quintet rose to the record-breaking feats of their captain and chimed in with 31 points of their own as Jack Dugan rang up 12 and Bill Dietz 11.

The contest itself was an exciting one, and the Garnet locals really needed Cope's points as the visitors from Washington found their shooting eyes in the second half and rang up 24 points. However, the spectators lost interest in the game as Cope's total mounted. With 15 seconds of the game remaining the crowd came to its feet, to watch the figure of Cope dart from nowhere to take a pass from Wolfe and hit the cords with his eighteenth field goal of the contest and his forty-first point.

Tunney Heads New Physical Setup in Navy

By the Associated Press

Secretary Knox announced yesterday the establishment of a Navy physical training section headed by Commander James J. (Gene) Tunney, former heavyweight champion of the world.

Commander Tunney said in an interview that he was sending an aide, Lieut. William I. Leckie, on a cross-country tour in search of athletes and physical instructors holding college degrees.

Tunney's representative will interview applicants between the ages of 21 and 35 at Navy recruiting stations in the following nine cities on the dates named:

Chicago, March 16, 17 and 18; Kansas City, March 19; Denver, March 20 and 21; San Francisco, March 23 and 24; Los Angeles, March 26 and 27; Dallas, March 30; Atlanta, April 2; Raleigh, April 3 and 4, and New York, April 7, 8 and 9. Applicants fulfilling the requirements will be given ratings of chief petty officer.

"We are after 3000 valorous men capable of training athletes and inspiring them to follow over the side and into enemy territory," Tunney declared. "We insist upon a personal interview in each case, because we want leaders and potential gunnery officers; we definitely are not offering anybody a safe bomb shelter for the duration."

Tunney explained that development of the Navy's physical fitness program demanded creation of a "warrior psychology" in two months in men who had had 20 years training as peace lovers.

"But courage is a business," Tunney declared, "and we want to condition the courage of the gridiron and of the prize ring to battle for mortal stakes."

Navy Okays Parker

Norfolk, Va., March 10 (AP).—The Navy disclosed today it had approved (Ace) Parker, Brooklyn Dodgers football player, as a chief specialist in physical training.

Sarazen-Hogan Upset, 'Unknowns' in Finals

Grout Sinks 60-Foot Chip to Carry Team To Victory; Harper-Keiser Also Advance

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 10.—Two long-shot combinations—neither rated better than 50 to 1—reached the finals of the Miami Biltmore's International Four-Ball Golf Tournament today with a pair of dramatic, almost unbelievable victories.

Jack Grout, tall, black-haired Pittston, Pa., professional, supplied the big punch for 1500 spectators when he sank a 60-foot chip shot on the thirty-sixth hole to give his team a 1-up decision.

Herman Keiser, of Akron, Ohio, managed a hot-putting streak earlier in the afternoon and he and his partner, Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., blasted out the 1941 winners—Ben Hogan ahd Gene Sarazen, 5 and 4.

With only four holes to go, Grout and Ben Loving, the Biltmore pro, were staring defeat in the face. They were 2 down, after Jimmy Hines, of New York, and Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, had fired an amazing 29, six under par, on the first nine of the afternoon round.

Then Grout took command to save the day. He knocked in a 4-foot putt on the 553-yard thirty-third for the birdie four that won the hole when Goggin's putt rolled past.

Grout smacked his second shot on the 400-yard thirty-fourth 7 feet from the pin. The serious, 31-year-old player made a perfect putt.

They halved the 396-yard thirty-fifth in par 4s and the stage was set for Grout's coup de grace. He was short of the green with his second on the 479-yard thirty-sixth, while the others all were over.

Grout was away and he stroked his chip first. The ball followed the contour of the green, curved and dropped—while a great cheer went up.

With one dying gasp, Hines hit his 50-yard chip to within 8 inches of the pin. There was a gasp when, for a moment, it appeared he had duplicated Grout's feat.

Grout and Loving did the morning 18 in 30, 35—65, to go to lunch 2 up. They turned in a best ball 34, 31—65 this afternoon. Hines and Goggin, who carded seven consecutive 3s on the first nine this afternoon, had scores of 35, 32—67 and 29, 35—64.

Perfect teamwork counted again for Keiser and Harper as they knocked the last remaining "name" team out of the tournament.

Each contributed heavily to the 32, 31—63 that gave them a one-hole margin on the morning 18. Then Keiser found his touch.

He sank putts of 12, 15 and 20 feet on the twentieth, twenty-first and twenty-second to give his team an insurmountable margin.

Florida East Coast Medal To Miss Suggs

By the Associated Press

St. Augustine, Fla., March 10.—Little Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., played with clock-like precision today to take medal honors in the qualifying round of the Florida East Coast Women's Golf Tourney.

The dark-haired youngster shot a 37, 40—77, 5 over men's par. She played only one hole poorly, three-putting the eleventh for a 2 over par 6.

Georgia Tainter, defending champion from Fargo, N. Dak., and the outstanding favorite, and Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, were one stroke back of Miss Suggs, with 78s.

Miss Tainter, shooting for her fourth major victory on Florida links this winter, toured the course in 40, 38—78. She blew a chance of at least tying for medal honors by taking three putts on the seventeenth.

Gus Dorazio Wins Over Lew Brooks

Philadelphia, March 10 (U.P.).—Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia heavyweight, scored a ten-round decision over Lew Brooks of Wilmington, Del., before a capacity crowd of 14,000 at the Arena tonight.

Brooks' defensive tactics proved his undoing as Dorazio hammered the Wilmington Negro with a bombardment of body punches throughout the match.

Walsh Named Acting Coach At Fordham

By the Associated Press

New York, March 10.—Earl Walsh, chief scout at Fordham University the last nine years, was named acting head coach tonight for the duration. Jim Crowley, present coach, was granted a leave of absence to join the Navy.

Walsh, a teammate of George Gipp at Notre Dame in 1919, 1920 and 1921, came to Fordham with Crowley in 1933 after a nine-year coaching career at Dowling College in Des Moines.

Under Crowley he tutored the backs and did all of the scouting.

The Rev. Robert I. Gannon, S. J., president of the university, said the same assistants who aided Crowley would remain with Walsh.

Crowley, one of Knute Rockne's famous Four Horsemen, announced his application for enlistment in the Navy last Thursday and at that time President Gannon said a successor would be chosen immediately. Spring practice starts March 20.

He indicated, however, that a football coach of national reputation would be chosen and that none of Crowley's assistants would be considered.

There were reports that Crowley's unexpected enlistment had caught Fordham unprepared and that his leaving for the duration might be made permanent if a widely known coach could be obtained. The troubles were smoothed over, however, and the reins turned over to Walsh until Crowley's return.

Crowley, whose five-year contract still has two years to go, already has taken his physical examination, and if accepted by the Navy will be assigned to training naval air cadets in the new three-month football-type "toughening routine."

Expects to Weigh 205 for Title Go; Divides Time Between Ring and Army

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Fort Dix, N. J., March 10.—An electrical music box gave off a little number entitled "Things Ain't What They Used to Be," as a company of soldiers marched by. Which is as good a way as any of starting a piece about the most unusual fight camp ever put together.

It's the neat, but not gaudy, combination of Army life and fighter's quarters which is passing as the spot at which Private Joe Louis is getting ready for the twenty-first defense of his heavyweight championship — against ample Abie Simon in Madison Square Garden, March 27, for the benefit of the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

And after looking over the layout, from the rambling building which used to serve as this camp's Red Cross headquarters, and now passes for Joe's living establishment, all the way to the huge new sports arena—Madison Square Garden with a soldier suit—you're convinced the only more unusual spot for a fight training would be in New York's Copacabana Night Club.

Bruins Stop Hawks, 9-1; Clinch Third

By the United Press

Boston, March 10.—The champion Boston Bruins, striking their stride with a rookie-studded lineup, clinched third place in the National Hockey League tonight by plastering the Chicago Black Hawks, 9-1, before about 11,000 fans at Boston Garden.

The Boston victory left Chicago with no chance of gaining third in its two remaining clashes and earned the Bruins the advantage of playing two home games in the best-of-three Stnaley Cup playoff Series "B" against the Hawks.

Chicago scored its only tally in less than two minutes, but Boston proceeded to unleash its highest scoring barrage of the season to bury the Hawks with the equalizer in the first period, three goals in the midseason and five counters in the final period.

Tulsa U. Coach To Confer With Yale Grid Group

Philadelphia, March 10 (AP).—Henry Frnka, head football coach at Tulsa University, stopped off in Philadelphia today on his way to New York, where he is to confer tomorrow with Yale's football advisory committee. The committee is interviewing candidates for the Yale coaching position left vacant by the resignation of "Spike" Nelson.

Frnka talked with Ray Morrison, Temple coach, and Bob Hall, Yale alumnus. Frnka was an assistant coach at Temple under Morrison before going to Tulsa a year ago.

Holcomb, Buckeye '31 Captain, Made Miami U. Coach

By the Associated Press

Oxford, Ohio, March 10.—Stuart Holcomb, 32-year-old football and track coach at Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., today was appointed head football coach at Miami University here.

Holcomb's appointment was announced by Merlin A. Ditmer, director of intercollegiate athletics, and ended a three-month search for a successor to Frank Wilton, whose resignation becomes effective in June.

Holcomb, captain of the 1931 Ohio State University football team, coached football at Findlay College and Muskingum College before going to Washington and Jefferson last season.

Red Rolfe, in Poor Physical Condition, May Quit Baseball

Yankee Third Sacker To Consult Specialist; Contract Terms Okay

By International News Service

Sarasota, Fla., March 10.—Red Rolfe, New York Yankees' third baseman since 1934, may retire from baseball because of his physical condition, Manager Joe McCarthy revealed today.

The infielder advised Edward Barrow, club president, in New York that while he is satisfied with the club's terms, his hesitancy in accepting the contract was due to his uncertainty whether he will be able to continue in the game.

Rolfe, according to information from New York, is going to see a specialist in Toledo and if this specialist should fail to correct the colitis condition that forced Red from the game last fall, the infielder will quit.

"I don't want to start training unless I'm sure I will be able to go through the season," Rolfe told Barrow. "The terms are all right and if my ailment can be cleared up, I will continue. Otherwise, I will retire."

In the event Rolfe is finished,

"RED" ROLFE

Gerry Priddy will take over third base.

Williams Joins Red Sox, Starts Swinging a Bat

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., March 10.—Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox slugger, arrived here today, went directly to the Sox training camp and started swinging a bat to unloosen the kinks incurred by a four-day auto trip from Minneapolis.

Williams, whose decision to rejoin the Red Sox followed his reclassification by the Presidential Appeal Board in Washington from 1-A to 3-A in the Selective Service lists, was warmly greeted by Manager Joe Cronin.

"Anyone who knows the true facts in my case will not condemn me," the outfielder told reporters in regard to his selective status. "This is the toughest decision I've ever had to make.

"I realize I'm going to take a great deal of abuse from the crowds this year. I don't know why I should, though."

Ex-Piedmont Pitcher Stars For Boston

1941 Greensboro Ace Gives Champs 1 Hit In 5 Frames; Other Training Camp News

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., March 10.—Gerry Priddy, utility infielder, who is being groomed to take over the third base chores, slapped out a single in the eleventh inning today and brought the New York Yankees a 3-to-1 triumph over the Boston Red Sox.

The Sox nicked Ernie Bonham for a run in the first inning on singles by John Pesky and Hal Finney and then were blanked the rest of the way.

New York couldn't get the tying run until the eighth frame due to the stellar pitching of Norman Brown, a rookie righthander up from Piedmont, who allowed only one hit in five frames.

The contest attracted 1680 spectators.

Cards Rally in 7th To Beat Reds, 5-3

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals won their second exhibition game in five starts today, thumping the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3, on an even dozen hits.

Tied up 2-2 going into their half of the seventh inning, the Redbirds bunched four singles by Ervin Dusak, Johnny Hopp, Walker Cooper and Frank Crespi to score the two runs which proved to be the margin of victory.

Morton Cooper, strong-armed right-hander, held the Reds to three hits and one run in the first three innings, while Lloyd Moore, the first Cincinnati hurler, was tagged for four hits and one run in the same stretch. Cooper also drove in the Cards, first run with a two-bagger.

Browns' McQuinn Signs, Starts Work

Deland, Fla., March 10 (AP).—Best news in the St. Louis Browns' camp today was that First Baseman George McQuinn signed his contract and immediately joined his teammates in a brisk workout.

General Manager Bill De Witt also announced that Infielder Alan Strange had agreed to terms and was on his way to camp, but the club's training program remained out of focus due to absence of six regulars. Still out of the fold are Rick Ferrell, George Caster, Jack Kramer, Roy Cullenbine, Johnny Lucadello and Don Heffner.

Macks Find Range, Defeat Solons, 5-4

Fullerton, Calif., March 10 (U.P.).—Held to a single run for seven innings by a pair of minor league pitchers, the Philadelphia Athletics cut loose for four runs in the last two frames to shade the Sacramento Solons of the Pacific Coast League today, 5-4.

Dodgers Miss Wyatt At Daytona Beach

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 10 (AP).—For the first time since 1916 when Wilbert Robinson brought the club, the Brooklyn Dodgers are back here for a spring training grind.

With only five weeks to go before the start of the season, the greatest problem in the camp was the continued holdout and silence of Whitlow Wyatt, the soft-spoken Southerner, who hurled 22 victories for the National League champions last season.

Mize's Trick Shoulder Worry to Giants

Miami, Fla., March 10 (AP).—The venturesome tendon in the right shoulder of Johnny Mize, huge first baseman obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals during the winter, hopped out of place again today after staying put since last Friday.

Mize immediately went to a doctor and Mel Ott, the new manager of the New York Giants, added the big infielder would be given plenty of rest before being allowed to join his mates this time.

"He threw too soon," Ott explained. "Immediately after last Friday's treatment he started throwing. By Monday he was confident his troubles were over, but they weren't."

Phillies Work Hard, Play Giants Today

Miami Beach, Fla., March 10 (AP).—Manager Hans Lobert sent the Philadelphia Phils through a strenuous workout today in preparation for the team's first exhibition game of the season tomorrow.

The Phils meet the New York Giants in the game which was scheduled after the Brooklyn Dodgers canceled two games with the Phils and one against the Giants which were to have been played this week.

College Ring Game Is Due For Real Boom

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., March 9.—College boxing is due for a "war boom" in the view of Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association coaches, because it conditions fighting men, requires little equipment, and is good for morale.

Several of six E. I. B. A. coaches cite the growth of boxing during World War I in support of their predictions.

"Boxing is bound to flourish even more during this war," says Roy Simmons, of Syracuse University. "When other college sports are curtailed because of expenses and the shortage of equipment, the fans naturally will turn to boxing."

Agreeing with Simmons that more leather will be tossed in institutions of higher learning are Leo Houck, of Penn State; Bill Cavanagh, of Army; Al York, University of Virginia; Charles Havens, Western Maryland, and Victor McClearnon, Coast Guard Academy.

Houck, strongly supporting the theory that boxing is a prime sport to help condition soldiers, said it "should be made compulsory in every high school and college in the country."

York cites that "college boxing already has a good foothold which it lacked before 1918 and this war should bring more enthusiasm and more competition into the colleges after it is over. There is no doubt that college boxing was waning, since the last 20 years have made us soft."

Havens believes boxing will be stressed "as much if not more in the preparation for the present war as it was in World War I," explaining "even now military and naval people are stressing the need of physical contact work in developing service men."

Jockey Seaman Suspended in Florida

Coral Gables, Fla., March 10 (AP).—Willie Seaman, apprentice rider from Sanger, W. Va., has been suspended for the remainder of the Tropical Park meeting, the stewards announced today. Seaman was charged with rough riding astride War Emblem in the last race on yesterday's opening card.

The Oddity of Baseball Relations

New York, March 10.—It's hard to figure out the capital and labor relations in baseball. The usual yardsticks which measure such things must be tossed out the window.

For instance, a man is not paid so much for the services he is about to render as for the services he has already rendered. Salary demands are based on performances of the immediate past, in most cases. But that isn't necessarily a hard and fast rule. For a man can have a good year with a prosperous team and still face a pay cut.

CONSIDINE

There isn't much doubt now that the Yankees tried to cut the salaries of Red Ruffing, Bill Dickey and Red Rolfe. Yet they were great heroes at the end of last season and without them the Yanks could not have forged into the World Series.

The Yanks offered Joe DiMaggio the same salary he made in 1940—$37,500, though Joe had his greatest season. They offered Joe Gordon the same salary he had made, something in the neighborhod of $12,000. The same is true of other players, excepting Charley Keller, who was given a small raise.

At Least the Yanks Aren't Stingy

Now, let's face it—the Yanks are not niggardly. Over the years they have paid out more money in salaries than many of the other big league clubs combined. Jake Ruppert said, not many years before his death, that Babe Ruth had made more out of the Yankees than he, Ruppert, had. Which was true, for Babe did not have to bear the financial penalty of the bad years.

In many cases, the manager of the club is responsible for this situation. Managers have long memories. Often they have played, in the past, with such high-priced players as Medwick. They remember these players as they were in their exalted prime. They refuse to face the dismal fact that time has taken its toll. They are not happy, in their new job as manager, until they can hire such players—and the players sensibly insist on the good salary, because they are being sought after and are not seeking. This sort of thing has been going on since the beginning of baseball.

Another letter, indicating the general confusion of the public (and press): "At the end of the 1941 World Series Joe McCarthy said that Joe Gordon was the greatest 'clutch' player he ever saw. He said that Gordon might never stir himself in a game which the Yanks were winning easily, but, in the pinch, he was the man McCarthy depended on for the hit, or the fine play, rather than DiMaggio. Then what's this about trying to hammer down his salary?"

Again, it's a long story. Heaven knows a manager needs a player who comes through for him in a pinch. But, more than that, he needs a player who'll be a pretty good threat through 154 games. DiMaggio is just that. We think the fans who have written to us, putting the blast

Team Trophy At Stake in A. A. U. Battles

Friday night's semifinal round on the District A. A. U. Boxing Tournament card at Turner's Arena may develop into a privte fist-swinging party between St. Mary's Boys Club of Alexandria and the Apollo Athletic Club. The first of 16 bouts is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Each club has four men in the round of four and if either can advance a full squad it will gain a strangle hold on the senior team trophy. But there may be complications. In two important and stiffly contested classes the rivals are paired together. Thus Pete Latsios, veteran and clever St. Mary's welterweight, goes against Tom Hollon, while Moe Moriarty, the Saints' roly-poly middleweight, takes on untested Dan Bandish.

Latsios was a finalist in the Eastern Golden Glove Championships at New York last spring and a great many fans thought he outpointed Reds Vernon, current titleholder, in the finals of the last tournament. In Hollon he meets a rugged lad whose footsteps have been dogged by tough luck. Tom always is in the thick of the arguments and usually has the crowd with him but he probably has lost more split decisions than any other fighter in the tournament.

Moriarty, a two-fisted slugger built along the same unslender lines of Tony Galento, is one of the most colorful performers in local ranks. He never takes a backward step; but moves forward constantly trying to connect with a kayo punch.

But there are other stars on this show, which will compare favorably, if not outshine, any of its predecessors. Buddy Thomas, anxious to atone for his upset in the Golden Gloves, returns to action against the Washington Boys Club Tommy Larner in what appears to be an even-Stephen proposition. Reno Workman, the big light-heavyweight, takes on Warren (Red) Doherty, former Columbus University ace; and the 118-pound squabble between John (Cotton) Corbin and Benny Rodill should be a scorcher.

The complete card:

Novice Class

112 POUNDS—Winn McCafferty (N. T. S.) vs. Jimmy Caraway (P. G.).
118 POUNDS—Bill Gaulier (Brookland) vs. William Hodges (N. T. S.).

175 POUNDS—Art Vermillion (Merrick) vs. Ransom Morris (N. T. S.).

Senior Class

112 POUNDS—Manny Silverman (W. B. C.) vs. Daryl Smithson (Apollo).
125 POUNDS—George Espina (N. T. S.) vs. Tony DiTolo (K. C.).
147 POUNDS—Nick Latsios (St. Mary's) vs. Tom Hollon (Apollo).
160 POUNDS—Dan Bandish (Apollo) vs. Moe Moriarty (St. Mary's).
175 POUNDS—Al Edick (St. Mary's) vs. Jim Hughes (N. T. S.).
135 POUNDS—Tommy Larner (W. B. C.) vs. Buddy Thomas (P. G.).
118 POUNDS—John Corbin (W. B. C.) vs. Benny Rodill (Merrick).
175 POUNDS — Reno Workman (St. Mary's) vs. Warren Doherty (K. C.).
HEAVYWEIGHT—Joseph McLaughlin (P. G.) vs. Bill Barber.

N. T. S. Closes Season With 46-32 Victory

National Training School's quintet closed its season on a happy note yesterday when it romped over Woodward Prep, 46-32, on the Bladensburg Road court. The outcome was in doubt for only a few minutes, the winners rushing into a 28-14 margin at the half.

Capt. Don Durfee turned in his best performance of the year as he registered 24 points for the winners. Meanwhile, his mates were holding Woodward's star scorer, Billy Noyes, to 13.

Maple Leaf Star Is Awarded Byng Hockey Trophy

By the Associated Press

Montreal, March 10.—Sylvanus (Syl) Apps, center for the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs, tonight was awarded the Byng Trophy given annually to the player in the National Hockey League adjudged to combine the best sportsmanship with a high standard of playing ability.

Apps, ninth in the individual scoring race at present with 40 points, has not spent a single minute in the penalty box this season.

In all, 31 players were nominated by the hockey writers in the six National League cities, with Gordie Drillon, also of Toronto, getting second place and Bill Thoms, of the Chicago Hawks, third.

Each writer selected ten players, with 10 points going to his first-place choice, 9 to the second and 1 for tenth.

Bloodworth May Lead Off for Tigers

Lakeland, Fla., March 10 (U.P.).—Present plans call for either Jimmy Bloodworth, former Washington second baseman, or Bill Hitchcock, a shortstop acquired from Kansas City, to lead off the Detroit Tiger batting order this season. Center Fielder Roger (Doc) Cramer will be in No. 2 position, Barney McCosky will be in No. 3 and either Rudy York or Ray Radcliff in the clean-up spot.

Cards Pushing Hopp Around, But Not Forever, He Says

Southworth Puts Musial in Left and Sanders At First, But Changes Will Be Made

By George Kirksey

United Press Staff Correspondent.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10.—Johnny Hopp is the stepchild of the St. Louis Cardinals. He'd be fully justified to walk up to General Manager Branch Rickey and say, "What goes on around here, anyhow?" because of the treatment he's getting in the spring training camp.

Hopp made a place for himself in the Cardinals' lineup last season by his speed, fire and hustle and he's counting on doing the same thing again this year.

Right now Hopp has a slightly stiff neck, but that isn't what's keeping him on the bench. Manager Billy Southworth has given the early call in left field to Rookie Stan Musial, who looks like one of the finds of a lifetime, and the first base call to Rookie Ray Sanders. So that leaves Hopp out in the cold for the time being, but Johnny isn't fretting.

O. K. With Him

"Say, I'd be a chump to worry about the fact that the boss is giving a couple of kids a chance," Hopp said. "That's nothing new to me. He gave Harry Walker the big chance in left field last spring. I don't think I played a whole game all spring. But I wound up being the regular left fielder.

"I'll have a job on this ball club this year, too. I don't know where it'll be, but somebody'll have to make room for me. Confidentially, I don't think it'll be left field. I've seen enough of that kid Musial to know that they can't keep him on the bench either. He's a natural hitter if I ever saw one."

Last season Hopp started out in left field, but had to move in to first base twice when Johnny Mize was hurt. Hopp played 91 games in left field and 39 games at first and hit .303, only Johnny Mize, Enos Slaughter and Jimmy Brown outhitting him, all by only a few points. The Cards played their best ball in midseason when Hopp was stationed at first base.

Hopp's speed, aggressiveness and left-handed hitting ability so impressed the Cincinnati Reds that they moved heaven and high water to get him last May, but the Cards refused to sell. The price they were willing to pay for Hopp was close to $75,000. But Branch Rickey knew that the Reds would win the pennant if they landed Hopp. So he sold them Ernie Koy instead. The Reds, and several other clubs as well, would still like to have Hopp and if the Cards can't use him he can bring a fancy price.

Hershey Defeats Rockets, 7 to 2

Hershey, Pa., March 10 (AP).—Hershey kept within striking distance of first place in the Western Division of the American Hockey League tonight by rolling over the Philadelphia Rockets, 7 to 2.

Lofvendahl opened the scoring in the first period but Wade deadlocked the count for the Rockets. Stewart, rookie recruit, put the Bears in front with 11 seconds remaining in the opening period.

The Bears rammed five goals into the net in the second period. Jenkins and Kirk scored a pair in five seconds. Jenkins and Stewart followed through with their second goals of the game and Pettinger added the seventh in the last minutes of play.

Away Last, Arcaro Boots Mount Home

Victor Pays $9.50 Ticket; More Than Few Is 2d; K. Dorko Takes Show Spoils

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 10.—Eddie Arcaro, who seems to have made up his mind not to stay out of the racing headlines, accounted for another feature race here this afternoon. The veteran who guided Requested home in the Flamingo Stakes and The Rhymer to victory in the rich Widener, today had a lot to do with the triumph of Eternal Peace in the Okeechobee Purse, mile and 70-yard main attraction.

Eternal Peace, a stablemate of Requested, carried the Texas-owned silks of Ben F. Whitaker first past the wire by a length in 1:42 4-5, paying his backers $9.50. More Than Few, representing the "Mr. French" Stable of Mrs. C. F. Sheldon, saved the place by a neck from J. H. Miles' K. Dorko. More Than Few won three straight races prior to the Flamingo Stakes, in which he was badly buffeted around after the start and wound up last. The colt ruled favorite today.

Arcaro earned a double astride Eternal Peace. He received a fine hand from the crowd of 7,929.

Eternal Peace and Arcaro were last to leave the gate. While K. Darko and More Than Few were leading the eight-horse field, Arcaro gradually improved his mount's position. In reaching contention, Eddie shot the eventual winner between horses, then came to the outside of the two leaders for the stretch drive. Eternal Peace, under powerful urging, wore down his rivals to win going away, scoring his third victory in eight winter starts. More Than Few barely outlasted K. Dorko.

Chinese Air Cadets Are Introduced to Baseball

Cady Defends Title in S. A. Ring Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., March 10.—Nine defending champions or former champions will be competing in the fifteenth South Atlantic High and Prep School Boxing Tournament to be held here Friday and Saturday in the Municipal Armory.

Two defending titleholders and one 1940 champion will help in the defense of the team title held by the Lane High School of Charlottesville. These lads are Grover Bates, 113-pound champion last spring; Earl Barnett, 145-pound defending champion, and Preston Mays, 155-pound champion in 1940 and runner-up in the same weight last year.

Two titleholders will represent the Miller Manual Training School, which is official tournament host. Lacy Yowell will be defending the 120-pound championship, but Jimmy Williams, who was last season's winner in the 127-pound division, has moved up into the 135-pound class.

Augusta Military Academy, winner of the team championship in 1940, has two former titleholders. These are Leon Lee, in the 103-pound division, and Morris Guerrant in the 120-pound class.

Cady Defends Title

Frank Cady, of Charlotte Hall Military Academy, who won the heavyweight championship in the last tournament, will be defending his title against a strong field, including Joe Leonard, of Fork Union Military Academy, who was unlimited titleholder in 1940, but who did not compete last year in the tournament.

Competition in the South Atlantic High and Prep School tournament is in 12 weight classes. Four of these are junior weights, 83 pounds, 93 pounds, 103 pounds and 113 pounds, and are open only to boys who are not older than 15 years 6 months.

No age limit is imposed for the eight upper classifications, 120 pounds, 127 pounds, 135 pounds, 145 pounds, 155 pounds, 165 pounds, 175 pounds and heavyweight, which are the same divisions that are standard for intercollegiate competition.

Hugh Flannigan, coach of the Miller Manual Training School, is chairman for the tournament, and J. W. Williams, of the University of Virginia boxing staff, is tournament director.

Lions Seek Playoff Spot In New Haven

The Lions, prepared to make a "killing" against the New Haven Eagles, and thus clinch a play-off place in the American League championship round, left last night for New Haven, where the teams collide tonight.

Washington's pro pucksters already are virtually "in" as holders of third place in the Eastern division, but the Providence Reds still have a mathematical chance of beating out the Lions. They would have to win all three of their games while Washington is losing its four in order to take third place. Victory tonight will end all uncertainty.

The Lions are in good shape for the game, following a long workout yesterday. Only Allan Shields is suffering with an injury—a deep chin cut caused by a stick—but he announced he'll be fit for competition.

Lou Trudel planned to make a last-minute drive to raise his standing among the leading scorers in the league. Lou has scored more goals than any other player—35—but is third in points.

Sonnenberg Seeking Third Straight Here

Determined to win himself a headline match, a role he played quite conspicuously years ago when he ruled as world's heavyweight wrestling champion, Gus Sonnenberg will attempt to take his third straight local bout of the year tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

Sonnenberg will meet Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber, in a special 30-minute bout on the card in which Ernie Dusek, the Nebraska Wildcat, will face Cowboy Luttrall, of Texas, in one windup, and Mildred Burke, feminine champion, will risk her title against Mae Young, of Little Rock, Ark., in the other cofeature.

Sonnenberg, former Dartmouth All-American footballer, first whipped Fred Grobmier in six minutes here. Last week he took 15½ minutes to topple Art LeGrand. In both matches Sonnenberg won by dint of his deadly flying tackle.

The supporting card was completed yesterday, and finds Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, meeting Henri Piers, the Flying Dutchman, and Pat Fraley, of California, facing Sheriff Tom Hanley, of Oklahoma.

Froude, '41 Navy Captain, to Wed Pennsylvania Girl

By the Associated Press

Norristown, Pa., March 10.—Mr. and Mrs. Philip Berkes announced today the engagement of their daughter, Mary Ann Berkes, to Ensign Robert Froude, of San Bernardino, Calif., captain and end of the 1941 Navy football team.

Froude, now an instructor at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Froude, of San Bernardino.

Miss Berkes is a graduate of Penn Hall Junior College and Berte School of Fashion Design, Philadelphia.

Louis Near Peak For Simon Bout

Joe, himself, is going all out, working for both the fight and to complete his basic military training, which began at Camp Upton, Long Island, before he switched here to get ready for Abe. He works out daily, boxing five of the seven days weekly. And he spends two hours on Army training. Right now he's on gas mask drill.

Today, with John J. Phelan and Bill Brown, of the New York State Athletic Commission, looking on—but having nothing to say about a camp for the first time in years—Joe worked four rounds on punch-absorbers Dee Amos, George Fitch, Eddie Blunt and George Nicholson. Louis looked slow and somewhat sluggish and one sparmate, Fitch, took the liberty of bouncing a good right hand off Joe's jaw.

"I wanna be real good for this one," he explained, "because I wanna win it for the Army. I weighed 221 when I reached here and I'm down to 215 now. That's about five pounds less than at the same time in my training for Baer. I'll probably come in for the fight at 205—a pound and three-quarters under the Baer weight."

At The Post

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Followers of 2-year-olds will have a look at a pair of shifty youngsters on Saturday when this track puts on the Orange Blossom Stakes. These up-and-coming juveniles are Wise Bob and Bullpen. They accounted for the first money in the two divisions of the Dinner Stakes at Hialeah and their meeting has been awaited. The nominations, however, include a long list of stars from the Hialeah meeting and Wise Bob and Bullpen will have to hustle to win first money. By the way, The Rhymer, with the $50,000 Widener tucked away, will make an appearance at Tropical in the Coral Gables Handicap a week from Saturday. This race carries $7500 in added money, which isn't $50,000, but still ain't hay. Kopla, recent winner over Wise Bob, is slated to try his luck in the Kindergarten Stakes at Bowie. Porter Roberts, one of the better-known riders in action at Tropical Park, intends to remain through the Gables meeting. Though now a free lance, Roberts is having little trouble receiving choice mounts. This solemn-eyed lad goes from Tropical to Maryland, on to Delaware Park, then to New York in that order of schedule. Apprentice Jimmy Berger, whose contract recently was purchased by the veteran trainer, Jack Whyte, is 17 years old and a native of Louisville. He has ridden over 100 winners and was the leading rider last year at Lincoln Fields and in Kentucky. His brother, Maurice Berger, rode with a fair measure of success until he packed his tack in '41. Jimmy, now donning silks at Tropical Park, will accompany the Whyte Stable, consisting of 17 head, to New England, following the close of the Miami racing campaign.

Pretty Pet, a most useful campaigner for John C. Clark, is done with racing. The 7-year-old mare was a recent winner in first-class company, but went amiss last week with Trainer Bob Robertson deeming her retirement advisable. By Victorian or Jean Valjean, out of a Sand Mole mare, she will be bred in the spring either by her owner or sold for that purpose. Only 20 days to Bowie and only 65 days to Charles Town. BILL.

First race—ALHAWKIT may be the right one in a wide open dash for maiden juveniles. This one comes from a good barn. CHICTLI promises to go well. WOODFORD LAD to take care of the minor award.

Second race—KLEIG LIGHT gets my call in this sprint. He has worked well and gets in light. GALLANT STROKE and BOLD TURK for the place and show positions.

Third race—EQUISTONE seems to have been tossed into the right spot in this field. Needs only some help from the saddle. MY SHADOW has speed and belongs close. WEISENHEIMER for the show end.

Fourth race—WHISCENDENT and TO BOOT are a close fit in this event. I prefer them in the order named. TOUR seems to have something on the others. Likes this route.

Fifth race—LIGHT SWEEPER could be the right one in this rather open affair. Needs only a share of the racing luck. EXPLORATION favors the route and is dangerous. COMMENCEMENT gets in with a feather assignment.

Sixth race—SHIP'S RUN, with Johnny Gilbert to do the handling, appears best in this test. HAPPY NOTE has improved of late and is a threat. BOB'S DREAM for the show money.

Seventh race—TOPEE is the best suited of these and has all the earmarks of a winner. STAR OF PADULA likes this track. MULTITUDE is likely to fill out the cash bracket.

Eighth race—BOLD RISK has a chance of upsetting these cheap ones and I'm going to string along. BUFFLEHEAD (named after Art Brown) looks good enough for the place. LONG PASS to show.

Best bet—TOPEE.

Reserve Eases Rule

The Federal Reserve has ruled that banks may receive 90-day loans, on the security of Government obligations they own, from Federal Reserve banks.

$20,000 Bonus to Aides

William N. Schaefer, president of the R. P. Andrews Paper Co., of Washington, announced the distribution of more than $20,000 in defense bonds as bonuses to employes at a dinner held Monday night at the Columbia Country Club on the occasion of the company's forty-sixth anniversary. More than 60 employes were in attendance, several of whom have been with the Andrews organization for over 30 years.

Speeches stressed the importance of maximum individual effort, regardless of work performed, in maintaining national economy at the highest level.

Prospect of Curb On Federal Sales Buoys Grain List

By the Associated Press

Prices of major farm commodity futures were bid up yesterday by traders hopeful of favorable developments in Washington on the pending legislation to prohibit sales of Government-held stocks under parity. Late selling and a dearth of demand pared the early gains.

At Chicago, wheat finished ⅛ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel higher, corn was up ⅜ to ¾ of a cent and Soybeans gained ⅛ to ½ cent. Hog prices receded 10 to 15 cents a hundredweight, cattle losing as much as 25 cents a hundredweight. Sheep prices were up 10 to 15 cents.

Unfilled Orders Of Cons. Aircraft Top 755 Million

New York, March 10 (AP).—Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, crediting establishment of mechanized assembly lines with a large part in its increased production, said today its unfilled orders at the end of November, 1941, totaled $755,498,000, compared with $318,648,226 at the end of 1940.

Chairman Tom Girdler and President Harry Woodhead, in a letter to stockholders, said $532,378,824 in orders were booked in the first 11 months of 1941, nearly double 1940's total.

Included in the unfilled orders was $361,424,482, the estimated amount of contracts taken by the company on a cost-plus-fixed-fee basis.

The letter said total Federal, State and municipal taxes chargeable against the corporation for the first 11 months of 1941 were $21,216,792, equivalent to $2.64 for every $1 of net income.

U. S. Steel Shipments Set February Peak

New York, March 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation in February were at the record high for that month of 1,616,587 net tons, the corporation announced today.

The total compared with 1,738,893 net tons in January and 1,548,451 in February, 1941. The decline from the January total was due to three less working days in the latest month.

Orange Crop Seen Lower

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that production of oranges for the 1941-42 marketing season totaled 83,914,000 boxes, or 500,000 boxes fewer than estimated a month ago.

Young Expected to Regain Control of C. & O. Railway

Long, Bitter Battle To Reach Climax At April Meeting

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 10.—Control of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway System is expected in financial circles to return at the annual meeting in April to Robert R. Young, New York financier who heads Alleghany Corporation.

Of the 13 members of the board of directors, only Young, President George D. Brooke and four others are expected to hold over from the directorate named a year ago.

Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayers, chief of the War Department's statistical branch, and Allan P. Kirby, president of Alleghany, recently were added to the C. & O. board to fill vacancies, and five others friendly to Young are expected to be named next month.

Young lost control of C. & O. several years ago and was removed as chairman of a subsidiary, the Nickel Plate, as the result of a bitter fight with directors whom he accused of representing Guaranty Trust Co. of New York.

The new board members are expected to be William H. Lipscomb, of Leesburg, Va.; James M. Nicely, of New York, representing Guaranty Trust, trustee for the three Alleghany bond issues; Carl E. Newton, New York attorney who has served as counsel for Alleghany; Joseph P. Routh, of New York, chairman of the Pittsburgh (Coal) Co., and Herbert C. Fitzpatrick, who resigned as C. & O. chairman a year ago in an attempt to encourage peace between Guaranty and Young.

Directors expected to retire, according to information in railroad quarters in New York, are Frank B. Bernard, associate of George A. Ball; Homer L. Ferguson, president of Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.; John M. Miller, jr., of Richmond; J. L. Dickinson, of Charleston, W. Va.; John B. Hollister, Cincinnati attorney, and Ralph C. Gifford, of Louisville.

The scheduled return to power of Young follows recently announced settlement of Young's 8 million dollar suit against George A. Ball. Young charged that Ball misled him as to the value of controlling securities in the C. & O. railroad realm when Young, Kirby and associates purchased the securities in 1937.

Allied Chemical Nets $21,416,566; Sales Leap 30%

New York, March 10 (AP).—The Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation today reported 1941 consolidated net income of $21,416,566, equal to $9.67 a share of common stock, compared with 1940 net income of $20,885,270, or $9.43 a share.

The company, which said its 1941 business had increased 30 per cent over the previous year, announced it had set aside from its income last year an addition of three million dollars to the general contingency reserve.

Hog Prices Drop On Price Ceiling

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—Price advances in the hog market, which had carried swine to 16-year peaks, were halted today when Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced temporary wholesale ceilings for most pork products.

Henderson froze wholesale prices of 90 per cent of the Nation's pork products at the highest levels prevailing between March 3 and March 7. The order becomes effective March 23.

Early trading prior to Henderson's announcement, was slightly higher, but packers and shippers lowered their bids after word reached the market that the long-expected ceilings had been imposed. Closing quotations were off 10 to 15 cents a hundred pounds from yesterday.

Time Limit Extended For Merchant Tailors

War Production Board orders requiring simplification of men's and boys' clothing will not affect merchant tailors or tailors to the trade until May 30, WPB officials pointed out yesterday.

In response to queries they explained that manufacturers of ready-to-wear clothing must comply with prohibitions against two-trousers suits, cuffless pants and other restrictions after March 30, mut that an additional 60 days was allowed the tailors in which to use up cut stocks on hand.

Southern Pacific Files $5,660,000 Issue

By the Associated Press

The Southern Pacific Co. asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to sell $5,660,000 of equipment trust certificates, series T, to finance in part the purchase of 2200 freight cars costing a total of $7,111,401.

The certificates, bearing 2½ per cent interest, would mature in ten equal installments beginning April 1, 1943.

War Factories Plan 10 Billion In Insurance

By the Associated Press

New York, March 10.—The billion-dollar insurance taken by the United States Steel Corporation against sabotage, malicious damage and fire and wind storm loss, reports said today, is the forerunner of perhaps ten billion dollars in such protection to be taken by other plants engaged in war production.

Although asserting details were withheld by companies and insurance representatives, the New York Herald-Tribune said an estimated 5 billion dollars to 10 billion dollars of the new form of coverage would be in force within a short time.

"The new form of insurance," the newspaper said, "is strictly a war measure but has no precedent in the country's history. No such plan was operative in World War 1.

"It supplements, according to indications, the 'self-insurance' or insurance reserve system which has been the accepted practice of industrial concerns and is being written for the duration of the emergency."

U. S. Steel Leads

The new insurance, it was understood, would not be given for destruction, interruption of operations or loss of time by personnel as a result of enemy aerial bombings, bombardments or invasions.

The United States Steel Corporation announced yesterday it had taken the billion-dollar insurance on its plants and equipment, other than railroad and steamship company subsidiaries, with the Factory Insurance Association, a group of the Nation's largest insurance companies.

This insurance, the largest in the history of American industry, according to dealers, will in effect be of nominal amount since there will be specific limits on specific plants.

Congress Plans Program

Pending in Congress now is a billion-dollar war insurance program covering civilian property losses resulting from enemy attack.

Shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor the War Insurance Corporation was allotted a sum by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to cover civilian property losses from enemy action but soon afterwards Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and Federal Loan Administrator, sought to have this fund increased to a billion dollars.

Change in Land Bank System Is Opposed

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Opposition to a Senate bill authorizing reorganization of the Federal Land Bank system because "it would be harmful to the farmers of the Nation" was heard yesterday by a Senate Banking and Currency Subcommittee.

William I. Myers, professor of farm finance at Cornell University, told the committee that the bill was bad and would, in the long run, hurt farmers. He listed the aspects of the bill he opposes:

1. The great reduction in farm ownership would weaken and ultimately destroy the cooperative basis of the Federal Land Bank system and substitute socialized credit for cooperative credit.

2. Centralization of authority in the Farm Credit Administration would destroy the responsibility of National Farm Loan Associations and Federal Land Banks and make them mere branch offices of a Government credit system.

3. The provisions for mandatory refinancing of heavily indebted farmers are unnecessary and unwise and should be eliminated.

4. While temporary interest subsidies are justified in periods of severe stress, the guarantee of a very low interest rate on new loans made before 1946 would tend to promote speculation on farms.

5. There is no real justification for unnecessary increases in the burdens of the Treasury in view of the enormous strain on national credit for the successful prosecution of the war.

Hearings on the bill which would authorize a simplification of the operation of the Federal Land Bank system after reorganization of the Government agency, opened yesterday with Myers as the only witness.

While criticizing many of the features of the proposed bill, Myers also offered suggestions for improving the land bank system.

He declared that "this is not the time, if there ever was a time, for experimenting with credit agencies that have demonstrated their soundness and ability to serve agriculture.

"The present basic structure should be maintained and amendments should be confined to those that will increase the effectiveness of the land bank system without prejudice to the national interest."

He called for continuation of the present existing form of organization with the present farm ownership represented by capital stock and a strengthening of the financial conditions and operations of the farm loan associations.

Rubber-Tired Tractor Curb Is Ordered

The War Production Board yesterday prohibited production of farm tractors requiring rubber tires after May 1 and ordered manufacturers to change over as promptly as possible to steel-wheel equipment.

Effective immediately, tractor manufacturers must reduce their output of rubber-tired vehicles 45 per cent below the average monthly production in January and February. In April, production must be cut 60 per cent.

Reasons Explained for Buying Defense Bonds From Earnings and Not From Saving Accounts

Money experts in both the private banks and the Government advise against drawing small savings out of the bank to buy United States defense bonds.

Instead, if you want to help the Government, buy defense bonds with money from your weekly pay envelope that otherwise you might spend for something you do not necessarily need.

Here is the reasoning behind this by men who know money and finance:

Suppose you go to your bank and draw out your small savings of $50 to $500 and invest it in defense bonds.

When you do that the bank has to give you $50 to $500 of its cash.

If enough people go to banks and draw out cash to buy defense bonds, the bank gets light on cash.

So it sells some of its investments, usually short-term Government issues, to replenish its cash pile.

Suppose you and a number of other people with the same idea draw down one million dollars of the ready cash in a bank to buy defense bonds.

The bank, to provide itself with additional cash for working purposes, may have to sell one million dollars of its investments.

The securities a bank usually sells to replenish its cash supplies are short-term Government issues.

So the bank sells one million dollars of its Governments.

You and the other people who drew out money to buy defense bonds, if you bought the "E" discount bonds, now own one million dollars' worth of Government securities upon which the Government pays you 2.9 per cent compound interest.

That is the rate of interest on the "E" bonds—typical of which is the discount bond you buy now for $18.75 and which grows to the value of $25 in ten years.

The bank, to raise cash, has probably sold short-term Government issues bearing interest rates far under 2.9 per cent.

Very likely the bank liquidated short-term Treasury 90-day bills it was holding, which bear an infinitesimal one-fourth of one per cent interest.

Or the bank may have sold one-year Treasury notes, which bear one per cent interest and currently, selling at premiums, yield a little under one-third of one per cent interest.

Or, it may have sold Treasury notes due, say, in March 1946, which bear only one per cent interest.

Even most longer-term Government bonds currently have yields smaller than the series "E" 2.9 per cent interest rate.

In other words, the Government is paying you 2.9 per cent interest for money for which, when it was in the bank, was invested in securities on which it was paying from one-fourth of one per cent to around one per cent interest.

The hire of your money, therefore, is costing the Government twice or more the amount of interest it paid on securities in which the bank had the money invested.

If you have large sums of idle cash seeking investment, buy defense bonds with it, but leave your little cash balance in the bank where it will be handy for emergencies.

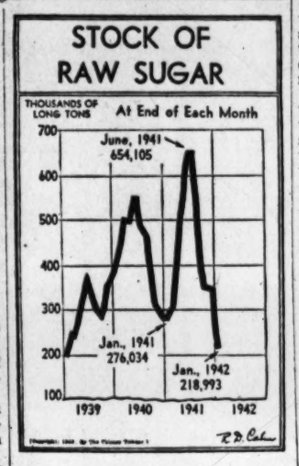
Now, on the other hand, the Government welcomes the money you invest from your pay envelope that otherwise you might spend for something you do not necessarily need.

In the first place, your cash invested in defense bonds adds to the money reservoir of the Government.

In the second place, by buying defense bonds instead of spending the money for goods on store shelves you do not necessarily need, you are postponing the day when the giant flood of free money flowing from war production payrolls will begin bidding up civilian goods, many of which are sure to eventually become scarcer because such a large number of peace-time plants are converting to war goods production.

With the Government visualizing a steadily increasing need for funds as the war production program expands, Treasury officials have been pleased with the way the public has been purchasing defense bonds.

Sales of the three series of defense bonds—"E," "F," and "G"—in November, 1941, totaled 234 million dollars. In December they were 529 million dollars. In January of this year they rose to $1,060,000,000 as individuals, banks and trust funds with large sums to invest, took their allowable quotas. A single individual, it should be recalled, can buy only $5000 worth of the series "E" bonds each year, and but $50,000 worth of the "F" and "G" bonds. Last month sales totaled 703 million dollars.



Light Selling Drives Stocks To New Lows

By the Associated Press

New York, March 10.—Selling activities dominated the stock market's course today and various industrial issues fell to new lows for the last year and longer.

Offerings of the depressed shares were not unusually large, but absorption was notably poor. A scattering of coppers, aircrafts and specialties managed to emerge with minor gains.

The market again was affected by the gloomy tone of war reports from the southwest Pacific and it also was shadowed by the specter of rising taxes, which speculative sources interpreted as a promise of considerable dividend cutting in the months ahead.

Focusing attention on the tax situation was an announcement by the National Association of Manufacturers just before the market's close that this organization favored "taxation to the limit—leaving only enough for survival."

Wall Street read and solemnly pondered this drastic recommendation of the N. A. M., which would apply to "all income over and above that needed to keep our business structure alive and intact."

On the day the Associated Press composite of 60 stocks recorded a net decline of .2 of a point to 35.0, the lowest level since March 31, 1938. Transactions totaled 334,000 shares, compared with 308,950 the previous day.

Closing fractions to as much as 3½ points lower and in new low ground for an extended time were Dupont, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Sears Roebuck, Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Co., and Liggett & Myers "B." Philip Morris dropped 5¼.

Moderate losers included United States Steel, Bethlehem and General Motors. Slightly ahead at the finish were Chrysler, United Aircraft, Sperry, Kennecott and Anaconda. Rails were narrow.

Fractionally better in a somewhat heavy Curb were American Light & Traction and Cities Service. Lower marks were posted for Glen Alden Coal, Aluminum of America and Humble Oil. Transfers here were about 70,000 shares, against 68,000 yesterday.

RATIONING AND RESTRICTIONS ARE HERE!

If new automobiles, spare tires and accessories are scarce now, what will their replacement costs be next year? Protect your car now against fire and theft! Protect against collision! No one is immune from these risks!

Table Tennis Stars Invade For Tourney

The Eastern Table Tennis Championships, scheduled to start at the Columbia courts Saturday at 3 o'clock, continue to draw entries from top-flight paddlers from all sections of the Atlantic Seaboard.

Besides the attraction to be offered in the presence of Lou Pagliaro, the little Italian-American defending champion, the list to date reads like a "Who's Who" of paddle champions with no less than eight of the first ten ranking players certain to be around the green tables when the whistle sounds for play to commence. Ed Pinner, Charles Schmidt, Tibor Hazi—currently teaching the game at the Columbia courts—Sol Schiff, Les Lowry and Lazslo Bellak will be on hand to try and overthrow King Paggy.

Star Entries Received

Entries received yesterday were from "Ham" Canning, Pennsylvania State champion; Paul Capelle and Louis Timms, occupying the same status, respectively, in Delaware and West Virginia. Another interesting entrant is Abbott Nelson, formerly intercollegiate king, who will team up with Ham Canning in the doubles.

Present indications point to a more representative event this year than last, and should expected entries show up as promised, the table tennis fans of metropolitan Washington are in for a real treat.

The tournament gets underway Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, the finals to be fought out, starting at 2 Sunday and resuming at 8 that night. Beryl R. English, owner of the Columbia Courts, advises the event appears to be a sellout, but that desirable seats are still available. Telephonic reservations are aceptable.

Fairfax Plays Bethesda in Girls' Finals

Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Fairfax High girl cagers battled their way into the finals of their section of the metropolitan scholastic championships last night at Roosevelt downing St. Cecelia and Bowie, respectively.

Bethesda, paced by Mildred Stadtler, who scored 19 points, took down an easy 38-14 triumph in the opener. In the nightcap Fairfax downed the Prince Georges County champions, 14-12, after leading by a narrow margin most of the way.

An unexpectedly large crowd turned up for the tournament semi-finals. The date for the final has not yet been set.

Jewels Strengthen Line-up for Game With Bears Here

When the powerful big city quintet, the New York Jewels, clash with Washington's undefeated Lichtman Bears, local colored pro cagers, this Sunday at Turner's Arena the visitors will boast an even stronger line-up than the one which has smashed all opposition this season.

An announcement from the Jewels' headquarters reveals that the ink is hardly dry on the signatures of Seton Hall's John Ruthenberg and Bob Holm, who just signed with the pro basketeers following their final college game. This marks the conclusion of four years court work for both of these cagers during which time they played a major part in winning 74 out of the 80 games played by Seton Hall.

If the visiting quintet don't stop the sharpshooting locals, the Bears will lhave reached a new high of 19 consecutive victories.

Wallace Wade Seeks Active Army Service

Durham, N. C., March 10 (AP).—Wallace Wade, director of athletics and head football coach at Duke University, said today he had applied for active Army service in a combat capacity, but, so far as he knows, no action has been taken upon his offer to serve.

Maryland U. Athletes Turn to Spring Sports

Prospects for Baseball, Lacrosse, Track And Tennis Brighter Than in 1941

With the winter sports season ended, University of Maryland athletes are concentrating on baseball, lacrosse, track and tennis.

Hoping for a better baseball record than last year when they won 7 of 25 games, the Terps are counting on a number of veterans, plus several likely looking newcomers.

Experienced men are Pitchers Max Hunt, Bob Smith and Lefty Fulton; Catcer Kenny Bransdorf; Infielders Mearle Duvall, Roscoe Whipp and Joe Hoopengardner, and Outfielders Dan Boothe and Jim Wharton.

Among the outstanding rookies on the squad of 25 are Jack Brenner, catcher; Ernie Travis, infielders, and Hartley Crist and Lloyd Roberts pitchers.

Veteran attack men returning are Ray Grelecki, Milt Vandenberg, Landis Hill and Bill McGregor. The latter as handicapped last year by a leg injury that benched him most of the season.

Up from the 1941 freshmen are Barnett Broughton, goalie; Bill Taylor, Jack Dittmar and Elwood Armacost, defense, and Bill Tarbert and Dave and Bob Frey, attack. Also ready is Bob Stockbridge, midfielder, who transferred from Washington College and had to wait a year before he became eligible to play for Maryland.

The track squad has these outstanding leftovers: Louis Chaco, sprinter; Bob Montgomery, 220 and 440; Randall Cronin, 440 and 880; Bob Condon, half-mile; Stanley Kihn, 2-miler; Jack Gilmore, Southern Conference outdoor high-jump champion; Luther Conrad, shot and discus, and Bill Tilley, broad jumper.

Rookies include Tiny Horn, shot and discus; Bob James, hurdles and javelin; Carlos Englar, pole vaulter, and Howard Gugel and Pat Carolan, sprinters.

Doyle Royal, Harry Baugher, Hyman Berg, Elwood Bates and Slater Clarke, from the 1941 tennis team, will be bolstered by talent up from the freshman squad, plus Dewitt Smith, who was out of school for a time.

Garden Cage Bid Accepted By Creighton

By the Associated Press

New York, March 10.—Creighton, cochampions with the Oklahoma Aggies of the Missouri Valley, today accepted an invitation to compete in the Metropolitan Invitation Basketball Tournament opening at Madison Square Garden, March 17.

The addition of Creighton, with a record of 17 wins and 4 defeats, brought to four the number of teams selected and leaves the same number of open spots, at least two of which are slated to go to New York schools. West Texas, Toledo and Rhode Island State already have accepted invitations.

Only two brackets remained to be filled when Long Island University and Western Kentucky State sent in their acceptances later in the day. Long Island, last year's tournament winner, had a season record of 25 victories and 2 defeats, while the Kentucky team, winner of the S. I. A. A. title for six straight years, chalked up 26 wins as against 3 setbacks.

Gaithersburg Nine Meets

On the Line . . .

on Joe for holding out, are wrong. They're probably well-meaning, but they're wrong.

If there's a $50,000 ball player left in baseball today, it's DiMaggio. He'll personally draw two or three times that amount of money, and, his day in and day out hitting and fielding will make the Yankees a much more powerful team and better attraction. He should get his fair cut of the business he creates. The increasingly mentioned fact that soldiers are getting $21 a month doesn't enter into it, though it is creeping into more and more letters.

Our sympathies usually lie with the baseball laborer, though, we suppose, if we had a piece of a ball club we'd probably be trying to remind the boys of their errors instead of their hits, just at this time. Being neither player nor owner, we're just confused—as is nearly everyone else. Trying to arrive at the actual financial worth of a ball player has always been a tricky problem. Trying to do it in these days, when a fair chuck of the public regards their salary demands as a personal affront to the boys in khaki, is impossible.

Fishing with JACK BELL

For the first time since the 1940 floods, many streams in western North Carolina's Mount Mitchell and Daniel Boone wildlife areas will be open this season. The angler who wishes solitude, surrounded by beautiful and rugged country, should give North Carolina a whirl.

JACK BELL

The State expects to play host to the usual number of out of State anglers this year despite the war and shortage of rubber. It is anxious to keep every avenue open during the season, making every effort to provide fast bus service from railway stations, wherever possible, to transport the angler to the better fishing centers.

The Davidson River, one of the best known trout streams in the Pisgah National Forest, opens April 20 through to August 31. Previously, fishing in the Davidson was permitted only on specified dates during the season.

Trouting in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park will extend from May 16 until August 31, and the season for small-mouth bass in park streams from June 16 through to August 31. Creel limits and the regulation permitting only the use of artificial bait remains unchanged.

Special regulations also will prevail in the Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests, which are under the cooperative jurisdiction of Federal and State game protectors.

Trouting in the streams of the State is expected to be excellent during the coming season. Streams there were not effected by the drought like streams in States to the north. The carry-over has been reported very good and with the heavy stocking, anglers should find fishing, worthy of the effort and long trip to the State.

The Fish and Wildlife Service is authority for this one: An Alaskan Indian shot and killed another Indian. Taken to Anchorage for trial, he stated he had mistaken his victim for a moose. The manslaughter charge was not pressed, but the Indian was given a 90-day sentence for hunting moose out of season.

Returning Sunday evening from a crow shoot near Glenbourne, Md., we became attracted by a most brilliant red hunting cap, matching fuzzy ear muffs and all, in the car ahead of us. Passing by we found the occupants of the car to be Lou Gramlick, Dudley Canter, and Benny Dement, all of Washington. This trio was on its way home from a rather successful day's fishing on the Severn River above Herald Harbor.

Benny said he'd heard that pike go for red, so he wore his new cap. They had the proof that pike do go for red, for they had seven of the nicest pike we've seen since late in October. They found pike fishing very much better than yellow perch. Can't be such a bad idea wearing a brilliant red chapeau.

The combined annual conference of the American Wildlife Institute, the National Wildlife Federation and the Outdoor Writers of America will be held at Toronto, Ontario, as originally planned on April 8, 9, and 10. For some time the advisability of calling off or transferring the conference to another point, as a result of our entry into the war, had been considered. Now, however, definite word from J. Paul Miller, Secretary of the American Wildlife Institute, ends the uncertainty.

Tonight at 8 o'clock the regular monthly meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League will be held in the Willard Hotel.

Mr. F. W. Kittrell, secretary and chief engineer of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, will be the guest speaker for the evening. He will discuss pollution of the Potomac, a subject of interest to every Waltonian. Nonmembers interested, are invited to attend, and hear Mr. Kittrell.

Field Trials Crown Taken By Luminary

By the Associated Press

Grand Junction, Tenn., March 10. Luminary, a 5-year-old black-and-white pointer from the kennels of A. G. C. Sage, of New York, won the National Field Trials championship here today with a smashing performance in a second series runoff.

Running in a 20-minute heat under ideal conditions, the statuesque hunter, fresh from a victory in the National Free-for-All at Shuqualak, Miss., turned in three perfectly handled bevy finds and ranged the tortuous course with precision. He was on game a fourth time when ordered up by the judges.

Bowling Results . . .

Even though Woodmont No. 2 in the Women's Country Club League at Silver Spring dropped all three tilts to Kenwood No. 2, Betsy Jago, of the losers, posted individual highs of 144-327 and Teammate Ellen Butler had a near high of 317. Ive McEntee's 324 and Trudy Paul's 316 led Kenwood No. 1 to a sweep over Congressional No. 1, and Kenwood No. 3 whitewashed Argyle. Woodmont No. 2 had high set of 1449.

Warren Johnson, Miller Builders, had individual highs of 167-410 in the Clarendon Men's Major League but his quintet dropped two to Manning's Service. Tom Riviere's 402 and Sam DeBinder's 400 for Sun Krisp Products won a sweep over Hub Men's Shop and team honors as well after a 647 game and 1836 set. The second-place American Drug boys cut the leaders, McGonegal Plumbers, down to a margin of four games by winning a pair, while both A. H. Cohen and Arlington County Dairy whitewashed their opponents.

A 150-game by Jackie Polaski, Monroe Pharmacy, and a 359 set by Vivian Nolan, Fox Barbers, led the Clarendon Ladies' Major with the latter's team rolling high set of 1567, the team game honors going to Arlington Bootery with a 549 total. Rite-Way Contractors won the only sweep of the evening, taking three from Colonial Ice Cream.

Bill Nally's 155—378 for Atonement No. 2 were the best individual efforts in the Lutheran Men's League at Arcadia. The Luther Place boys topped the teams after pinfalls of 587 and 1637.

The Maryland - District Ladies' League at Silver Spring found that "Boots" Pettit, Kopy Kats, was best pinswoman for the evening with individual highs of 150—385. Her Kopy Kats had 545 for high team game, but had to divide honors with the Beebees and Howard Hairdressers, who also rolled 545, but the former went on to additional honors with high set of 1544.

Teachers' Pay May Be Raised InMontgomery

Members of the Montgomery County (Md.) Board of Education will meet with members of the Montgomery County Teachers Association to discuss the need of pay increases for teachers.

A committee of teachers appeared before the board yesterday to urge cooperation in working out a program of salary adjustments for teachers in the face of increasing living costs. Adjustment of the teaching program to meet war needs also was discussed.

The board will be represented by Mrs. Daniel C. Walser and Julius P. Stadler. The teachers' committee includes Thomas W. Pyle, E. M. Douglass and E. Guy Jewell, president of the teachers' society.

The board authorized application for a grant for additional classrooms at the Westbrook School. The board expressed the opinion that the county properly comes under provisions of recent Congressional acts authorizing money for public services in defense areas.

The board expressed interest in the plan proposed by several parent-teacher associations for supervised programs for elementary children during the summer at local expense. The board urged schools to work with P.-T. A. groups in formulating plans for summer programs, including possible academic classes for high school students at a low tuition cost.

The board received bids on several school buses and appointed Julius Stadler, F. K. Metzger and J. Upton Leaman to analyze the bids.

Mark Whitney's Funeral Services Set Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mark Ladd Whitney, chief examiner of the classification division, United States Patent Office, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 3387 Stuyvesant Place Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

WHITNEY

Mr. Whitney, who died in Richmond, Va., last Monday, at the age of 68, was born in Essex, Vt. He was a graduate of Phillips Andover Academy, Cornell University and Albany Law School of Union College. He entered the service of the Patent Office as fourth assistant examiner in 1910 and resigned in 1927. The following year he returned to the office and in 1938 became examiner of classifications. He was transferred to Richmond a month ago and had been ill only a few days.

Mr. Whitney leaves his wife, Mrs. Cora Isabelle Whitney; one son, Robert Frost Whitney, of the Washington staff of the New York Times; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Whitney Bowman; a sister, Miss Anice Ladd Whitney, and a brother, Harry Ladd Whitney, of New York City.

Robert Anderson, D. C. Contractor, Dies in Florida

Robert E. Anderson, 58, Washington plumbing and heating contractor, died yesterday at Miami Beach, Fla., where he had gone ten days ago to recuperate from a serious illness.

Mr. Anderson, who resided at 640 A Street Northeast, was well known in Washington business circles. He was also active in the Masonic order as a member of the Naval Lodge here. Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Nellie Anderson, and two daughters, Misses Nellie and Grace, both of Washington.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Mirman Fights Harris on Arena Program Monday

Gus Mirman, hard-hitting former Columbus University fighter, has been booked for a six-rounder on next Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena. The headliners are Jabbo Kenner, the No. 1 District heavyweight, and "Big Joe" Carilli, New Haven slugger, who clash in an eight-rounder.

Mirman's opponent in his second comeback match will be Otis Harris, Washington light-heavyweight, who is well known in Middle Atlantic fight circles.

The erstwhile Columbus battler started his comeback a few weeks ago at the Arena by pounding out a four-round decision over "Powerhouse" Johnson. Mirman, who also was a star with the Jewish Community Center boxing team some years ago, floored Johnson a number of times with some devestating rights and lefts.

Postlude

U. of Dubuque Choir Heard In Capital

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Baptist Memorial Church presents University of Dubuque Choir on Tuesday night. Director: Noel J. Logan. Program of religious compositions by Bach, Balakirev, Shvedov, Arens, Wesley, Monk, Stainer, Burleigh, Noble and Christiansen.

Dr. Noel J. Logan, who has been training undergraduate students at the University of Dubuque in choral singing a cappella for many years, conducted the 1942 choir in an enjoyable concert last evening in National Baptist Memorial Church. The touring group of young men and women, 46 in number, proved that they have been attentive to their instruction. Their precision in attack, accuracy of intonation in contrapuntal passages and balance of dynamics reflected credit upon their director, and the freshness of their voices was a pleasurable part of their performance.

BROWN

The program began with Bach's motet for double chorus, "Blessing, Glory and Wisdom," which was voiced excellently and paced carefully in the changes of tempo. The fugue on "Hallelujah, Amen" was executed with neat clarity, and the concluding chorale had a firm and resonant tone. The motet was followed by two infrequently heard pieces of Russian liturgy—Balakirev's "In the Lord Doth my Soul Rejoice" and Shvedov's "It Is a Good Thing to Give Thanks"—and by Bach's "Come, Soothing Death" and Ludolph Arens' "Praise the Lord."

A group of hymns was appropriately opened with "The Church's One Foundation" by Samuel Wesley the elder, who leads all hymnwriters with a record of more than 6000. William Henry Monk was represented by "Abide With Me," Sir John Stainer by "God So Loved the World," and Tertius Noble by "Go to Dark Gethsemane." The concert closed with F. Melius Christiansen's four-movement choral suite, "Celestial Spring," and his arrangement of the crusaders' hymn, "Beautiful Savior."

Arts Club of Washington presents Felian Garzia in a piano recital Tuesday night. Programs of compositions by Scarlatti, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Debussy, Liszt and Saint-Saens.

No season at the Arts Club would be complete without a piano recital by Felian Garzia, who played last evening for his fellow members and their guests with his accustomed union of technical competence and poetic canorousness. His artistic temperament always controls his digital ability, and his readings are imbued with emotional hues which are invariably sincere and never histrionic. His mastery of the keyboard is not obtruded, but restrained by a sensitive feeling for nuance.

His program was kept within the frame of romanticism, for the impressionism of his beloved Deoussy is but one division of the great romantic movement. He began with two sonatinas by Domenico Scarlatti, one in A major and the D minor which goes by the name of "Pastorale," and then proceeded to Mendelssohn, whose etude in B flat minor and prelude in B minor were revived a genuine poesy.

A Chopin group contained the E minor nocturne, the D minor prelude and the G minor ballade, while Debussy was represented by "Voiles," "Minstrels" and "Jardins sous la Pluie." The concluding numbers were Liszt's "Waldesrauschen" and Saint-Saens' "Etude on forme de valse."

When recalled for an extra number, Mr. Garzia seated himself at the instrument, placed his hands in position on the keyboard and sat motionless until from behind a screen came the sound of the opening bars of Chopin's fantaisie-impromptu. This surprise to his auditors was a recording which he had made a few hours before in his studio.

Local C.I.O. Backs Labor-Employer Victory Boards

Support of Donald Nelson's and Philip Murray's proposals for joint labor-management victory production committees was urged yesterday by local C. I. O. through Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District Industrial Union ouncil.

Katz sent special delivery letters to all major affiliates engaged in war production urging support of the program.

Murray, national C. I. O. president, urged utmost energy to achieve maximum production of war materials in the shortest time possible so that this country will be able to develop an early offensive against the Axis powers.

Murray said: "Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, has called management and labor to establish joint production committees in all plants through the Nation working on war orders. This is essential in order to permit our country to furnish immediately the necessary assistance to our Allies for an early offensive against the Axis powers."

Jackson Elliott, Veteran Capital Newsman, Dies

Jackson S. Elliott, 66, veteran Washington newspaperman and former assistant general manager of the Associated Press, died unexpectedly at his winter home in Palm Springs, Calif., last night.

Mr. Elliott was walking with his wife, Mrs. Frances Savage Elliott, in the garden when he was stricken with a heart attack.

Born in LaSalle, Ill., Mr. Elliott started newspaper work on the Sioux City (Iowa) Journal in 1894, and after working with various Iowa papers for eight years, came to Washington, where he worked as a reporter for two years. He joined the staff of the Associated Press in 1903 and became manager of its Congress staff in 1909. He later was made head of the Washington bureau and in 1912 became superintendent of the Eastern division with headquarters in New York.

He was elected assistant secretary of the Associated Press in 1935 and reelected to that office in 1937.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Elliott is survived by a son, Jackson S. Elliott, 1406 Newton Street Northeast, correspondent for the International News Service, and a daughter, Mrs. Jules A. Morris, of Wilmington, Del.

Morse Ordered To Unravel Cargo Tie-Up

Wayne L. Morse, dean of the Oregon University Law School and public member of the War Labor Board, will soon be appointed chairman of a board to remedy what have been described as chaotic and wasteful conditions in the cargo loading of West Coast freighters, it was learned yesterday.

Morse will be given powers by the War Shipping Administration to recommend methods and procedures relating to the work of longshoremen in Pacific ports. He will serve as chairman of a three-man board, with one representative each of the employers and employes involved.

Creation of the board follows representations of both management and unions on the Pacific waterfront that haphazard and excessively slow loading of freighters had been the rule since Pearl Harbor.

The action is expected to be followed by creation of a similar body to control loading operations in Atlantic ports. For this reason, the establishment of the Morse committee was bitterly opposed before War Shipping Administration officials by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the A. F. of L., International Longshoremen's Association on the East Coast.

D. C. Man Kills Self With Gun in Home

Floyd W. White, 34, shot and killed himself with a shotgun at his home, 1413 Monroe Street Northwest, police reported last night. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, pronounced the death a suicide.

White's wife, Lillian, and an 8-year-old daughter were in the house when the shooting occurred, police said.

Chorus girls dumb? Not the latter day crop, says Jean Tennyson, lovely soprano star of "Great Moments in Music" heard over WJSV Wednesday nights.

The statuesque blonde, a former "Vanities" star, has kept a close tab on the advancement of her musical stage contemporaries while she herself soared on to fame in grand opera.

When still in her teens, Jean sang her way into prima donna roles in musical comedy, whose footlights showed her the way to a more substantial success. And while she was using "Adrienne" and Earl Carroll's "Vanities" as her steppingstones to the Chicago Civic Opera and European operatic triumphs, others of her unusual cast were making similar strides.

Miss Tennyson can name a lot of them. Out of musical comedy have risen such notables as Grace Moore, once of "Hitchy Koo" and the "Music Box Revue," and Jeanette MacDonald who was in "Irene," before Hollywood "discovered" her. Ann Sothern was a one-time chorine in "Hit the Deck," and Joan Crawford made her debut in the chorus of a musical comedy road company in Springfield, Mo.

The "Great Moments in Music" singer recalls that Barbara Stanwyck at 15 wore beads and rode an elephant in a Ziegfeld chorus. And at the same age, Paulette Goddard was one of the ensemble in "Rio Rita."

Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Virginia Bruce—the soprano says she could keep naming them off till her next broadcast time.

Contract Bridge

One of the names which will go down in the annals of cards is that of Ely Culbertson, who did so much to make contract bridge popular. Today's deal, taken from the historic Culbertson-Lenz match, was played at a six-diamond contract by Waldemar Von Zedtwitz, Ely's partner for most of the play. The defenders were Sidney Lenz and Oswald Jacoby. Declarer, sitting East, made his slam by end playing South.

The bidding:

Opening lead: ♡ 10.

South opened the heart ten; small was played from dummy; North put on the queen, indicating a singleton, and declarer won with the king. He saw that he could not play two rounds of spades and then ruff a third spade, as this would permit a second heart lead which would be fatal. He had brilliantly deduced that Jacoby held the spade king from the lead of the heart ten, which indicated the psychic bidder hoped to gain the lead early so as to lead another heart for his partner to ruff.

Von Zedtwitz decided he must end-play South to make six-odd. After winning the opening lead, he cashed his singleton club king, drew the opponents' trumps and discarded a spade on dummy's ace of clubs. He then ruffed a club in his hand, re-entered dummy to cash the ace, jack of hearts, and trumped another club in the closed hand.

At this point the declarer held queen, small of spades and a low heart; South had the king and a low spade and the high heart; ace, small of spades and a low heart were on the board. Declarer played the heart from his hand and the defense was unable to take more than one trick. South won a heart trick but was forced to return a spade. He chose the small spade which declarer let ride around to his queen, and the ace in dummy took the last trick for the slam. The lead of the spade king by South would, of course, be taken by West's ace and East's queen then cashed.

Gas Light Stock Buyers Misled, Hankin Says

Charges that the purchasers of Washington Gas Light Co. convertible preferred stock had been "misled" were made yesterday by Public Utilities Commissioner Gregory Hankin.

Hankin's charge climaxed a stormy debate betwen the PUC and gas company officials over a petition for authorization of 90,000 additional shares of preferred stock.

The question of the conversion of 60,000 shares of preferred stock, issued under a 1936 authorization, for 180,000 shares of common stock was brought up by Hankin in demanding assurance of a long-range financing plan before any new authorization might be granted.

"Investors Misled"

"The commission must determine to what extent the investors are being misled," said Hankin. "They were misled in the sale of the convertible stocks. They were promised that each share of preferred stock could be converted into three shares of common stock. But they were not warned that the three shares of common stock were worth only $60, while the single share of preferred stock is worth $100."

E. Bennett Prettyman, company counsel, said the stocks had not been converted because the market listings of the common stock had not made it advisable. "We can't promise anything about the conversion because we cannot control the market," he said. "And the PUC would be the first to be after us if we tried to do so."

"We're miles apart in morality," replied Hankin. "If you had told your investors that, you could never have sold a single share of convertible stock."

Two-Hour Argument

The two-hour argument centered principally on two points: Whether the validity of the stockholders agreement to the additional capitalization would be affected by acceptance of the PUC's counter-suggestion for an authorization of only the portion of the 90,000 shares that would be issued immediately; and whether the PUC could demand the same statement of conditions for the authorization as for the issuance of the stock.

Prettyman pleaded that the need of the company to keep up with the expansion of Washington is so desperate that "please won't the Commission not tie our hands so completely?"

Rebuking Prettyman for trying to argue a utilities case by an appeal to the Commissioners' emotions, Hankin said that by statute the Commission was bound to approve authorization of the gas company's capitalization only "in the public interest;" and that this could not be determined without more specific data on the kind and amount of shares to be sold.

Suggestion By Flanagan

PUC Member James H. Flanagan suggested that the petitions for the authorization and issuance of stock be made together, suggesting that this was the intent of the governing statute.

Prettyman pointed out that it would be difficult to get any market data on unathorized stock. He requested again that the PUC not "get tied up in a lot of legal questions" during this emergency, but allow an unspecified authorization, as it had always done in the past.

"I am not at all happy about things that have always been done by the commission in the past," snapped Hankin.

Churches Urged to Pay More Heed to Welfare Problems

TEA followed annual meeting of Washington Federation of Churches' social welfare committee at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Frances Dysinger, of the social workers' league, pours for (from left) the Rev. Dr. John J. Rustin, federation vice president and host pastor; Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director, Washington Housing Association, and the Rev. Frances W. McPeek, director of the federation's social welfare unit

Increased "church-awareness" to housing, recreation, welfare and other problems was urged yesterday by speakers at the annual meeting of the Federation of Churches social welfare department. It was held at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. The Rev. Francis W. McPeek is department director.

"There are cents and dollars as well as sympathy and understanding involved in the picture," said Conrad Van Hyning, director of the Board of Public Welfare, in a message stressing his department's three functions—public assistance, child welfare and penal work.

On the bright side of the welfare picture, he pointed out that a deficiency appropriations bill recently passed by Congress would provide badly needed improvements to the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains.

Among other things, the bill earmarked $48,000 for repairs and alterations at the home; $17,000 for new furniture, and a 125% increase in the clothing allotment. It also provided for an increase in the Welfare Board's staff from 71 to 190 employes. Lack of funds prevents providing much-needed psychiatric work in many local institutions aided by the Welfare Board, he said.

Earlier in the program, Hugo Wolters, executive director of the recreation services of the Metropolitan Area of Civilian Defense, called upon the churches to expand use of their spiritual and material facilities to meet the needs of Washington's population influx.

Pointing out that almost 50 per cent of the total outdoor recreation space here has been withdrawn for military use, Wolters said that "every available place and every available leader must be utilized in order to develop a wholesome program, and churches, without a doubt, provide the greatest potential in both facilities and leadership."

Following Wolters' remarks, the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, federation vice president and presiding officer at the meeting, reminded the speaker that many Washington churches already are conducting programs to meet the needs of defense workers and soldiers.

(The federation's defense commission announced last Saturday that Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, of which Dr. Rustin is pastor; All Souls' Unitarian Church and Calvary Baptist Church are planning to establish drop-in centers for defense workers in overcrowded rooming-house areas, such centers to be open every day and evening.)

"It is a sorry thought to some of us that it is not the church that is leading in social work activities," declared Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association.

"People who see the need, believe something should be done about it, find a way to do it, and then do it, are the workers in the field. Discouraged by the sterility of the Church they have not come to the Church for assistance. They have unconsciously or consciously taken the words of the great teacher literally, 'unto the least of these my brethren,'" she said.

Other speakers were Dr. James G. Cumming, of the District Health Office, who read a paper on health by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, who was ill; Mrs. Frank Linzel, chairman of the emergency committee on Child Welfare of Civilian Defense, and George F. Goodman, director of the Washington Urban League. Church Social Workers' League members served tea after the sessions.

Builder Lands in Hospital As Bitter Wage Trial Ends

Tense, bitterly contested hearings on building trades wages ended yesterday as Willy Arnheim, head of the Laborers District Council, testified that lowered wage rates would "handicap" 700 union-shop contractors in the District and "disturb" union workmen, reducing their efficiency.

The hearings became so tense at one point that Glenn Lee, associate in the building firm of Banks & Lee, left the hearing room on the third floor of the Department of Labor and took an elevator to the first floor where he became dizzy and fell down, injuring his face. He was taken by ambulance to Emergency Hospital.

Hospital officials said his condition was good at 7 p. m. last night and said he would be sent home. Lee, who is 48, lives at Monticello Court, Alexandria, Va.

Defense Housing Affecting

The hearing was called under th Davis Bacon Act to determine "prevailing wages" on residential construction in this area as a preliminary to start of work on new defense housing locally. Union leaders associated with the A. F. of L. Building Trades Council contended yesterday that the high wage rate paid to members of their unions was prevailing.

James C. Wilkes, attorney for the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, endeavored to prove that considerably lower rates were prevailing, either the rate paid to nonunion workmen or to union workmen belonging to A. F. of L. unions not affiliated with the building trades council.

John Locher, secretary of the Building Trades Council, testified that union labor worked on $41,616,471 worth of residential construction during 1941 and thus far in 1942 at the set scale. This amount included 20 District of Columbia projects valued at $20,710,339, 18 Maryland projects valued at $4,020,170, and 13 Virginia projects valued at $16,885,962.

Lusk Gives Statistics

Ben Grodsky, hearing referee for the Labor Department, now has the job of sifting this data and determining what rates are "prevailing" for each building craft. Under the law, at least 30 per cent of the building must be done under a wage for it to be called "prevailing."

Rufus Lusk, statistician for the builders, testified yesterday that 89.9 per cent of residential construction in the area last year was done by private builders, 98 per cent of whom paid nonunion or low union rates. The remainder was Government construction on which high union rates was paid, he said.

The union representatives disputed Lusk's statements at every turn and endeavored to point out incompleteness and inaccuracies which, according to them, nullified his results.

For hours, Wilkes called builder after builder to testify on the wages he paid, the projects he worked on, the relative merits of union and nonunion labor, the speed with which he could operate, and the availability of building labor.

Scarcely a statement went unchallenged by unionists who produced testimony of their own as proof that the enormous amount of labor needed to build defense homes could not be supplied at non-union wages.

Surprise witnesses for the builders were two union leaders, Horace O. Kirby, of Local 841, of the Plasterers, and Charles Willis, of Local 4, of the Bricklayers. Both unionists represented unions which are not affiliated with the Building Trades Council, the so-called low-scale unions.

They testified to their scales and asserted that they had done the bulk of private residential construction work in the District recently. Willis added that the low-scale unions were originally formed to organize the "real estate field which was 90 per cent open shop until recently."

Hourly wage scales paid to Building Trades Council as presented by Locher follow: Bricklayers, $1.75, to rise to $2 on May 1; laborers, 85 cents to rise to 87½ cents May 1; carpenters, $1.62½; plasterers, $2; painters, $1.71 3/7; electrical workers, $2.

The builders contended that they paid rates which averaged 40 to 50 per cent less than the union scales.

Ownerless Goods Sale Next Tuesday

The Metropolitan Police Department will hold its next sale of lost, stolen and abandoned property, including 51 automobiles and 4 boats, at the store yard, First and H Streets Southeast, on Tuesday, March 17, at 10 a. m., it was announced yesterday.

The property will not be available for inspection until 9 a. m. the day of the sale.

Lenten Service Speaker Calls For 'Practical Christianity'

"Practical Christianity" is needed to weather today's storms, said the Rev. Robert J. Plumb at yesterday's Lenten services of Southeast churches at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

He is rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church at Third and A Streets Southeast, once the pro-Cathedral of Washington.

Mr. Plumb said that if the church's work is to go forward, its members must spend more for its work, and match the amounts being spent in secular projects. The sums we have spent for mission work in the Far East are trifles in comparison with that spent for industrialization there, he pointed out.

He was presented by the Rev. Daniel W. Justice, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, a group which is providing music for this week's Southeast programs. The Rev. Walton MacMillan, new pastor of Grace Baptist Church, will speak today at 12 noon.

The Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of Calvary Episcopal Church, New York City, yesterday continued his daily Lenten addresses at Epiphany Episcopal Church, and will speak again today at 12 noon. He is among the leaders in the Oxford group movement.

The Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and vice president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will address Federation-sponsored Lenten services today at 5 p. m. at Epiphany Church. The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church and chairman of the Federation's public meetings committee, will preside.

Lenten vespers will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Upper Room of the Columbian House, George Washington University, Twenty-first and G Streets Northwest. The Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Federation of Churches and pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, will speak.

Lenten Holy Hours will continue tonight at 8 o'clock at St. Dominic's Catholic Church, Sixth and E Streets Southwest.
